THE MARY HARKNESS HOME

For Convalescent Care

OF

THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL

In the City of New York

Several years ago Mr. William Wilson Cook willed his estate of 100 acres to the Presbyterian Hospital of New York City. It is located on the Hutchinson River Parkway exactly twenty-five miles from the Medical Center, New York City, and two and a half miles from the town of Port Chester. Amidst rolling hills it is secluded yet receives the benefits of all local improvements such as light, water, police and fire protection. Mr. Cook, a great lover of trees, cleared and landscaped his property with care. He planted over two thousand species of trees which are now standing on the property.

The Board of Managers of the Presbyterian Hospital felt that this donation would be an ideal site for a Convalescent Home, yet there was the problem of financing such an undertaking. However, Mrs. Edward S. Harkness of New York, upon hearing of the situation generously provided the funds with which to finance the project.

On October 1, 1937, the Mary Harkness Home was opened and received its first convalescent patients. Situated on the high point of the estate, the house has a lovely view of the countryside and in the distance one can see Long Island Sound and Long Island on the horizon. In the form of a letter Z, the Home is of brick Colonial design, two stories in height with a lower rear floor open to light and air, in which are the kitchens, servants' quarters and boiler room. Divided into three sections, there is the Men's Wing with twenty-five separate rooms; the Women's Wing with the same number of rooms, and connecting the two are the main living room, Patients' and Nurses' dining rooms, game room, serving room, Nurses' reception room, the Director's office and Treatment room. There is also an automatic electric elevator for those who are unable to climb stairs. The living room opens South onto a large stone terrace where patients may sit and get plenty of good country air and sunshine. The Nurses' quarters are over the living room and dining room in the center of the Z.

The fundamental purpose behind this project is the care of patients recovering from acute medical diseases and surgical cases which are not quite ready or able to return to their homes and normal methods of living. It is to help people readjust themselves after weeks and months of pain and suffering, to resume their daily tasks. The set-up is not for chronic invalids but rather for immediate rehabilitation. Since our patients come from the wards and the out patient department, it is our purpose to avoid all suggestion of hospital routine. We believe that they should be treated as guests, that this is their temporary home for a few weeks and that with plenty of good food, rest, air, sunshine and kindly help and suggestions where necessary, we will have rendered a service to the individual in the last few weeks of convalescence which no hospital in a large city could duplicate. With the exception of a rest period from 1:30 to 3:30 in the afternoon there is no herding or regimentation of patients. There is a large room set aside for Occupational Therapy which will be ready for use in a short time but it will be optional to each new arrival.

In the short time since Mary Harkness Home has been in operation and considering the few patients we have had under observation, the results have been most gratifying. Upon arrival the convalescent has usually been pale, weak and perhaps still feeling the effects of an operation. After two to four days of rest and freedom from the general hospital atmosphere, the patient begins to get color, be more lively, take an interest in those around him and to do his part in maintaining the air of general social friendliness which becomes quite genuine as each gets to know the other better. Every patient seems to be deeply grateful for the opportunity given him by this magnificent gift of Mr. Cook and Mrs. Harkness. The Presbyterian Hospital feels that the maintenance of this project is very much worth while.

Miss Marie Byron, '17, is in charge of the Home. Miss Harriet S. Simmons, '33; Miss Alice B. Cameron, '37; Miss Genevieve Wegryn '37 and Miss Eunice H. McCleery '37 are members of the nursing staff. Miss Elise Stanley of the Department of Nutrition of the Presbyterian Hospital is in charge of food service.

Visitors are always welcome and we hope many of the graduates will pay us a visit. We shall give you a cheery welcome and let you warm yourselves in front of a big wood fire in our living room or, if you are apt, we shall ask you to put another piece in a jigsaw puzzle in the game room, or munch a delicious apple, a quantity of which were the gift of Mrs. William Sloane. Maybe you would like to bring your skis or your snow shoes and perform on our rolling hills.

THE HISTORY OF NURSING SOCIETY OF NEW YORK

A meeting of the History of Nursing Society of New York was held at the Presbyterian Hospital on November ninth. This Society was formed several years ago by Miss Adelaide Nutting and a group of nurses interested in history of nursing. While Miss Nutting was Principal of the Nursing School of The Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, 1894-1907, she collected historical material which has resulted in a valuable collection for that school. Later at Teachers' College, Columbia, she started what is known as "The Adelaide Nutting Historical Collection."

Miss Young arranged for a dinner-meeting in the private dining room on Floor A of the hospital, and twenty-five members of the Society were present. The guests of honor were Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss. Place-cards were designed for the occasion by Ruth Page '37, each card representing a character from nursing history, such as Asklepios, Sairey Gamp, Florence Nightingale down to modern nurses with the Presbyterian blue and white stripes! One of the place-cards has been reproduced by Miss Page for this article.

Miss Young, Vice-President of the History of Nursing Society, presided and introduced Dr. Auchincloss. He told us that it was Miss Maxwell who first interested him in collecting Florence Nightingale's letters. He referred to a meeting with Miss Nutting, arranged by Miss Maxwell herself in the last few weeks of her life in the fall of 1928, which inspired the real beginning of our Nightingale Collection. The topic of discussion for the evening was "Memorabilia for Schools of Nursing" and we were delighted to have Dr. Auchincloss tell us about the collecting of valuable Nightingalia.

Miss Lee spoke on the value of historical collections and the assistance derived from such collections in the teaching of History of Nursing. The catalogue of the Nightingale Collection in Maxwell Hall prepared by the students last spring has been printed and copies were distributed.

The meeting adjourned to Anna C. Maxwell Hall where the memorabilia belonging to the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital were on exhibition.

Recent Additions to the Florence Nightingale Collection

A pamphlet, "St. Margaret's, Wellow" was brought to Miss Young for our collection by Dr. Albert R. Lamb. This contains a description and pictures of the burial-place of Florence Nightingale which Dr. and Mrs. Lamb visited this fall.

Five more letters and a small book were presented to Miss Young by Dr. Hugh Auchincloss at the dinner meeting of the History of Nursing Society of New York. Four of these letters were written by Florence Nightingale to Lord and Lady Monteagle. The fifth was written by Charles Reade to Mr. Scott, discussing poetry and mentioning Florence Nightingale's work in the Crimean War. The small book, "Sundown," has inserted on the inside of the cover "to Eva Jarvis, with Florence Nightingale's kind wishes for the New Year 1892."

A copy of Florence Nightingale's "Notes on Nursing," probably a first edition, and containing two letters, was given by Dr. John C. McCoy in memory of Miss Maxwell. One is a letter written by Florence Nightingale from Scutari expressing her views on the prevailing "red-tape." The second is a five page letter written by Florence Nightingale's mother, Frances Nightingale, to Colonel Jebb. She describes her daughter's work in the hospitals at the Crimea as told her "by an eye witness, a medical man."

These were given to Miss Young on January 14, 1938, by Dr. McCoy, a friend of Dr. William Darrach.

ALUMNAE MEMBERSHIP

Who are Members of the Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital?

All graduates of the School who are paying their dues annually.

How is membership forfeited?

If a graduate pays no attention to the notices about dues for three successive years, she is notified that her name will be dropped from the list of members.

How may lapsed membership be renewed?

1. By the payment of current dues. In this case the graduate will be reinstated as a member and receive the Quarterly, but this type of membership does not entitle the member to use any of the Alumnae Funds.

2. By the payment of all dues in arrears. In this case the graduate is reinstated with all privileges.

What are the dues?

1. Five dollars for all members living in District No. 13. District No. 13 includes the counties of New York, Westchester, Bronx, and Richmond.

2. Three dollars for all members not living in District No. 13.

Why do members living in District No. 13 pay higher dues?

In the By-Laws of the American Nurses' Association, provision is made for the payment of Association dues through the Alumnae Associations of the Schools of Nursing. Each Alumnae Association pays to its district, dues for each alumna living in the district in which the school is located. The Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital pays to District No. 13 three dollars for each member of its Alumnae Association living in District No. 13. From this the District pays one dollar and fifty cents to the New York State Nurses' Association. The State pays fifty cents to the American Nurses' Association and this Association pays five cents to the International Congress. Thus each member of the Alumnae Association living in District No. 13 is also a member of the following:

1. District No. 13.
2. New York State Nurses' Association.
3. American Nurses' Association.
4. International Congress.

In order to belong to The League of Nursing Education or to the American Red Cross Nursing Service, it is necessary to be a member of an alumnae association.

Why do members living outside of District No. 13 pay a lower membership fee?

It is necessary that these members join the American Nurses' Association through the district in which they are located. They will, therefore, be personally responsible for paying dues to this district. Exception: Nurses who live outside of the district but who are engaged in Nursing in District No. 13 will pay the five dollars to the Alumnae Association and will then have their dues to the district paid.

Funds Available to Members of the Alumnae Association

Pension Fund

Benefit Fund

Sick Benefit

Loan Fund

Emma Baker Kennedy Memorial Scholarship Fund

Benefit Fund

This fund, established early in the history of the Association, was soon greatly augmented by a fifty thousand dollar contribution from Mr. John S. Kennedy.

The income from this fund is used:

1. As Sick Benefit: Members who are in need of financial aid because of illness may apply. The weekly amount is fixed annually by the Executive Committee ($15.00 in 1937). A member is entitled to a maximum of 8 weeks benefit during a year. No obligation for returning this money is involved.
2. Loans: Nurses who are members of the Alumnae Association may borrow up to one hundred dollars with the understanding that this will be returned by the end of a year.

Pension Fund

This fund was established in 1909. The income from this fund provides pensions of twenty-five dollars a month for Alumnae who are proven to be in need of such a pension.

Emma Baker Kennedy Memorial Scholarship Fund for Graduate Study

This Fund provides two three hundred dollar scholarships for graduates whose applications for these Scholarships have been approved by the Scholarship Committee.

Upkeep of Funds

Like all other invested principal the interest from these funds is subject to business conditions which control income on investments. It is always important to keep adding to the principal in these funds. As the numbers of alumnae increase, the demands upon the funds increase. The Executive Committee allocates all annual contributions received through the Alumnae Distributing Fund except those restricted to a particular fund by the donor. Unexpended income from all funds is transferred to principal annually.

NOTE:

Forms to be used by graduates applying for any of the above benefits may be had from the Treasurer on request.

We have very briefly outlined the material advantages connected with membership in the Alumnae Association. Membership is a good investment against possible needs in the future. Membership is required of all who are actively engaged in nursing.

A united and active Alumnae Association is one of the greatest assets to any school. We appeal to the non-members, regardless of whether or not they are interested in the benefits of the funds outlined above, to contribute their membership to the strength of the organization.

We show a membership of seventy-three per cent. This is good. Can we be excellent rather than just good? The financial involvement for older graduates will probably interfere with complete reinstatement, but current membership has a value for the alumna and the Alumnae Association. We are sending this copy of THE QUARTERLY MAGAZINE to all lapsed members who graduated after 1929 in the hope that the small financial outlay involved for this group will make them willing to pay dues in arrears and become fully reinstated.

THE ALUMNAE DISTRIBUTING FUND IN 1937

The fourth year of the operation of the Alumnae Distributing Fund closes with a most encouraging record of success: a grand total of $2,745.97 to be disbursed to our permanent funds and interests!

The total includes a generous gift of $250.00 from Mrs. John Hartwell, one of our truly interested and understanding friends. It also includes proceeds from the Quick Reference Book amounting to $345.50. The largest individual gift from one of our graduates was $100.00 from Mrs. Dorothy Knote, '07. While substantial amounts such as these increase our total resources, we are equally interested in the number of persons contributing: 380 in 1937, which is 36 less than in 1936.

The final distribution for 1937, as recommended by the Alumnae Distributing Fund Committee and approved by the Executive Committee, appears in the following pages. In the report of the donations by classes, two items have been added: the percent of living members contributing, and the average gift.

No donation was assigned to the Endowment Fund this year, since the Alumnae Shops and the Radio Fund are increasing it regularly by such substantial amounts.

The General Fund appears for the first time as the recipient of a donation. The increase in the dues to be paid to the District and State Associations (from $2.70 to $3.00 for each resident member) has necessarily decreased the income of our Alumnae Association because the individual dues have not been raised accordingly. The donation to the General Fund is to go either into principal or income, depending upon whether or not the regular income has proven adequate to the demands made upon it. Increasing the General Fund is obviously the best possible safeguard against any necessity for raising our dues.

The class agents deserve gratitude and applause from all of us for their fine work throughout the year. They have interesting plans for the future, which will be disclosed later in the spring. It has been decided to appoint them this year for the last 25 classes only, "retiring" one agent each year as a new class graduates to assume responsibility.

The very fine record of the class of 1936 seems to justify this confidence entirely! Although their active campaign in this cause has been going on for only about three months, they have worked with a committee of which the class agent is chairman, and they lead all classes in the size of the class gift! Apparently they are going to continue as graduates at the same pace which they set as students.

CHRISTMAS DOLLS

At the Babies Hospital

At two o'clock in the night before Christmas in the year 1932 there came to the Babies Hospital a lady and a gentleman. They brought with them a most exquisite Christmas tree trimmed with small imported bisque dolls daintily dressed in pastel shades of organdie. This tree was the begining of a Christmas tradition. The dolls have been saved, redressed and replaced, and used each year on the tree in the front hall of The Babies Hospital. In the same year another doll tradition had its beginnings. Mrs. David McAlpin contributed four dozen dolls to the Christmas gifts for the children. These dolls were dressed by nurses, secretaries, and laboratory technicians of The Babies Hospital. The gift of dolls has been continued as an annual donation from Mrs. Jerome Webster in memory of her mother who started this custom. The number of friends of children and of the hospital who dress these dolls has reached far beyond the walls of The Babies Hospital. The doll dressing, as is evident in the picture, represents a great deal of work, skill and ingenuity. These dolls are presented to the little girls who are patients in the hospital on Christmas morning. The children who are well enough to come to the room in which the dolls are exhibited have made their own choices. To an adult this would be a difficult task. The child has no problem. She looks over all the dolls and in a few moments her doll presents itself and, quite content with her choice, she sees no other doll after this. As there are always more dolls than children at Christmas time, the hospital is well supplied with presents for little girl patients during the year. Convalescence after an appendectomy is so much less drab and uncomfortable for the child who has one of these beautifully dressed dolls for her very own. Realizing the great pleasure that these dolls give to little girls, one still wonders who enjoys the dolls more—the children or the grown-ups!

PERTINENT NURSING FACTS CULLED FROM CURRENT PUBLICATIONS

Statistics on Student and Graduate Nurses

[From the Bulletin published for The American Nurses' Association, The National League of Nursing Education and The National Organization for Public Health Nursing, by the Nursing information bureau of the A. N. A.]

1. More students enrolled in nursing schools in the Fall of 1937 than in the Fall of 1936.
2. However, the increase in admissions, 1937 vs. 1936, was only 1%, compared with a 5% increase, 1936 vs. 1935.
3. Nevertheless, 64% of the schools were satisfied with the number of students enrolled; 36% were not.
4. 15% of the students enrolled in 1937, have had one or more years of college work, compared with 14% in 1936.
5. And, approximately two-thirds of the students who have completed high school only, stand in the upper third of their classes.
6. Graduate staff nurses for general duty service are employed in 88% of the hospitals connected with nursing schools which replied to the questionnaire. Their number totals approximately 20,500. In 1932, nearly two-thirds of the schools did not employ even one graduate nurse for bedside nursing.
7. In 55% of these hospitals, directors of nursing services have experienced difficulty in securing qualified graduate staff nurses. In 45% they have not.

Supply and Demand for Institutional Nurses

[From the News Bulletin issued by the Nursing Bureau of Manhattan and Bronx.]

The demand for institutional nurses far exceeds the supply. As we go to press we have thirty openings for instructors, fifteen available positions for night supervisors, a number of interesting posts for nurses who are prepared and experienced in supervision. The demand for general duty nurses continues but is not as marked as it was this past summer. We continue to list opportunities for clinical laboratory and X-ray technicians, anaesthetists, physiotherapists and dietitians. Attractive positions connected with doctor's offices are available from time to time for the nurse possessing business training.

The New Nurse Practice Act for New York State

[One of the most controversial aspects of the new Nurse Practice Act for New York State has been the licensing of all who nurse for hire. Shall those who are not graduate registered nurses also be licensed under the new Nurse Practice Act? In connection with this question it seemed worth while reprinting the following editorial from the January number of the Quarterly News.]

Justin Miller, dean of the Law School of Duke University, wrote in a paper, "The Philosophy of Professional Licensure," appearing in the Proceedings of Annual Congress on Medical Education, Licensure and Hospitals, February, 1934, as follows:

"The purpose of professional licensure is to secure to society the benefits that come from the service of a highly skilled group and to protect society from those who are not highly skilled, yet profess to be, or from those who, being highly skilled, are nevertheless so unprincipled as to misuse their superior knowledge to the disadvantage of the people."

Measured by this philosophy what protection does the patient have under the present nurse practice act? It gives control and a protection of title for nearly 37,000 licensed graduate and trained nurses and trained attendants. But no control whatsoever of an unlicensed group, estimated as more than 41,000, nursing for hire in New York State.

Every other professional law in the State controls practice. The baby, school child and adult are protected by licenses. Our homes, schools and other buildings in city and town are erected after permits have been issued. The milk man, the grocer, baker and candlestick maker, theaters, movie houses, radio stations must all be licensed. If we own and drive a car, two licenses must be secured.

Newspapers, movies and magazines must all meet certain minimum standards. The undertaker must be licensed, he must even secure a burial permit for the interment.

But, now, in New York State from birth to death, the law offers less protection to the sick than to the dead because all nurses need not be licensed but all undertakers must be licensed.

The last report of the nation-wide survey of the Grading Committee, "Nursing Schools, Today and Tomorrow," clearly stated the conviction of the committee:

"It is the opinion of the Grading Committee that, for the protection of the patient, the practice of all nurses should be regulated . . . Under present conditions in many states, there is no way in which the patient or the physician can be sure that the woman who calls herself a trained nurse has in fact ever had any training in nursing, or that the practical nurse is a dependable and ethical worker. It should be possible to devise ways in which the patient could be protected from the ministrations of the unqualified nurse."

The nursing profession and an aroused public will urge the 1938 Legislature to correct the present dangerous lack of control by enacting a nursing law as safe as the other professional acts.

Salaries in the Nursing Profession

A recent publication by Dr. Harold E. Clark of the Department of Economics at Teachers College, Columbia University, is receiving wide publicity. It represents a study of the income in selected occupations in the United States from 1920 to 1936.

"The estimates given in the tables are based essentially upon a composite of every study that has been made covering incomes in these occupational fields. The primary sources were special studies by professional groups or by research agencies, income tax reports, studies of college classes and a long series of special investigations. A total of more than 4,400 different investigations have been combined to get the figures reported."*

In these tables, nursing appears between skilled trades and unskilled labor. We wish to call attention to the fact that many "practical nurses" are undoubtedly included in this study and that no consideration has been made for maintenance, as the incomes are specifically stated in dollars. According to our official estimates, maintenance amounts to $65.00 per month (room $35.00; board, $22.50; laundry, $7.50). Institutional salaries present a very different picture when this factor is considered.

It seems important to stress the necessity of interpreting such statistics correctly, lest our hope of interesting intelligent young women in the profession be defeated.

ALUMNAE PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

RURAL PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING

By Margurite Wales, '20

"Consultant in Nursing Education" at the Kellogg Foundation in Battle Creek, Michigan

When Mr. Kellogg established this Foundation he was thinking of a project that would benefit children. As his plans were formulated for the "health, happiness and well-being of children," he also opened up great possibilities for the development of new philosophies in public health nursing.

Although the program of the Foundation is national and international in scope, the program known as the "Michigan Community Health Project" is carried on entirely within the seven counties. There are over a hundred members of the staff, consisting of county directors, family health counsellors (public health nurses) and office staff. I like this new name of family health counsellor. She carries on the responsibilities of a public health nurse in the homes, but also assumes much greater responsibilities in the schools and in the development of a "community participation program" than is possible for most services. All of the counsellors are college graduates with postgraduate work in public health nursing and in education. As the Michigan school law requires only one year of college or normal school for a teacher, you can see that these counsellors, equipped with the newer methods of progressive education, have a great deal to contribute as advisors and consultants to the teachers. The Consultant in Education on the Foundation staff, who is also on the faculty at both Northwestern and the University of Michigan, considers the family health counsellor the key person as a co-ordinator of the community program. She keeps the teachers on their toes working out projects in the schools. Everything relating to health becomes a part of the education curriculum, from school lunches to a sanitary survey of the school grounds. Deans of education and members of the two faculties giving extension courses under the auspices of the Foundation in the seven counties are often guests at the Central office and keep us all well aware of the new thinking that is being done in the field of education.

The philosophy of the Foundation was expressed by a recent student something like this: "The best service to any community can be provided by better preparation of the workers giving the service," hence postgraduate courses are arranged for doctors, dentists, teachers, veterinarians, school board members, ministers, and also for the graduate nurses. One of my keenest interests is in the development of an educational program for the private duty nurses in the seven counties so that they can also participate, as the doctors and dentists do, in the community service. Some of them have already been on scholarship getting experience at the Chicago Maternity Center and with the Visiting Nurse Service, and are doing hourly nursing for maternity patients paid for by the Health Department in one county. This program is now being extended to all seven counties.

My title as "Consultant in Nursing Education" covers a multitude of activities, and as the work is barely seven years old in the first county and just over two years in the last, there is plenty of pioneering still to be done.

While the selection of new members of our Fellowship group takes considerable time, I am even more concerned with planning the In-Service training experience for these new people, as well as developing seminars, and conferences, for the whole group. Fortunately, there are some able assistants to help on the staff education program, and I look to the day when we can offer student experience here which will be duly accredited by one of the universities.

An interesting phase of the program is the plan for "medical and dental" participation. Instead of the clinics which prevail in most health department services, the health work (examination, immunization, etc.) is carried on in the practitioner's office and the health department (which is the unit through which the Foundation works) contributes to his fee if the family is unable to pay.

PATHFINDING IN NEW ROCHELLE

By Katherine Tucker Orbison, '21

Director of New Rochelle Visiting Nursing Service

Visiting Nursing Associations today are doomed—and rightly so—unless they are actively seeking to move in new directions. When society has accepted their contribution—skilled nursing care of the sick in their homes for those unable to pay—and is willing to assume responsibility for this work, nursing associations must find new tasks, meet new needs, or close their doors. The challenge to the Board member and contributor of today lies in being a member of an informed forward-looking group able, because of private support, to advance more rapidly and to be more flexible than the Public Agency. As rapidly as possible, tasks these agencies are willing and able to perform must be relinquished, if the private agency is to be free to initiate progressive ventures above the level tax-supported agencies must accept.

In order to force unmet needs to stand out in clear relief we began by unloading. All nursing care of relief clients is now paid for on a per visit basis by the City of New Rochelle. Not yet equipped to take over this task, the City buys the service from the Visiting Nursing Association which acts in a supplemental capacity. We rarely give free bedside care. A Case Committee analyzes and passes on all our free work which consists almost entirely of Pre-Natal and Health Supervision Cases. The questions we keep pressing in this group are: Who else could do this job? What would happen if we didn't step in? Responsibility was pushed back to the Board of Health, School Nurse, etc., until we reached a point, at one time, where practically every age group belonged "to some other agency for health care." We then began to take special cases when specifically referred because of some intensive or long-time piece of work which the small personnel in public agencies couldn't handle. Gradually we built up a carefully selected case load. By making routine follow-up visits on all discharged maternity cases, we found the need for our services in Infant and Pre-School Health Supervision to be very great among those groups not eligible for Board of Health service; i.e., the large middle group of white collar workers, policemen, other city employees, and small salaried commuters. We found four and five month old babies getting the same formula ordered by the obstetrician at birth, mothers who had no idea that it is important to have a doctor until the baby gets sick, others who wanted the baby to be immunized but felt the charges of the private physician to be more than they could afford and yet didn't wish to go to a clinic, etc. We now have a group of private physicians who will make special rates for such patients when they are referred through our organization.

Financial necessity, as well as the evident need, had already led us to offer an organized hourly nursing service on a 24 hour basis. The middle economic group is the one we are trying to reach through this service, but we find the well-to-do family is also in great need of organized supervised nursing care for brief periods of time. "Where is your KY?" was the question one of our Board members asked coldly of a private duty nurse in her home, who was inserting an unoiled rectal tube in giving a treatment to a member of her family. Mrs. S. had seen Margaret Eliot's demonstration of rectal treatments which she gave last year at one of our staff meetings!

Extension of all the health services we have to offer to the entire community, according to its need, is our main objective and is possible only as we free ourselves from working with any families who can obtain assistance elsewhere.

As to finding new needs—I have mentioned the long recognized need of the middle economic group for health services. We felt many people needed our help and did not get it. They would not accept charity but, on small salaries, could not save for the rainy day. So in 1935 we called a meeting of all Westchester County Visiting Nursing Associations to consider this question and to discuss the feasibility of a plan for Group Visiting Nursing, similar to the highly successful 3 cents a day Hospital Plan. Service, not profit, is the idea back of these plans. When there are profits, these go into more and better service for everyone. We organized a Conference on Group Visiting Nursing and the results of a year's study will soon be published. We believe these results justify a demonstration and have appointed a Committee to follow through on this undertaking.

A record of all requests for special service kept for nine months showed that out of 45 received half of these were for practical nurses, 11 were for mothers' helpers, 3 for occupational therapy, 4 needed skilled case work not provided by the relief set-up, and several needed convalescent care. In collaboration with the County Red Cross, we gave a ten weeks course with special opportunity for the more able students to have field experience with the Visiting Nursing Association in the care of chronics and small babies. One member of this class had completed one year of training at Presbyterian Hospital and left to get married. We are now employing her as a Nursing Aide and keep her time well filled under the supervision of our staff nurses. Another member of this class is a New York Registered Nurse who had been out of her profession for some years. She is now one of our students from New York University.

Three young women are now assisting in the WPA Nursery School for a three months experience with the pre-school child. After this they will come to our association where we will give them six weeks training in care of the newborn baby and small infant with demonstrations and an opportunity to observe in the field. No training is given in care of the sick child.

Sometimes what is needed is a job analysis. Mrs. E., the wife of a school principal, was ill recently but called us because of her son who had a serious infection. Here we provided a staff nurse every morning to give skilled care to both patients. At noon our nurse's aide arrived, gave the patients their meals and prepared them for the night under the staff nurse's supervision.

A famous English economist, R. H. Tawney, characterizes the ruling class in Europe after the French Revolution as "caught between the past and the future—not knowing which way to move—they walked reluctantly backwards into the future lest a worse thing should befall them!" Into the future we must go whether we will or no, but unless we are ready to see a new kind of Visiting Nursing Association, different from all our ideas of the past, unless we fearlessly blaze new trails, we also will be walking "backwards into the future," and will miss the thrill of discovery that comes with the first glimpse of a new day.

PROFESSIONAL SERVICES IN A DAY NURSERY AND HEALTH CLINIC

By Gladys M. Swayze, '28
Clinic Nurse, Brightside Day Nursery and Kindergarten, Cannon Street Health Center

At one time I felt there was no work like institutional nursing; however, since I have made the change and am now a "clinic nurse" in a Day Nursery with an active Health Center I enjoy the work very much.

A little history of Brightside Day Nursery and Kindergarten, Cannon Street Health Center, as I have been able to gather it—the Nursery was established in 1896 at the suggestion of a friend of Mrs. S. R. Guggenheim, the present President of the Board of Managers of Brightside Day Nursery. The building which houses the Nursery was built with funds collected from very generous donors, while the building which houses the Health Center or Clinic is an old tenement house remodeled in 1924, the same year Brightside employed their first nurse. The institution itself is budgeted under the Jewish Federation of Charities.

The policy of Brightside Day Nursery and Kindergarten is to provide pre-school care and substantial meals for children of working mothers, from the ages of nine months to six years. The charge which does not exceed fifteen cents per day per child, is computed according to the mother's income. Some children are taken in free of charge until the mother's income is sufficient to pay, perhaps, a five cent fee. There is also a group of children who attend public school and come to the nursery for noon and afternoon meals. This group spends the after-school hours at the nursery under the supervision of a teacher who sees that each child is occupied according to his ability, artistic or otherwise. This school group includes girls up to nine years of age and boys up to seven years of age.

The children come into the nursery at seven-thirty A.M. and stay with us until five or five-thirty in the evening, when some member of the family comes to call for them.

The first day of each week I arrive at the nursery at seven-thirty. Our children are mostly Jewish and Italian, and such dear sweet youngsters they are! Mother strips the children while nurse looks them over. Any children with suspicious spots, impetigo, sore throats, etc., are sent home with mother to have a doctor, or to be taken to the hospital as the case may be. Before these children can come back to the nursery they must be examined by the physician in charge, who comes to the nursery semi-weekly, Tuesday mornings and Friday afternoons.

Once a month our nursery children have a physical examination. They are brought over to the clinic by their teacher, stripped to the waist, and each little one comes to the doctor as bravely, perhaps more bravely, than an adult. Any treatments ordered by the doctor are given by the nurse after the clinic. Accidents, dressings and monthly weights are referred to the clinic.

As medical representative it is up to me to make periodical inspections on all health problems, reporting any of serious import to the Superintendent.

Dental days—well, they are not so bad as you might think, when you learn that we do take children as young as two years of age for examination and actual drilling and filling of teeth. We have many bad deciduous teeth in our very youngest child. Permanent molars coming in are often already badly decayed. Our children are the best in the land I am sure, very few cry after our dentist, who is an artist with children, has talked them into letting him look at their teeth. He shows them how the burr goes around, tries it on their fingers, then they seem reassured that all is not too bad. We keep our nursery children on the dental roll until they are twelve years of age. Then we must refer them elsewhere, as we have too many to take care of. Our services are absolutely free.

Eye examinations are done once a month on our nursery children only, and glasses are obtained at the lowest possible cost at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary. Our youngest child to be examined to date is three years of age. We use the illiterate E chart; we also have the figure chart, but the children are drilled by the teacher a couple of weeks ahead of time and we find the E chart very successful.

We have a mother's clinic where we examine all nursery mothers as they can come, once a year. For this clinic we have a woman physician who also conducts a clinic for girls from sixteen to eighteen years of age; these clinics are preceded by health lectures, by the doctor, to a still younger group of girls.

Unlike many Day Nurseries Brightside has in connection with it an active Health Center or Clinic, opened around 1923 by Miss Ethel S. Beer, a member of the Board of Managers. This clinic is for children from school age to adulthood. This group also includes our very young babies who are examined by us once a month. The older groups are examined every six months, though they come to the clinic room once a month to be weighed. The clinic was started with the idea of keeping the families of the nursery children as healthy as we were trying to keep our nursery children.

Our health work is limited to physical examinations only, all other work is done through referrals, by our social service worker, to hospitals with specialized clinics. Dental care as well for this group is done through referrals.

At all times medical services are in demand, ears to be syringed, fingers to be dressed, mothers to advise, children to feed, teachers and employes to be kept in check regarding their health. Many little duties it would take some time to write about are taken care of in one month's work at Brightside Day Nursery.

After graduation from Vassar Miss Wales worked with the Young Women's Christian Association as a Social Worker. After her graduation from the Presbyterian she had valuable experience in rural nursing as a Red Cross nurse in the northern part of New York State. Following this she took a position as director of the Social Service Department at the University of California. From 1923 to 1936 Miss Wales was director of Henry Street Nursing Service. During the time that Miss Wales was at Henry Street, she received her Master's Degree in Public Health Nursing from Teachers College. In the Fall of 1936 she went to Michigan to take up her present work.

Katherine Tucker Orbison, '21, B.S., M.A.

Mrs. Orbison received her B.S. degree in Public Health from Columbia University in 1922 and her M.A. from the Child Development Institute, Columbia University, in 1931. After graduation, Mrs. Orbison, who was then Miss Tucker, was appointed assistant supervisor in Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service. From 1923 to 1925 she acted as supervisor in this same organization. In 1925 she served with the Near East Relief in Russia. She was superintendent of the hospital and later superintendent of Public Health and started the first visiting nurse service in Leninakan, Armenia. For several years Mrs. Orbison held a semi-professional position as president of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Lincoln School. In 1934 she was supervisor of the Federal Emergency Nursery Schools in New York City and in the latter part of this same year she became director of the Visiting Nursing Association in New Rochelle.

Gladys Swayze, '28

Miss Swayze was instrument nurse in the Presbyterian Hospital from 1928 to 1930. From 1930 to 1935 she was supervisor of the operating room at the Cornwall Hospital, Cornwall, New York. From 1935 to 1937 she held the position of superintendent of nurses at this hospital. On June, 1937, she accepted the position which she now holds at the Brightside Day Nursery.

ALUMNAE MEETING

The quarterly meeting of the Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of Presbyterian Hospital was held at Maxwell Hall on Thursday, November 18th. The meeting was opened by a report on the Nurse Practice Act, given by Miss Helen Young. Miss Young discussed the progress made concerning the practice of nursing and the definition of Nursing and of Nursing Aid. Following this report, Miss Margaret Conrad told the group interesting facts about the new class of students who entered training in September.

After the business of the meeting, Miss Marie C. Byron introduced the speaker, Dr. Edwin C. Lobenstine, Chairman, China Medical Board of the Rockefeller Foundation. Dr. Lobenstine spoke on the underlying reasons for the present Sino-Japanese situation. The talk opened with a brief but charming review of the history of China. Dr. Lobenstine explained the differential development of the Chinese and Japanese national personalities and its relation to the present crisis. He also discussed the belief of Japan in its "divine mission" of "bringing light to China," and the almost unbelievable way in which China is carrying on in an intellectual and social manner in the face of a most horrible warfare.

Nancy Baumis was in New York for a few days during the holidays. She came primarily to visit the New Jersey Medical Center with which hospital an affiliation has been arranged for the students in the Burbank Hospital. Miss Baumis spoke enthusiastically of her interest in things they are hoping to accomplish at the Burbank Hospital where she is a head nurse and supervisor.

SCHOOL NEWS

Maxwell Hall has been the center of much social activity the last three months. In October, the Dramatic Club started off with a cabaret in true Hallowe'en style. In November, the Glee Club with many new voices from the Preliminary class gave its first and very successful concert. On the Friday after Thanksgiving, the Senior Class sponsored a formal dance. To mark the close of their course in the History of Nursing, the Junior Class in December gave a pageant depicting by a series of tableaux with excellent costuming the progress of nursing from the earliest times to the present day.

The week of Christmas was filled with the usual gaiety. December 22, the Glee Club and Dramatic Club joined in a program of carols and the short play "The Gift," by Mary E. Foley, followed by an "open house." Christmas Eve would not be Christmas Eve without the carol singing for the patients in the hospital; after it, there was a Christmas supper in Sturges, at tables for four set up around the room. "The old order changeth" even for Santa Claus, instead of his former midnight visit, he came early and gave out the presents from under the tree; so by midnight in place of the excitement of former years "not a creature was stirring" in Maxwell Hall.

A Christmas formal dance given by the Student Government on December 28, climaxed the holiday season. Room 116 was hard to recognize in its new role; the book shelves were removed except one which acted and was decorated as a mantel. Refreshments were served to the dancers from eleven to twelve on the long tables bright with holiday trimmings.

After the siege of examinations, the probationers went on the wards for full time the middle of December, while the seniors are beginning to think of finishing. On January 15, three members of the class who have not taken any time off during their course receive the coveted bonus, Barbara Avery, Barbara Garland, and Elizabeth Waite. The senior banquet is to be January 12. The present senior class voted to try a new system for providing the gardenias received by each nurse on her "finishing day"; instead of her friends sending them there is a "gardenia fund" and they come from the class.

The faculty put out the October issue of the Student Prints, edited by Miss Phillips, with an editorial by Miss Young, and personals by Miss Rogers.

Four students instead of two as formerly are being sent at one time to affiliate in Bloomingdale.

Forum Club with its continued interest in international affairs has been busy raising money to send medical supplies to China.

On Wednesday afternoon, November 10, Maxwell Hall presented a gala scene. Lighted fires, soft music, tall chrysanthemums, mints, nuts and the clatter of tea cups formed a background for a continuous procession of guests from the Hall and the hospital to greet Mrs. Anna Keily Murphy. Anna looked very happy indeed, and beautiful in blue velvet with a yellow corsage. In recognition of 20 years' service behind Maxwell Hall's busy desk, the Student Government presented her with a silver plate. Many sincere wishes are extended for her future happiness.

NEWS ITEMS

On January first the governing boards of the Presbyterian Hospital and the Neurological Institute became identical in membership, thus insuring full cooperation and centralization of all private hospital activities at the Medical Center.

Dr. Walter W. Palmer, Professor of Medicine at Columbia University, has been appointed Medical Director of the Neurological Institute, with Dr. Robert F. Loeb as Associate.

Work on the new ten story building recently added to the west wing of the College for Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University has just been completed. The new structure is located at the corner of 168th Street and Fort Washington Avenue and will be occupied this month. The new building will contain laboratories for graduate research work in anatomy, physiology, pathology, bacteriology and chemistry. It will also house the Crocker Institute for Cancer Research, formerly located at Amsterdam Avenue and 116th Street.

THE ALUMNAE MAIL BOX

[Editor's Note: Because of limited space it has not been possible to publish more than excerpts from the following letters from four of our Alumnae. These graduates of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital are to be congratulated upon the results of their work in these far distant foreign countries.]

KWANGJU, KOREA

[As a background to the letter from Margaret Frances Pritchard, '29, we reprint some of the statements made in a letter from Dr. Louis C. Brand who is the surgeon at the E. L. Graham Hospital. Miss Pritchard is the Director of the Nursing Service.]

The past year has brought more evidence of progress and fruitfulness in our medical work than I have witnessed in any of the previous twelve years' service. Last year we had 1,212 in-patients in our hospital; 11,462 dispensary patients and 15% gain in income from the patients.

We are so thankful for our new Nurses Home which was finished last August, and comfortably accommodates our graduate and undergraduate nurses. We are proud of our graduate nurses who willingly gave up their home when our hospital burned, and moved five times from one make-shift quarters to another. Miss Pritchard has been very successful in training efficient Christian nurses for our hospital and our Soonchun Mission hospital.

A father told me in all solemnity, a few days ago, that his son even vomited the snake they gave him to eat. The boy was brought to our hospital with persistent vomiting, due to a brain tumor. Recently a native "medicine man" was brought to see a young woman who is in the last stages of tuberculosis. After feeling each pulse he urged her to go home and allow him to give her "herb medicine" which would cure her in a month. He sealed his guarantee with a vow that he would cut his own throat if he could not cure her in three months. Perhaps she heard of one of our patients who died suddenly with pulmonary hemorrhage after taking such treatment; anyway she implored her father to allow her to continue our more humane treatment.

We also have a very happy patient, relieved after four years of terrible discomfort from a ruptured bladder. She was the victim of an old woman "healer" who applied caustic to correct suspected prolapse of the womb.

Today I opened a big deep abscess on the back of a woman sixty-five years old, which was produced by an unsterile needle (chim) applied by the "medicine man" to cure her ache. Time does not permit my telling you of others who suffer from these and other nefarious practices, but you can be assured that our best service is needed in the love and spirit of our Saviour; and it is appreciated. We need your daily prayers for guidance and strength.

From Miss Pritchard's Letter

Christmas Greetings! As our Saviour's Birthday approaches our hearts and thoughts naturally turn to friends far away. We are having demonstrated more and more the inability of man without Christ in his heart to bring peace on earth and good will to men, but we rejoice as we recall some of the individuals who have found that peace that passeth understanding, in our hospital this past year.

We have with us now a boy eighteen years old who came in several months ago suffering with both pulmonary and spinal tuberculosis. He came from a non-Christian home and at first would not listen to the Gospel message but after a few weeks he gave his heart to Christ. He has been a source of joy and inspiration to us ever since. I have never seen a more radiant faith. His lung condition has improved and he is now convalescing from a spinal fusion that we hope will cure his spinal tuberculosis. He has been in a plaster cast for three weeks and will have to be in it for five weeks more, but not a complaint.

This is the sixth year of the T. B. Seal Campaign in Korea. In that time much has been accomplished in bringing new life and new hope to many an aching heart, as well as preventive and educational work, but much remains to be done. In our Kwangju territory we are stressing the educational side.

The Y. M. C. A. is doing work in some of the surrounding villages. Their farm school students are conducting night schools in six of these villages. Recently we admitted the two hundred and fifty children who are enrolled in these schools to our hospital over night, taking twenty-five a night, giving them physical examinations and intestinal parasite treatment. We feel that the contact of a Christian hospital with that many homes is decidedly worthwhile. The Y. M. C. A. leaders were delighted to find that the children in the villages where they had been at work the longest were decidedly more developed mentally, physically and spiritually, than where work has been started more recently.

We have a great variety of cases. A girl went home today who came in to get her looks improved so she could get married. Every girl must marry in this land and a physical deformity of any kind is about the greatest handicap that a girl has in securing a desirable husband. When a small child this girl had an abscess on her outer ear; it was cauterized with native medicine; as a result the lower lobe of the ear grew over the opening of the ear making the girl deaf in that ear by obstructing the canal entirely and deforming the ear. Dr. Brand did a plastic operation which resulted in a very respectable looking ear. The mother was about the most grateful person I have ever seen. She did not seem especially concerned about the hearing so long as the ear looked all right. She left saying that she was to be married in twenty days.

I am enjoying good health and am happy in my work. We find our opportunities for service in medical work increasing. Even though the doors to educational work are closed there are plenty of open doors for us to enter.

TABRIZ, PERSIA

[This letter comes from Frances Thornton Wooding, '25, Director of the Government School of Nursing in Tabriz.]

The government School of Nursing in Tabriz was opened last October. The local office of the muarif asked that the school be located in the American hospital. I have been increasingly thankful through the year that this plan was carried out.

Part time services of Rubab Vakili, one of our graduates, were secured. Her services have been invaluable in translation of lesson outlines throughout the year and in assistance in supervision of the student nurses. She has also taught one class.

Dr. Razee Islami has taught throughout the year. He is very much interested in education of the nurses.

The school had a varying number of students at the beginning. From day to day one didn't know how many students there were as new ones came and old ones stopped coming. This made the beginning work extra hard for so much make-up work had to be done. Eventually, four weeks from the beginning we settled down with five students.

The students had short assignments of ward work for about the first month. This small allowance of time did not allow for these nurses to carry full responsibility for any assignment of work. After the first six months, the students were assigned to ward work for 6 hours a day. In turn they began to take relief hours (from 4-10 P.M. and night duty from 10 P.M.-

7 A.M). It was then that the nurses realized themselves how much they needed practice.

One of the greatest difficulties is to give the student a sense of responsibility for the work in the hospital. Living at home which means sharing the life and work of the home, having all day Friday and frequent holidays, a heavy class program with the necessary study time to be found somewhere and not any one of the students being any too robust, have all tended to make for irregularities.

As a result of the year's experience, I have come to the following conclusions:

1. That three years' program for the government schools is imperative because:

(a) The students have too little in their former life, mentally or morally to prepare them to take responsibilities or to accept the discipline which comes to them as nurses. Time is an important factor here.

(b) Even if the ninth class diploma is demanded as entrance requirement this year, their educational experience has not taught them to use their minds in the way that they must in nursing. The best educated student in the group said when we were reviewing the reasons why we did a procedure a certain way, "We haven't been taught to study this way before."

(c) The entire lack of any literature, words or phrases to express one's thoughts in medical and nursing terms makes progress so much slower than it would be otherwise.

2. It goes without saying that at least a ninth class diploma must be made essential for admission. I was forced to take a girl out of the sixth class this year. She has real ability but is so handicapped in her lessons that she is continually discouraged, needs extra time and help and physically cannot swing it.

3. Dormitory should be provided for the following reasons:

(a) The students become so tired physically by walking to and fro that they cannot give their best to their work. The evening time when all the family is gathered about the kursi or in the same room, there is no possible way for a nurse to study. During the first six months with most careful planning, I could never arrange for more than 8 hours of study time during the whole week when they had 18 hours class work a week to prepare for.

(b) When they return to their homes at night they are often required to take on duties in the home. It is so easy for the home folks to think it necessary for the student to do work or care for sick children.

(c) The work in the hospital cannot be carried by a group of students who come for day time only. It will be much less possible when they have to carry more responsible work, take care of emergencies, etc.

In conclusion, I would say that despite the handicaps, I think that the students have made real progress and show promise. On the whole they show interest and ability. I feel, however, that the program must be changed and that the details of adjusting the running of each school to the needs of the hospital in which it is located must be left in the hands of the mudeer of each school.

WILLIS K. PIERCE MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

Mt. Silinda Mission
S. Rhodesia, S. Africa

[From a letter sent by Edith Jewell Fuller, '29.]

It is certainly difficult to realize that by the time this reaches you Christmas will be only a week or two away. The jacaranda trees are in full flower making a beautiful mauve splash against the rich green of the new grass. It is spring out here. We have already had some rain and the natives are busy digging gardens so as to plant as soon as the heavier rains come. There is nothing to remind us of the glorious Christmas season except the calendar.

The end of another year! What joys, disappointments, encouragements or progress has it brought to you? Here on the firing line we have had plenty of each, and this seems to be a good time to evaluate the year's events.

Joys.—It is impossible to enumerate all the causes for joy occurring during the past year but here are a few. The new Nurses' Home with its three wards for white patients was completed and occupied in June, thus giving Miss Tontz and me comfortable quarters in which to relax when we can get a few moments free from patients and other duties. It has also increased our facilities for white patients and made the nursing care of them easier.

The orphans have been so much happier and healthier since the arrival of the new bassinettes and cribs. They are now housed in our old home so that they are away from all the native patients and are cared for by their own staff. Ten of them have either been taken home by their fathers or been adopted by childless Christian couples, an experiment which seems to be working out very happily in every case.

Disappointments.—We had hoped that the end of the year would show definite progress by the government in establishment of clinics in the native reserves in our area but the year is about over and there is no indication that anything will be done now. There are at least four that should be started within the radius of thirty miles but we have barely enough funds to run this hospital without branching out. Perhaps the next year will tell a happier tale.

Encouragements and Progress.—These more than balance the other two. You will remember that we have written our own manuals for the teaching of our native nurses, and that every year we have had to type copies of each for the new class, so you will rejoice with us that three of the manuals: Practical Nursing, Surgical Nursing, and Mothercraft have been accepted by publishers in London who have undertaken to print 5,000 copies hoping that they will be practical not only for nurses but for any people who are just beginning to read English and who desire knowledge of that sort. We are decidedly encouraged and greatly pleased because that means we have only three of the manuals to type yearly instead of six—this will give us a few extra hours of sleep!

We graduated five last December. Four of the nurses are working in government clinics, the fifth is here in charge of the orphans and relieving my shoulders of a big burden. This year there is no one to graduate, unfortunately. We have had calls from several hospitals for native nurses and it is hard to have no one available. However, the boys and girls are beginning to realize that nursing is a worth while profession and applications are pouring in for next year. The spirit among the student nurses has been wonderful all year. I have been alone a lot of the time with white patients to nurse as well as the native hospital so that they have had more and more responsibility thrust upon them for the care of hospital and dispensary patients. They have taken it seriously and done remarkably well. The spirit of service is our dominating note and in our bi-weekly devotional services they stress it in both their talks and prayers. The care of the sick is so foreign to all their ideas that the attitude of these boys and girls is remarkably encouraging.

Patients are coming in ever-increasing numbers. We shall have had well over a thousand in-patients this year and under thirty deaths which indicates that the people are realizing that it does not pay to wait until the patient is almost dead then bring him and expect us to cure him by a miracle. There is little argument now with a prospective patient. If we say, "You had better stay," he says, "The doctor knows," and goes peaceably off to the ward. This is a great advance indeed. We have had twice the number of maternity cases this year that we have ever had. Some of the women have come from homes three and four days' journey away and have spent a month waiting for their confinement. The surgical work has increased considerably and each one goes forth to tell how he died and then came back to life again.

The natives are now coming to buy medicines. It sounds simple but those who know the struggle we have had to get them to see that medicine is valuable and therefore worthy of being bought will appreciate that. They used to have free medicine but in later years it seemed feasible to make the break. After all, what is bought with hard cash (or grain) assumes a real value. Medicine that costs nothing can be thrown away without compunction if it does not taste good. Our cash sales this year have doubled in amount. The natives often ask for the medicine that we sell to the white people! They are sure that we keep a special kind for white folk and they are willing to pay for it.

Therefore as the year draws to a close we give thanks for the many blessings we have received and the encouraging signs of progress.

KULING, KIANGSI, CHINA

August 5, 1937.

[From Lucy Henrietta Grier, '31.]

Just the other day, I was reading that thrilling and remarkable little book called, "Sian, A Coup d' Etat," giving Madame Chiang Kai Shek's account of the Sian captivity together with pages of General Chiang's diary and his advice to the insurgent leaders who captured him and held him in Sian for the fortnight begining December 12, and who released him on Christmas Day. You can all imagine something of the terrible gloom that spread over the whole country at that time of crisis, and the courage of these two Christians in the face of great personal danger, and danger to the unity of the country, shines like a beacon light and will be a wonderful testimony for Christ. I would like to quote a few words from Mrs. Chiang's own lips as she tried to comfort her husband in his captivity: "Be comforted for God is with us. I am here to share your fate and die with you, if God so wills it, and if He wills otherwise to live and work with you for the sake of the nation."

I just bring to your attention this brief glimpse of these great leaders of China because we have been greatly strengthened and encouraged by their example and witness before the whole nation. Many out here have heard of the spirituality of their Christian living and of their habits of early rising in order to seek and to know God's will thru prayer and study. May prayers go up for them that their lives may be spared and that God may use them in a very wonderful way in bringing officers and soldiers and government leaders to Christ. Some of the leaders of his "New Life Movement" are splendid Christians.

Just now the excitement and tension because of the war seems to be uniting China in a very real way. Already Peiping and Tientsin are in the hands of the Japanese. By the time this reaches you significant changes will probably have occurred. It looks to me like a long war ahead. The troops are concentrating around Hankow now and the situation around Shanghai and Soochow and Nanking and Hsuchowfu are not at all encouraging and they are getting ready for clashes that may come within the next few days. We are afraid that the river will be closed as a passage, and hope to hear definitely by tonight or tomorrow. We certainly would hate to be cut off up here without a chance to get back to our stations. In the midst of these troublous times it is a cheering thought to realize that China's highest leader, the man to whom all are turning as the only one who could possibly lead China to unity and victory and real greatness, is this man who humbly turns to Christ as Leader and daily seeks His guidance.

In our Soochow field this year there have been many heartening as well as disheartening features in our work. The country field has responded in a most promising way to the teaching of the Gospel. The need for evangelistic workers in the country field is a distressing one. Thousands of people for whom we are responsible have had no one to preach to them and teach them. Miss Sloan has been doing splendid work as the only foreign evangelist for the country field and she reports that the Chinese in the country are hungry for the Gospel. They are eager listeners and are willing to come long distances to hear more, more about Jesus Christ. There are thousands of others in the vast field who know nothing about Him.

In the city, the people are much harder to reach. Together with fast through trains connecting Soochow with Shanghai and Nanking and with a splendid new bus road to Shanghai, have come the evil influences of bad movies, low amusements and concentration on worldly affairs that are very discouraging. However, thru the city workers, Bible classes have been established that are small but most encouraging thru the earnestness and eagerness of those who come to hear. In the hospital, there are regular talks given in the wards during the week besides the personal work of students, staff and teachers. Every Sunday, a small band of young people go to one of the nearby hamlets to conduct services.

We have started in the past few months a combined public health and evangelistic group that weekly go far out into the country for all day work in preaching, teaching and healing. The work is very new but promises tremendous opportunities.

This year we are facing a great change in our nursing school, a change that seems to be radical and in many ways heartbreaking. This change is the closing of our school to new students due to the government's requirements, that all schools must register under restrictions that many feel hamper too seriously our religious liberty and are detrimental to the advancement of Christ's Kingdom. Though we are permitted by the government to graduate all students at present in our schools under the old system, yet they will in a measure suffer because of the new regulations and we are trying to transfer as many as possible to registered schools so that they may graduate without difficulty. We dread to think of young girls going into schools of nursing where perhaps Christ will not be known, yet if we do not register and continue our school, the girls can never become qualified nurses.

We have just taken in about 15 young girls whom we are training as nurses' aides. They have had the equivalent of a grammar school education and we expect to teach them many of the easier treatments and routine ward work. They are between the ages of 15 to 30 and due to financial and other difficulties have been unable to continue their schooling. We feel that they will prove of invaluable help to our graduate nurses and already are showing such an humble spirit and willingness to serve. Many of their homes are poverty-stricken and confining and the hospital seems to be a very wonderful place to them. To us it is a wonderful opportunity for reaching young women who perhaps otherwise would never be reached and whose advantages have been much more limited than those students who have had a higher education.

ROCHESTER, MINNESOTA

[The following letter was sent to Miss Young by "Jill" Lockwood, '37. Miss Lockwood was visiting in Rochester and has written an interesting account of what she was able to observe while there.]

This institution is much too big to see in the short time I've been here and any report I could send you at this point would be woefully inadequate, but perhaps you will accept a few "impressions."

It happened that the clinic was putting on a program of lectures in Medicine and Surgery from November eighth to the twelfth and I was privileged to sit in on a number of the clinics in the surgical pavilions at St. Mary's. Between these talks, I watched operations, or better, watched the nursing technique in the operating room. I found their procedures and much of their equipment strikingly similar to ours. It was a little hard to get used to the flowing head dress of the nuns who act as instrument nurses, but they seem not to get in the way.

St. Mary's Hospital is in no wise connected with the Mayo clinic except that the attending physicians and surgeons are all members of the consultant staff at the clinic and that the patients are all sent here through the clinic.

I think the history of St. Mary's Hospital is particularly interesting. It seems there was a tornado here in Rochester in 1883 which caused the deaths of over twenty people and a great many were injured. The sisters of St. Francis realized the need of a hospital, and this one was opened in 1889 with a nursing staff of five sisters; Dr. W. W. Mayo and his two sons, Drs. W. J. and Charles H. Mayo, constituting the medical and executive staff. Since this time there have been several additions, the greatest of which is the new surgical pavilion, which was erected in 1922. The bed capacity at the present time is five hundred and sixty-seven. The services are general medicine, neuro-surgery, general surgery, cancer, diabetes, gynecology, obstetrics, orthopedics, pediatrics, urology and neurology.

The sisters maintain a school of nursing separate and distinct from the Kohler School of Nursing, whose students work in the Colonial, Kohler, and Worrall hospitals downtown. The Colonial Hospital specializes in orthopedic, urologic, thoracic and general surgery. It is equipped with seven operating rooms and facilities for handling acute and emergency cases. The Kohler Hospital consists of the three top floors of the Kohler Hotel. People staying in the hotel rooms are entitled to nursing service if needed. The Worrall Hospital specializes in eye surgery and dental work. The "radium room" is located here.

Saturday my cousin, who has a three-year fellowship in the radiology department, took me through the clinic building. It is a perfectly beautiful building equipped very modernly. Only diagnostic work and post-operative dressings are done here in the clinic building. Robert Ripley has said of this building that it is the tallest building in the world that is located one-half mile from a corn field, and very true it is. On looking out of the window on the thirteenth floor, all you can see are flat fields. It is a very wondreful sight.

I have tried to tell you a few of the wonderful things I have seen here; it would take me weeks to write everything. As yet I have not begun to see everything, but I am going to see all I can before I leave!

THE NEUROLOGICAL INSTITUTE

["On the first of January 1938 the governing board of the Presbyterian Hospital and the Neurological Institute became identical in membership thus insuring full cooperation and centralization of all private hospital activities at the Medical Center." This announcement was made in the last issue of the Quarterly Magazine. For this issue Miss Gertrude Dwyer consented to write the following interesting historical sketch of the origin and development of this now well known Institute. Miss Dwyer graduated from the Jackson Sanitarium, Dansville, N. Y., in 1910 and soon after took a position as a supervisor of one of the wards in the Neurological Institute. In 1916 she was appointed Supervisor of Nurses and this position she ably filled until she resigned in 1935.]

The inspiration and initiative for the foundation of the Neurological Institute came originally from three great neurologists, whose names will ever be honored for their professional attainments and their service to their fellow men. Drs. Pierce Bailey, Joseph Frankel and Joseph Collins. The Institute is a monument to their vision and broad human sympathy. They realized the urgent need of study and treatment of nervous and mental diseases.

They secured the interest and support of a group of prominent laymen,—Messrs. R. P. Perkins, Otto Kahn, H. K. Knapp, Paul M. Warburg, R. H. Williams, Isaac Townsend, Harrison Williams, Adrian Iselin, Isaac Seligman and George Frelinghuysen. The Institute was founded and became the pioneer in its field, the only hospital devoted exclusively to the prevention, treatment and study of nervous diseases. Its aims and purposes, as announced by the founders were: service to the public through the diagnosis and treatment of nervous disorders and the training of specialists and the instruction of general practitioners in Neurology and special instruction and training of nurses in neurological and mental work, education of the public to an enlightened attitude toward nervous and mental disorders, and finally, research into the many obscure and baffling problems presented by diseases of the brain.

It was not easy to raise money for a venture of this kind as few people realized the necessity. However, two women came to the rescue and gave one hundred thousand dollars—Mrs. William H. Bliss and Mrs. Otto Kahn.

With this money, the building, which was formerly the training school of Mount Sinai Hospital, at 149 East 67th Street, was rented and reconstruction was begun. This building, situated less than a block from the elevated railroad, and almost surrounded by a Police, a Fire Station, and a Public School was not an ideal place to treat nervous patients.

On November 30th, 1909, the Institute with a bed capacity of 85 was opened for the reception of patients. Dr. Charles Dana had been added to the staff and also Dr. Charles Elsberg, who has since been recognized as one of the four leading neurological surgeons in this country.

The first six months were indescribable. The Director knew nothing of hospital administration, and with insufficient funds and an inadequate staff it was impossible to effect an adequate organization.

The patients arrived before all the necessary equipment was installed. The Medical Board did not consider it necessary to have more than a few graduate nurses and attempted to use practical nurses or "women with common sense" to do the routine nursing.

By the spring of 1910 the Trustees decided to secure Mr. Alexander Candlish (former Superintendent of Post-Graduate Hospital) to come to their assistance and reorganize the hospital. Miss Amy Hilliard, a graduate of St. Luke's Hospital, who had had considerable experience with nervous disorders at the Jackson Sanitarium in Dansville, N. Y., was appointed Supervisor of Nurses. She came July 1st, 1910, bringing with her a small group of her own graduates to take charge of the wards.

Within a few months she had succeeded in organizing the nursing department, and had also arranged for a post-graduate course of instruction in neurological nursing.

In the spring of 1911, the Trustees decided that it was necessary to close the hospital, as they could not raise funds to finance it longer. Dr. Joseph Collins says that he went out with tears in his eyes, to his friend, Mr. Alexander Cochrane and begged for one hundred thousand dollars to carry on. Mr. Cochrane gave fifty thousand and promised fifty thousand more in six months if needed. That gift saved the Institute.

In October 1912 Mr. Candlish resigned and Miss Hilliard was appointed Superintendent of the Hospital. She remained until January 31st, 1914, when she resigned to accept the position of New York State Inspector of Training Schools for Nurses. She was succeeded by Miss Esther Rivington, who carried on until her resignation on August 1st, 1935.

Although considerable publicity had been given the Institute during these early years, it was not until after the world war that the public realized that neurology was an important branch of medicine.

Dr. Pierce Bailey was on the staff of the Surgeon General in Washington, D. C. Some members of the neurological medical staff served under him abroad, and some taught in the Institute itself, to which two groups of officers of the U. S. Medical Corps were assigned for intensive training in neurology and neuro-surgery before being sent to Europe. Dr. Collins went with the Red Cross to Italy, as did Mr. Perkins, President of the Board.

After the war the original Medical Board resigned and Drs. Edwin G. Zabriskie, Walter Timme and Foster Kennedy succeeded them. Dr. Frederick Tilney was later added to this group.

About this time the Institute became so crowded in both clinic and hospital that it was impossible to care for patients properly. A few appeals had been made but funds were not available for a new building.

About 1923 Mrs. John Blair was appointed financial secretary and accomplished much through varied forms of publicity.

Columbia University invited the Institute to join the Medical Center group, but before the arrangements were completed the beloved President, Mr. Robert Perkins, died. This was in April 1924. He was succeeded by Mr. Robert Thorne.

Mrs. Blair in the meantime had launched the building fund campaign. Mr. James Gamble Rogers was chosen as architect and plans were drawn for the new building. The Building Committee was composed of members of the Medical Board, Board of Trustees, the Superintendent and the Supervisor of Nurses.

The ground was donated by the Medical Center and the building and equipment at a cost of two million dollars was financed by the Institute.

Ground was broken on October 19, 1927, and the building was formally opened March 19th, 1929. To many this was not just another hospital building, but an ideal toward which a small group had been striving for many years.

Reorganization of both medical and nursing staffs, to meet the demands of a bed capacity of 222, was completed within a few months. Early in the autumn of 1929 the Institute was approved by the Education Department of the State, for a three months' course of instruction for student nurses.

The history of the Institute since 1930 is probably well known. It brought to the Center a record of faithful service and great accomplishment. It received from the group splendid cooperation and many educational advantages

TO THE MEDICAL CENTER

["Student Prints" has kindly granted us permission to reprint the following article which was written by Miss Young for the last issue of this publication. This issue of Student Prints featured the tenth Anniversary of the move to the Medical Center.]

To take part in planning, moving into and carrying on in a Medical Center is a real privilege and a liberal education. When about 1923 the blue prints began to arrive and the announcement was definitely made that the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University and the Presbyterian Hospital were going to establish a Center where the medical students of the College of Physicians and Surgeons would receive the education and clinical experience which they required and the patients of the Presbyterian Hospital the necessary care, we were all very sad. We loved the block bounded by Madison Avenue, Park Avenue, East 70th Street and East 71st Street. The promises of a new building, modern equipment, sunshine and quiet did not reconcile us to leaving a place so full of dear memories. However, the plans and building went on apace—first the steel and then the brick—until at the beginning of 1928 we found ourselves in the throes of moving into the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center, at the corner of Broadway and West 168th Street. The site chosen for the new venture was an ideal situation, both for the college and the hospital. Ample space, sunshine and fresh air make it desirable; the bridge, busses and subways make it very accessible. The palisades and the lordly Hudson River to the West make it interesting.

Even though we were sad at leaving East 70th Street, we could not but be interested and amused at some of the mechanics of moving. Along in January all the furniture was marked with different color tags indicating—to be moved, to be sold, to be discarded. The firm of Lee Brothers, Inc. was engaged to do all the moving except the patients. Scully-Walton Ambulance Co. was engaged to move the patients, when their turn came. Lee Brothers had three distinct crews—one at 70th Street, one at the Center, and one on the vans. All they asked of us was a correct tag as to destination. They were willing to tag a room and set up the room at the Center with the articles of furniture in the same relation to each other as at 70th Street. An amusing incident happened in this connection. The movers said they were ready to take the office sitting room furniture the next day and would take it all to the same room at the Center. That night, I got two small packing boxes and carefully packed some of the breakable articles. When the furniture arrived at the Center, it was placed in exactly the same relative position even to the smallest detail including the two small packing boxes in the center of the room. I mildly suggested to the man that they unpack them too, only to get the answer, "Sorry, Madame, we did not pack them."

We had expected to move during January and had arranged to admit the Preliminary Students in February to Maxwell Hall. Later we were told it would be the middle of March before we could move the patients, but the Preliminary Class could come March 1, since the class rooms would be ready. They arrived in a situation that seemed very remote from a real hospital; 400 workmen about, furniture and equipment arriving at all hours, a large bonfire in the front yard to burn up the packing cases. These young women had the run of the place for twenty-one days when seniors and patients arrived. Then it was necessary to assume a little more dignified demeanor.

After the formal opening, the students moved up to the residence by classes, returning each day to 70th Street to take care of the patients there. I can still see the day nurses at 6:20 a.m. collecting 20c each at the desk in Maxwell Hall on their way to catch the bus at the corner of 168th St. The bus men were astonished to find their busses filled so early the first morning, but after that they put on extras, and we had specials all the way to 70th St. The hospital stopped admitting for 2 weeks, thus reducing our patients to 54. On March 26, 1928, five Scully Walton ambulances with a doctor and nurse in attendance started from 70th at 8 a.m. with the first patients for the Center. By 11 o'clock all the ward patients were settled in their home. During the afternoon the private patients were transported in the same way, Miss Maxwell being the first patient to arrive in Harkness Pavilion. That night the hospital, where the lights were turned on in 1868, was in darkness, sixty years after.

As we said at the beginning, moving from a small unit of 250 beds to a large unit of 1200 beds was a liberal education, but it was also a great undertaking and there have been many opportunities in the larger field. Each unit was fearful lest the personal interest in the individual patient should be lost. We like to think that this has been safeguarded. If we are still cherishing this ideal and add to that the greater opportunities in the larger field, then March 1928 was a great month.

HELEN YOUNG, '12.

THE PRESIDENT'S DINNER

The annual dinner which Mr. Sage gives to heads of various departments of the hospital, occurred this year at the President's home on March twelfth. On this, the eleventh anniversary, the evening was made especially gay by the reading of interesting and instructive(?) telegrams which arrived at intervals for each guest. Miss Young read hers amid great merriment and because of its vital interest to nurses and its relation to one of the most important changes made in the hospital this year, we are reproducing it below.

Present Day Miracles

[This testimonial heard by three of our graduates on a "Reconciliation Trip" to one of Father Divine's Heavens, presents an interesting phase of Therapy.]

Ah wants to thank God, Father Divine, for saving mah life. Ah was a patient in that there big Medical Center and ah was give up. Ah had all the doctahs on the service looking after me, Doctah Hangah—chief of the Medical Service, Dr. Thompson, and even Dr. Perarie who comed ovah to take out mah eyes—but ah wouldn't let him. Ah was sick unto deaf—and ah had all kin' of treatments. If you doan believe me you all jes' go look at mah chaht in that theah Medical Centah. It's dat thick—it is! Ah was lying in bed theah near daid, when the doctahs come rushin' in on me, rammed a needle dat long cleah through mah veins and into mah bone in mah arm—and theah let it stay foh three days. The needle was attached to a rubber tube and the tube went into a bottle—and foh three days that water ran in and out of me. Each day the doctahs would come in and say, Dr. Hangah and all of 'em "Give it to her! Give it to her! She can't get serium sickness!" But on de third day ah broke out in white spots all ovah—and ah scared dem doctahs! Ah was moanin' lak to die and askin' 'em to throw me out of de window—but dey said "No but you can go home if deah is any one to look aftah you." So weak as ah was ah got into a cab and ah was going home when Father Divine passed me in a cab with a big white cross on it. He looked at me—and praise God, Father Divine, ah was cured. Ah hadn't eaten anything foh days—and suddenly ah craved hot dogs—and ah had had indigestion foh weeks. But mah lil chile got me the hot dogs and I et 'em in spite of mah bare gums—for I had lost even mah teeth at that theah Medical Center!

[We reprint the following with permission from The New Yorker. An harrassed father has searched in vain thru the World's Almanac, has frantically telephoned the publishers of the Almanac and finally upon their advice telephones the Medical Center with the following result.]

It seemed a sensible suggestion and I telephoned the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, on the assumption, perhaps erroneous, that it was the biggest and most learned and newest of hospitals in New York.

"Our daughter," I said, "has been sent home from school with a temperature. Since we have only recently returned from abroad, we possess only a centigrade thermometer. We have taken our daughter's temperature with this thermometer and find that it is 39.2 degrees. We are very anxious to learn what this reading means in Fahrenheit. We understand there is a formula for making this translation. Perhaps you would be so good as to help us in this matter by informing us what this formula is."

"Please hold the line," the switch-board operator said kindly.

I held the line quite a long time, feeling very apologetic for obstructing the normal functioning of the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center to this extent. Finally the operator's cool voice spoke up.

"Hello," it said.

"Hello," I said.

"It is impossible," said the cool voice, "to take body temperature with a centigrade thermometer."

"I beg pardon," I said, considerably disturbed.

The cool voice repeated the observation.

"But I don't understand," I gasped. "What have they been doing in Europe all these years?"

There was no answer, and I felt that the person at the other end of the wire was growing bored with the conversation.

"Perhaps," I hurried to say, "you would put me on to one of the doctors there."

"I will connect you with Dr. Rourke," the cool voice replied.

When Dr. Rourke answered, I put our problem to him, and he said he thought he could help us if I held the line. I did. Presently he came back. He could not give me the formula, he said, but he could tell me what various readings might be. I said we wanted to know about 39.2 degrees.

"Thirty-nine degrees centigrade is 102.2 Fahrenheit," Dr. Rourke replied. "Forty degrees centigrade is 104. You can figure out the decimals yourself."

Dr. Rourke conversed pleasantly for a moment or two longer. He suggested that if we really insisted on learning the formula, perhaps it would be a good thing to call up one of the universities around New York and get in touch with, say, the physics department, which would certainly know. I thanked him for the idea, and then he said, "If you don't mind my giving you a piece of advice—"

"A physician's right and privilege," I interposed eagerly.

"If I were you, I'd throw the thermometer away and get a Fahrenheit one. It'll be easier in the long run."

MORRIS GILBERT.

ANSWER: One degree Centigrade is equal to 9/5 of a degree Fahrenheit. One degree Fahrenheit is equal to 5/9 of a degree Centigrade. To convert Centigrade degrees into Fahrenheit, multiply by 9/5 and add 32. To convert Fahrenheit into Centigrade multiply by 5/9 after subtracting 32 from Fahrenheit reading.

NEW ADDRESS FOR THE MEDICAL CENTER

"Man Who Buys The Guinea Pigs and Rabbits for RESEARCH LABORATORY, VANDERBILT'S HOSPITAL, (Children's Hospital), City.

New York's Newest and Largest Hospital at end of 5th Avenue Broadway Bus Line."

The Florence Nightingale Collection

Mr. Richard C. Colt has presented to the Florence Nightingale Collection two valuable pictures. A lithograph of Florence Nightingale by Day & Son, 1854, a charming and rare portrait done in color with this inscription on the back:

> "An English lady 1830-1910, who devoted her whole life to sick nursing and instituted many reforms. She did remarkable work at Scutari during the Crimean War."

A lithograph by Day & Son, 1855, a "proof before all letters," has the following inscription:

> "Florence Nightingale and Mr. Bracebridge at the burial ground at Cathcart Hill after her visit to the camp hospital May 1855."

Graduates of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital will be pleased to read an account of our Florence Nightingale collection written by Eleanor Lee, '20, for the May issue of The American Journal of Nursing. Miss Lee as instructor in History of Nursing has been particularly interested in arranging and cataloguing this very fine collection.

MOSTLY VIEW

[The following letter was received by the editor with the suggestion that many of the Alumnae would be interested in hearing about "Mostly View." This delightful place in Quacker Hill, N. Y., belongs to Annie Thomas, '05. After considerable persuasion Miss Thomas consented to tell us how Mostly View came into being and was developed. She feels that this type of activity is possible for many nurses. It is something that can be shared with friends and it seems a wise investment that does not require the advent of "old age" for the enjoyment of its premiums.]

"Greetings to 'Mostly View,' home of refreshment and rest, so soon to open its welcoming doors for another summer, to friends who need the freedom of its hospitality.

We remember the gracious welcome of its mistress who makes her guests feel that the house is theirs for the time being. One of the reasons for building it was to share it with others. The house is well named as it looks out from its hillside to the peaceful valley below with its lights and shadows.

In the mind of one such guest, there is a vivid picture of a brief visit made to 'Mostly View' in summer nearly ten years ago: The cordial greeting; wraps and bags left in the living room with its open fireplace; a glance around the house; and then the suggestion to go out of doors into the perfect summer day.

That was exactly what the tired guest most longed to do,—to be alone in the sunshine, looking up at the blue sky and down into the green valley. Perplexities vanished after that day of rest, and the benefit from the short visit could not be measured in terms of time. After delicious refreshment on the piazza, the guest was speeded on her way, her fatigue a thing of the past.

All of the seasons are marked by some kind of sharing of 'Mostly View' with sick nurses and friends. In the summer and fall, preserving is done. Before Christmas, lovely greens are brought to the city, and delicious fruit cake is made, to be distributed in gay, frosty cellophane wrappings. In the spring, forsythia branches are cut so that friends may have the joy of seeing them open, and arbutus carefully gathered in the woods gladdens the hearts of nurses and doctors at Presbyterian, bringing the good news that Winter is over. The spring bulbs around the house renew their beauty after their time of rest, and flowers from the garden are brought into the city very week.

And every week the tired guests return to their work rested and refreshed, with happy memories living on long after the visits to 'Mostly View' are over."

Miss Thomas' Account of the Development of "Mostly View"

During vacations from training at 'old P. H.', I often stayed with a friend at Quaker Hill (N. Y.) and each time that I walked down the old dirt road to the lake, I dreamed of having a home there, surrounded by memories of relatives and childhood friends and neighbors.

While I was overseas with the Presbyterian Hospital Unit in 1917, an old gentleman who had known me as a child, left a legacy of $500.00. On my return, after earning something to add to this, six acres were purchased in October 1922.

Trees, shrubs and rose bushes were planted, some from friends, some from the State. A carpenter whose wife I had once nursed through an illness, had the sale of timber from a hotel nearby, and said that if I would buy the lumber, he would build the house and accept installment payments. The necessary money was borrowed on an endowment insurance policy. The electric wiring was installed by children of a former neighbor; the plumbing, by a former member of my infant class in Sunday School. The man who drilled the artesian well had once been befriended by my Great Aunt. The road was built by the son of the man who had hauled the timber from the hotel. Various pieces of furniture were contributed by friends and neighbors.

A few years later, a gift from my Sunday School teacher made it possible to add the second story, and the veteran's bonus money added the bathroom.

The insurance has all been paid back, and the place is free from debt.

A former member of the Sunday School class still takes care of the lawn every year.

I always feel surrounded by friends there and I hope the P. H. family will feel that a welcome awaits them whenever they can come and picnic on weekends from the middle of May until the middle of October. Just let me know ahead of time!"

REWARDS OF SPECIAL NURSING

By Mary King Daniel, '19

Sometimes one hears a special nurse say that there is nothing to specialing but seven dollars a day. This is only when her most exciting duty throughout her long day is to hand a tooth brush to an Economic Royalist. Even then the Economic Royalist may be very attractive, and highly entertaining, and in this case she has her non-monetary rewards, but he may be uninteresting, or snobbish, or neurotic, or ill-natured, or all four. That makes a very bad combination for twelve hours a day.

You will never hear such a sentiment from a nurse engaged in the thrilling task, however hard, of fighting off death. That brings her to the first reward of nursing; its professional interest. A nurse's work is connected with the warfare against disease, the one struggle of our time in which all parties and factions and nationalities are interested and united. A nurse is a private in that great war. She is in the thick of all the battles and skirmishes. She shares in all the victories and defeats. She was there to see wounds magically healed when prontylin was used against streptococcus infection. She did her humble bit in the case of the boy who had double pneumonia, double otitis media and pericarditis and still had the audacity to live and get well. Like the veterans of any war, a group of nurses can tell hundreds of exciting adventures of these battles and the artful strategies used by the Commanding Officers.

Another reward is that it gives one of the best chances in the world to see at first hand what the newspaper men call "human interest." If it is true as it is written that all the world's a stage then nurses have front seats, and are even allowed to go back stage and see the actors with their grease paint off. They see people when all defenses are down, inhibitions gone and complexes working overtime. They see all kinds and conditions of people from the big business man, proud of his hundred per cent Americanism, and his social standing, to a Polish Long Island duck farmer, proud of having made a success of ducks in a foreign land. Today the special hears about life from the point of view of a high official from Siam; tomorrow, from a big English front door man, who stands outside a hotel. This week she is comforting the Colonel's lady during the misery of having a tooth out. Next week she is helping Judy O'Grady to keep death at bay after an operation for general peritonitis.

A special knows all about the fantastic situations human beings create for themselves. If there is anything about the patients' lives that she can't see for herself, the patient, or some member of the family, is more than apt to tell her about it. The confessional is as much a part of special nursing as it is of the Catholic church. The nurse comes on the scene when everyone is tense and badly in need of unburdening. She is the only one present who will listen, and what's more, she is not going to be present very long. The confessors don't have to live beside her indefinitely as they do their next door neighbors, and they won't have to face her at bridge when the crisis is over and their mood is changed. So a special nurse hears all about human nature, and sees it at its starkest. She sees patients face death with courage and calmness, and others whine in the face of adversity. She sees ministers in situations calling for the fortitude they preach. She sees prostitutes discovering how exhorbitant are the wages of sin.

The greatest reward of specialing needs to be described the least. It is that it gives what every one wishes from his work in order to satisfy his ego and bolster up his self-respect, the sense of having done something worth while for somebody in dire need and of being repaid with gratitude. Often, on account of human limitations of herself or others, a nurse fails to get this reward, but at least part of the time she knows that her existence is justified by a very welcome service.

To obtain the rewards of nursing requires great capabilities and graces. Besides professional ability, nursing requires such broad human sympathy and such limitless patience with human frailities, that only angels are really fitted to do the work as it should be done. But since no angels have ever been known to apply for the job, mere human beings have to stretch their wits and sympathies, and do the best they can. The uninitiated student nurse may think that there is nothing to a special's task but to sit by a patient's bed, rising only to give treatments and force fluids. When she has done that, she has only begun her duties. Hers is often the task of setting the stage mentally so that the patient will best fight disease and she must be a bulwark to patient and family when death is slowly and inevitably approaching. She must give a bit of sympathy here and a word of discipline there but not too much of either. She must feel her way stealthily among the various moods of patients and families. She must serve, yet lead; comfort, yet inspire confidence; coddle slightly and yet bully a little. Hers is a high and hard calling, and she does not always measure up to it. But when she does, verily, great is her reward.

THE NURSE IN A COLLEGE INFIRMARY

By Madeline Evans, '12

For a young woman who aspires to fame in the profession I would not advise school nursing of the resident type. There are however some distinct advantages in this type of nursing which will compensate for the lack of "future".

In the first place, it is to me the most cheerful form of nursing imaginable—patients young and vigorous, with great powers of recuperation, no long chronic cases, very few fatalities. The tragedies, when they do occur, are of course peculiarly heartbreaking, but happily they are few and far between. Our record at Williams is only two student deaths in the Infirmary in fourteen years.

Secondly, a college or school community is usually a pleasant place in which to live, the atmosphere of an infirmary tends to be that of a home rather than an institution, and there are often delightful social contacts and cultural opportunities. And last, but not least, are the vacations—sometimes the Christmas and spring recesses, though they are uncertain, but always a long summer in which to follow one's own inclinations for travel and recreation, or possibly for some type of work on the side.

The Thompson Infirmary of Williams College is an attractive colonial brick building which normally can accommodate sixteen patients. It has an annex for contagious cases, connected with the main building by a covered passageway, and capable of housing up to ten patients. There is a well-equipped operating room and an x-ray department.

Three years ago the entire health set-up of the college was reorganized under the able direction of Dr. Edwin A. Locke, formerly of Boston. Up to that time we had functioned like any small private hospital, with patients paying their doctors and their hospital bills. Now each student pays an annual medical fee of fifteen dollars which entitles him to a thorough physical examination (including blood, urine, chest x-ray) on entrance as a freshman, to unlimited advice and treatment of minor ills at the clinic or Health Center, and to one week's free ordinary care at the Infirmary. Beyond seven days he is charged three dollars per day, and must pay for special nursing, use of operating room and for major surgery.

The Health Center is maintained in a separate building, more centrally located than the Infirmary. In it are the doctors' offices, and the laboratory in charge of a technician who also takes the x-rays. Dr. Locke has one young medical assistant, and for surgical consultant, a former P. and S. and P.H. graduate, Dr. Norman B. McWilliams. Three other town doctors have the privilege of using the Infirmary.

The nursing staff consists of one resident graduate (the present one is Jane M. Wilson, P.H. Class of '29) the "matron" (myself) and a part-time relief nurse who lives outside. Miss Wilson does the routine nursing, while I run the house and the operating room, do the clerical work and the odds and ends. All operatives or other serious cases have their own specials, and when we are very busy or in case of contagious disease, we call in extra nurses from the town or North Adams. We rarely have trouble in getting nurses for they all seem to like working in the Infirmary. Probably one reason for our popularity both with patients and nurses is our wonderful old southern cook who has been with us for fifteen years and has never missed preparing a meal in all that time!

The Infirmary is open only to students, faculty, and others connected with the college, except in a grave emergency when of course anyone would be admitted. We have a daily average of about five patients, and around twenty-five operations a year.

Of all the infirmaries I have seen or heard of, I like this one at Williams best, because it is a complete unit, capable of taking care of practically anything under its own roof. At Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Amherst, Smith, the infirmary is affiliated with a town or city hospital, and so has to turn over its surgery and interesting cases. This seems a pity if the infirmary can have adequate facilities and a good surgeon available. We have been very fortunate with our surgical cases, many very serious, but we have never lost one, and they furnish a stimulating break in an otherwise monotonous round of colds and sore throats, upset stomachs and infected feet!

The boys themselves, however, are never monotonous. An unfailing source of interest and delight, they keep us young and on our toes, and in spite of ourselves make us hopeful for the future of the race.

WOMEN'S WELFARE CENTERS IN LONDON

By Christabel Robinson, '23

Birth Control Clinics are a good deal more numerous and more wide-spread in England than they are in the U.S.A. Indeed, they are rapidly coming to the position that Mrs. Orbison describes in connection with the Volunteer Nursing Associations, when their functions are being taken over by the municipal welfare centers and contraceptive advice is given as part of the regular post-natal care of those women who need it.

Actually, however, there remains a good deal for the voluntary centers to do and the one in which I work is doing it for some 6,000 patients each year.

The municipal centers may give advice only on therapeutic grounds which excludes all healthy newly married girls, all those young couples who wish to have their children at reasonable intervals on social or economic grounds, and most cases of brutal, alcoholic or insane husbands. So it happens that we see a large number of just-married or just-about-to-be-married young women and our doctors, all of whom are women, have an opportunity of giving much needed advice. We have found the necessity of such advice so great that we now have two special sessions a month when a specially qualified doctor can see those patients whose difficulties need more time and care than can be given at the ordinary sessions. Many hospitals and private practitioners take advantage of this service for their patients and the results have been very rewarding.

We have three gynaecological sessions a week to deal with the minor ailments which are discovered in the course of the routine examinations, and for which patients will not bother to seek hospital treatment. Many sterile women wanting children come to these sessions and it is a great joy to see their happiness when "Doctor says it's all right."

Each expansion of our work seems to open up some further field and we do try to live up to our name of Women's Welfare Center: a place where a woman may come with any difficulty and find sympathetic advice. Our latest venture has been an effort to take the Center to the patients. Many hundreds of them come from outlying districts at an expense of time and money which they can ill afford, so now we pack a doctor, a nurse and a social worker, with a suitcase onto a car and hold a session once a month in each of four suburbs, usually in the most incongruous surroundings—wherever we can get two or three rooms with gas and water. We nearly started in the cafe over a movie theatre—the manager was all for it but the directors turned us down, so we took a political hall instead and worked in the kitchen. The patients don't seem to mind and nearly everyone brings a friend along.

I often feel that I have gone back on my first love—midwifery—but that is well looked after over here and volunteers are not needed. And perhaps, after all, sound advice on family spacing and domestic problems does help to produce better babies when they do come.

Mary King Daniel, '19, B.S.

Miss Daniel received her B.S. degree in Education from Teacher's College in New York City. For eight years after her graduation she taught English in the State College for Women in Greensborough, N. C. Miss Daniel then decided to enter the nursing profession and since the completion of her course in 1919 she has been kept busy as a special nurse.

Madeline Evans, '12.

Following her graduation from "P.H." Miss Evans served as head-nurse of the Children's ward for two years. In 1915 she took a position as nurse in the Medical Department of Western Electric Company. During the years 1917-1919 Miss Evans was overseas with the Presbyterian Hospital Unit and Mobile Hospital No. 2. After the war she resumed her work with the Western Electric Company, staying with them until 1924 when she left the field of Industrial Nursing to take charge of the Infirmary at Williams College.

Christabel Robinson, '23.

Following the completion of her course at the Presbyterian Miss Robinson went to the Bellevue School for Midwives and after her graduation taught in this school for two years. She then took postgraduate work in midwifery in London where she has been off and on ever since.

Miss Maxwell's Birthday

It is the privilege of the Alumnae to honor the memory of Miss Maxwell on her birthday, March 14th. In accordance with an annual custom wreaths were placed on her grave in Arlington. Janet Fish, '22 wrote that she and Vi Mercer Marbury, '13, placed these wreaths, one of talisman roses and fressia from the Alumnae, one of myrtle from Mrs. Lapham and a Victory wreath tied with school colors from Mary M. Brown, '96.

At the Center

By the 15th of April all General Duty Nurses at the Medical Center were working on an eight hour schedule, day and night. This is a signal accomplishment made possible by the Administration and deeply appreciated by the Department of Nursing. Details of the reorganization required to make the necessary adjustments and the resulting benefits to patients and nurses will be discussed in the next issue of the Quarterly Magazine.

Appointments as of April 1st, 1938

Operating Room:

Presbyterian: Dorothy Leonard, '37, Instruments.

Private Offices:

Eye Institute: Dorothy Elizabeth Robinson, '37.

General Duty:

Presbyterian: Alice J. Rigdon, Martha Stanton, Joan Claxton, Lillian Brasel, Beatrice H. Moore, Helen McNicol, Katherine E. Reeves, Leona Berthot, Margaret Benson, Ruth Tinkham, Margery A. Templeton, Doris S. Potter, Margaret F. Evans, Julia Gromtzeff, Elizabeth Voegtlen, Eleanor Wheeler.

Returned to Registry: Eleanor Savage, '17, Eda Mitchell, '17, Dorothy M. Billington, '30, Edna F. Mills, '31, Ellen Coyle, '32, Lovie S. Palmer, '32, Muriel F. Morris, '35.

1912

The class of 1912 will be sorry to note the death of Naomi Meiklejohn Patton. Mrs. Patton went overseas with the First Canadian Expeditionary Forces in 1914 and was awarded the Mons Star and the Royal Red Cross. She was accorded the honor of a military funeral as a tribute to her outstanding service.

1918

It was very gratifying to be able to locate one of our lost members and we are particularly happy to report that we have "found" our famous flyer. Laura Ingals writes, "It is awfully good of you to bother to find out where I am and it really gives me a pleasantly warm feeling to know that The Alumnae Association is still interested in such a delinquent! If I ever get down to pen and ink I will most certainly give you the chance to turn me down or be as pleased as punch if you actually cared to "run me". Burbank, California is enough address and as good as any other for someone who herself is not sure from day to day where the rising sun will find her."

1920

Elizabeth McKenzie has been elected president of The Auxiliary for Care of Nurses at Stony Wold.

Margaret Conrad read a paper reviewing the function of the nurse, at the New England Hospital Association Convention held in Boston in March.

Winifred Kaltenbach is to attend the Convention at Kansas City as the delegate from the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing.

Dorothy Wandel Bancroft spent several days in Toronto at the time of the meeting of the American College of Surgeons and while her husband attended meetings she visited with Ida Northey Shaw, Marjorie Allen Urquhart and Ada Jean Scott McArthur. Mrs. Bancroft writes: "One evening Marjorie gave a "hen" dinner for us and beside the aforementioned there were Gladys Stark, '17, Marion May, '22, and Loula McAndrew Evans, '19. At another dinner Pauline Ivey Robertson, '14, and her husband, Dr. Robertson were among the P.H. group.

1927

Helen Scott is going to the convention at Kansas City as the delegate from the headnurses. Her expenses will be paid from the Headnurses Convention Fund.

1931

Sympathy is extended to Emily Simonson in the loss of her father who died in January.

Marguerite Collyer has accepted the position of School Nurse at Lake Mahopac.

Ellen Coyle has completed the studies required for the Bachelor of Science degree at Teachers College.

1933

Eloise Jennings Carlton writes from Picayune, Miss.: "Can you imagine living in a place where there is not even a hospital? A small private sanitorium is the only boast of the town. There is a good field in this state for Public Health work. . . Mr. Carlton is director of Plant Research doing experimental work on Tung tree."

Frances Allen Rossiter has resigned from the presidency of The Auxiliary for the Care of Nurses at Stony Wold. Mrs. Rossiter is to be commended upon her accomplishment as first president of this very worthy organization.

Verna Stevens Houghton is charge nurse in the minor operating room of the Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital.

1936

Elsa Hellander has been doing private nursing in Kansas City for the last year.

1937

Helen Curtis has a position at the Womans' Free Hospital in Boston.

Caroline J. Anderson is with the Detroit Visiting Nursing Bureau.

Alice B. Cameron has been awarded the May S. B. Large Memorial Medal and Fund by the Westchester Chapter of the American Red Cross The award is made each year to an outstanding student of the Red Cross Course in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick, and who has successfully completed a course in a School of Nursing. Miss Cameron is now a member of the Staff of the Mary Harkness Home at Port Chester, N. Y.

ALUMNAE MEETING

The regular quarterly meeting of the Alumnae Association was held in Maxwell Hall Auditorium, February 17.

All members present were much interested in Miss Young's announcement of the establishment of 8-hour duty for all bedside nurses throughout the hospital. We all feel that this is a great step for improved nursing service.

We were brought up to date on the status of the then-pending new Nurse Practice Act. Miss Thomas reported on a special Forum of District No. 13 held in January relative to the matter. She also read the minutes of the Committee for the Dance and Bridge Benefit which is being held April 20 at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

After the short business meeting the Senior Class of the School presented an excellent History of Nursing pageant. The production showed much thought and ingenuity on the part of the students, and all members present were delighted with the pageant.

Delicious refreshments were served in the lounge at the close of the entertainment.

GRADUATION

As always at this time of the year we are looking forward to graduation! The festivities will begin the evening of Wednesday, June 1st when the Alumnae Association will have the graduating class as their guests at dinner at the Hotel Pierre.

The following day, Thursday, June 2nd, the graduating exercises for the Class of 1938 will be held in the garden. Dr. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, Rector, Trinity Church, Boston, will give the address. Immediately following the exercises there will be a reception at the hospital. Arrangements for these may be made through the school office and everyone will be glad to help you. The classes who are planning reunions this year and the class chairmen are as follows:

1898—40th anniversary.
1903—35th anniversary.
1908—30th anniversary.	Louise M. Marsh.
1913—25th anniversary.	Elinor Posey Ewing.
1918—20th anniversary.	Helen S. Clark Meleney.
1923—15th anniversary.	Louise Christman.
1928—10th anniversary.	Rhoda F. Reddig.
	Marie V. A. Brundage.
1933— 5th anniversary.	Lillian M. Hall.

1919—Special Reunion. Alice W. Bliss Smith (home on furlough).

Friday, June 3rd, is Alumnae Day and that afternoon we have our annual alumnae meeting in Maxwell Hall. The Hobby Show will be featured as usual. Miss Manola Phillips will be delighted to receive your pieces of handiwork at 179 Fort Washington Avenue. An explanatory note should come with everything which you send.

SCHOOL NEWS

The ball of activity has rolled with great speed into this new year of 1938 and Maxwell Hall is the continuous scene of many interesting and enthusiastically supported occasions.

Our Hall clubs continue to grow and flourish. On March 11 the Dramatic Club presented "Meet the Duchess," a three act play with a cast of ten students. This entertainment was well attended ,and was followed by refreshments and "open house." Glee Club has not given a Spring concert as is customary, but instead its fifty members are concentrating on rehearsals for "Following Foster's Footsteps," an operetta to be given early in May. Because this is an entirely new type of project we are particularly anxious to make it a success. Two "open" meetings have been held recently by Forum Club. At the first, on February 1st, Dr. Lynskey, who holds the chair of Government at Hunter College, spoke most interestingly on the Foreign Policy of the United States. The second meeting held on March 8th presented Dr. Henry Mayer who showed colored moving pictures, with musical accompaniment, of his world travels. As a special project this winter Forum Club is raising, by various and ingenious methods, one hundred dollars for relief work in China—and they are making good. The March issue of "Student Prints" was a tenth anniversary number of our new Medical Center and was devoted entirely to both interesting and humorous developments since "moving day" March 26th, 1928. An increasingly popular and well-managed organization of the Hall is the Lending Library, at which the very latest books of all types are available at a nominal rental fee. Weekly tap-dancing classes have been started and are under the instruction of Miss Manola Phillips.

Recipients of the ten Alumnae Association Scholarships for 1938 were announced in March. Those grateful and appreciative students are: Class of 1938—Miss L. Buffinton, Providence, R. I.; Class of 1939—the Misses E. Purick, Bridgehampton, L. I.; T. Westcott, Utica, N. Y., and J. Hopkins, St. Johnsville, N. Y.; Class of 1940—the Misses S. Ralph, Jamaica, L. I.; W. Elder, Berwick, Pa.; J. Bennett, Johnstown, N. Y.; V. Maxwell, Galesburg, Ill.; M. Reis, Worcester, Ohio, and Mrs. A. Potter, St. George, New Brunswick.

Graduate nurses and Senior students have been attending a series, arranged by Miss Conrad, of five lectures on Social Hygiene, delivered by outstanding persons in this field. We are particularly appreciative of this opportunity in view of the nation-wide campaign which is going on today.

During the past few months two new pictures of Miss Nightingale have been presented to our collection by Mr. Richard C. Colt. On Wednesday, March 16th, forty first year students from the New York Hospital accompanied by Miss Margaret Wyatt, instructress in Practical Nursing at that institution, were our guests for tea and were afterward taken on a "tour" including our Nightingale collection, Miss Maxwell's collection, and other articles of professional interest which we are proud to possess. Hostesses for the afternoon were members of the February class of 1939, who are responsible for the present arrangement and cataloguing of our famous collection.

On three Monday afternoons during March Dr. Haven Emerson, Professor of Public Health Practice, College of Physicians and Surgeons, delivered to the Senior class in Professional Problems a series of lectures entitled "Three Eras of Public Health." We consider ourselves very fortunate to have had the opportunity to hear such a well informed and interesting person, and we are grateful to Dr. Emerson for giving to us so much of his valuable time.

On March 10th the annual Red Cross Party for Senior students in schools of nursing in New York City was held at Headquarters. Our sixty Seniors finally had their "turn" and enjoyed a delightful evening. Miss Ida F. Butler from Washington, who is director of the American Red Cross Nursing Service, spoke on Red Cross work and appealed for an increase in membership in that organization. Films of flood relief were shown. Miss Alta E. Dines presided over the meeting. The following members of the Red Cross Nursing Service, dressed in the Red Cross uniform, acted as hostesses: the Misses Florence M. Johnson, Mary M. Roberts, Mary Magoun Brown, Mary F. Holland, Catherine B. Hay, Annie M. Thomas, Frances Bell, Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Aikle.

Dr. R. H. Egerton Elliott has been appointed Instructor in Surgical Nursing beginning April 1, 1938.

THEODORA WESTCOTT,
Maxwell Hall.

CLASS SCHEDULES

No February class was entered in the School of Nursing this year. Twenty-six candidates for the degree, and forty-eight for the diploma only, were registered for the second semester—six of these students being transfers from former sections.

On February first, the new division for the blocks of classes went into effect. Instead of the allotment of 10 weeks to the Freshman and 6 weeks to the Junior schedule, the total 16-week period is evenly divided into an 8-week term for each, all Freshman classes being given in the spring and all Junior classes in the fall.

The University has appropriated funds to supply general duty nursing equivalent to two hours per student per class day.

The students' program during the eight weeks of Freshman classes now includes three hours of duty on the wards and four hours of class during five class days weekly (the Saturday and Sunday schedule remains unchanged).

It is hoped that this long desired change will result in less fatigue for the students and better scholastic achievement because of greater concentration on the educational phases of the term.

WELCOMING CEREMONIES

[Margaret Eliot, '21, was invited by the students to be the speaker at the "Welcoming Ceremonies" which were held on January 21st this year. Following is her address.]

Miss Young, the faculty, our guests and the Class of 1940! I am honored to be asked to speak to you tonight and I hope I will live up to that honor.

This welcoming ceremony has been well named because the meaning of welcome is the privilege to use and enjoy. Tonight our School of Nursing is giving you that privilege to use and enjoy as you will. You must use it to make as much of yourselves and your nursing as you possibly can and if you develop in the right way you cannot help but enjoy your work. You have chosen a great profession and it must give you a feeling of deep satisfaction to know that now you have a real purpose in life. We have a definite plan for you for the months ahead during which you will receive teaching and guidance. Part of this will come in the class room and part of it with patients. Florence Nightingale wrote in one of her letters: "A nurse may know all there is in books but her patients will be none the better for it." Every day you will be learning things through your experience which we cannot possibly teach you. To be a good nurse one must have a fund of knowledge and also the ability to apply it.

In your nursing care we want you to think of and treat each patient as an individual. Each is a human being with his own situation.

Just consider for a moment what it means for a patient to have a nurse who is understanding. Take for instance, a patient coming to the hospital for an operation. In order to help make this patient well you need not only skill and knowledge but also appreciation of his human feelings. Your approach to this patient is the reflection of your own personality. It is here that your success—or failure lies! We feel that you have the possibilities of becoming good nurses. I want to emphasize that all our efforts in teaching and helping you are of no avail unless you yourselves make the most of every opportunity to develop that intangible something which makes a real nurse! The secret of your success rests with you. The reputation of our school will help you perhaps in getting started but in the last analysis your success will be judged by what you yourself make of your work. Good nurses are always in demand.

This afternoon I have been at another hospital in the city giving nurses their examinations in nursing practce for the State Board of Regents. They were nurses who have just completed their courses in the different schools in this vicinity. Not only by their skill and knowledge but by their personalties and attitude one could tell about how successful they will be in their chosen profession.

Every one gets great satisfaction from a thing well done and through this, great enjoyment. To my mind there is no satisfaction greater than to be able to make someone who is ill and suffering more comfortable by what I can do for them. It is a thrilling experience, I think.

Today we see nurses taking an active part not only in the care of the sick but in taking measures to prevent illness in teaching people at home and in the communities how to care for themselves and their families.

Nursing offers you great opportunities and takes everything in you which you have to give. If you give unselfishly of your sympathy, good judgment and skill, great satisfaction will be yours. Each one of you will get out of it as much and more than you can possibly give.

I am sure your families and friends are rejoicing with you tonight and are happy too that you have arrived at this—shall we say—first milestone in your nursing career. They may have advised you to come here or may have been rather luke warm in encouraging you or may have been even rather opposed to your idea of your wanting to be a nurse, but tonight they are all glad of your decision and are just about as proud of your beautiful white caps as you are.

In closing may I quote from Miss Anne W. Goodrich, Dean Emeritus, Yale University School of Nursing: "To the eager army of youth, with its aspirations, its zeal, its new understanding of the reason of things, the world looks for its new undertakings. To no field does the call for the finest expression of womanhood come with greater insistence or greater justification than that of nursing,—a call that cannot be denied."

And so we all take great pleasure in welcoming you tonight.

NEWS ITEMS

Reprint From the New York Times—March 17, 1938.

"The Senate completed legislative action tonight on the Todd bill, sponsored by the New York State Nurses' Association, which requires the licensing of both registered and practical nurses throughout the State. When the bill came up for final passage, Senator Dunnigan asked Senator Feld, co-sponsor of the measure in the upper House, if 'all nursing organizations in the State were in favor of it.' Mr. Feld replied that 'all but the C. I. O. are,' and the measure was then unanimously passed."

The Governor signed this bill on the 5th of April.

A series of six lectures on Social Hygiene have been given during March and April at the Medical Center. These lectures have been given in co-operation with the Social Hygiene Committee of the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association. They have been well attended by graduate nurses, senior student nurses, social workers and dieticians.

The Annual Institute planned by District No. 13 was held on April 4th, 5th and 6th. The program was well planned with interesting lectures held at the Hotel Pennsylvania, and well arranged demonstrations at the various hospitals. Eleanor Lee, '20, was chairman of the Demonstrations given at the Medical Center. At these demonstrations, Dr. Alvin F. Coburn discussed the Clinical value of the Sedimentation Rate; Dr. John L. Caughey, the Clinical Value of the Venous Pressure Test; Dr. Yale Kneeland, Jr., New Developments in Serum Therapy in Pneumonia, and Dr. Joseph Turner gave a Report of Cases.

Members of the Alumnae will be sorry to hear that Miss Maxwell's only surviving sister, Mrs. Lapham, fell and fractured her hip early in March. She is with her daughter in Ellenville, N. Y. The last reports indicated a favorable progress.

EASTWARD HO!

[Trips, those rainy day tours, taken through the family travel books, first stimulated Marion Sieverts Holland, '26, to take them in reality. Art and Literature and the study of German in college further fostered this desire, which has been frequently realized by interesting and unusual trips taken during the Summer holidays. In the following article Miss Holland has sketched for us her plans for six weeks' travel abroad this Summer.]

'Tis spring again, heralding your holiday and mine, setting the wanderlust of winter's dream castle aglow.

Back? Of course, I am going back to the "joie de vivre" that lurks in the jewel city of Budapest, in its gypsy rhythms, its Danubian currents and jewel marts. I am going back to sail in the hollowed tree trunk boats which ply the rapids of Poland's Pieniny gorges; back to visit the peaceful peasantry of Zdiar, nestled in their striped landscape, 'neath the towering Tatras of Czechoslovakia. I will wend southward to the paradise lakes of Bohin and Bled in Slovenia, and asea to the Karst-walled fjords of Kotor, Jugoslavia, and yet onward to the fortressed port of Jason's triremes, Ragusa. Landward I'm flown to heed the singing muezzins of Sarjevo, and thence, asea again to drift in an Albanian moonlight glow down the Adriatic to Napoli, Sorrento, and the Isle of Capri.

The lure that ever calls is irresistible, but anon, it is back to the lands of the midnight sun, I am setting.

I have been thrilled by a record sail on the "Normandie", by banner voyages on the fair weather ship, the "Conte", ace of hospitality, where wines and spumoni excel. I have spent five happy days on the "Europa's" decks where gaiety centers in its spacious salt water pool, and now, I long to test the Swedish sailors' artistry. The "Kungsholm" is the ship for me.

They are here, those six precious weeks of freedom in which to spend my modest five hundred dollar vacation budget, deducting two hundred and forty-six dollars for the tourist round trip passage. The siren blast ushers in nine days of shipboard revelry 'til there is land ho, and the spires of Goteborg welcome. A six hour train jaunt thru tidy farmlands where red barns stand out like major domos amid the verdant stretches, in a crystal clear landscape, brings me to Stockholm. There is a reunion in store, with friends who will reacquaint me with Skansen, the wiles of Dalecarlia and the night life of Bäckahästen and "Blue Heaven."

A week has sped and this morning, as the city becomes astir, I don my farewell corsage of blue and yellow, and presenting my thirty dollar ticket to the Luft Hansa pilot, take a four hour flight to that old world country on the Baltic, Esthonia, just at the back door of Russia. Its dear, old world towns beckon to renewed explorations.

Here the charm of Byzantine, pagan and Russian antiquity lives on in its medieval cities. It lurks most abundantly in Tallinn, often known as Reval, in its quaint, red roofed, gabled houses, in its hidden courtyards, guarding the unexpected, its unique church spires and dominating eleventh century castle, that walled stronghold of Dane, Swede, German and Russian in turn.

Yet an hour distant lies Tartu, Oxford of the Baltic, the students' rendezvous and a treasure house of the finest book collection in Eastern Europe.

Three hours afar is Narva, the twin fortressed town, bearing the stamp of merchant wealth from Armenia, Persia and their old time neighbor, Peter the Great. I catch the local spirit while dining among Esthonian garrison forces at "The Petersburg".

Parnu invites to its flower marts for costume hunting and is a haven from which to set out for the island paradises, unspoiled and primitive; Hiiumaa, isle of wild roses and juniper; Saaremaa, the architect's delight, with its red roofed, pink, creamy yellow and mauve houses, and Wormsi, isle of windmills.

Holiday maker, hobby seeker, book lover, architect, artist, student and nomad finds this country a veritable curiosity shop in which to roam two weeks or loll in the reaches of sand dunes crowning its shores, and live like a king for ten dollars a week.

One boasts an avoirdupois, acquired from the hearty 2 P.M. dinners at "du Nord" and "Guld Lovi", or an evening of feasting with dancing at "Cafe Corse" and afternoon teas at "Stude's" and "Feischer's", Tallinn.

I will lay in a store of national souvenirs: silverwork, pottery, amber, carved wooden, double spoons and a bride's chest from Saaremaa while ambling mid Esthonia's charm.

And there are yet more vacation days. Shall it be south to Turkey and home by Mediterranean shores, or westward, I entrain, to friends and the gaiety that is Warsaw? There can then be a "bon voyage" from Gydnia, on Poland's barter ship,

"Pilsudski", with a stop over to say "Hello", in Copenhagen to Danish friends.

There is yet time to choose. Come, I adjure you! See the old world. "Eastward Ho", there's glamour of the sea ahead and ever another tomorrow to reawaken to an old and needier call.

ATHENS, GREECE

[Euphrosyne Argyropoulou, '32, is now at the Children's Hospital in Athens. The following interesting account of her experiences is taken from a letter written to Miss Young on December 22, 1937.]

My very first experience of work was in the Evangelismos Hospital, in Athens. I was a charge nurse over ninety patients with a very small number of new practical nurses and personnel. I always connect the name "Evangelismos Hospital" to a school where one learns the hardships of life and the study of characters of all types of people.

For eighteen months I worked in a small beautiful island of the Ionian Sea, in Zakynthus, reorganizing the Philanthropic Institutions of this island; namely, a small hospital, an aged home, and an infants asylum. Besides, I helped start an outpatient department, a small orphanage, and distributing food every other day to the poor in their homes during the winter season. It was a very interesting semi-governmental work among the poor people of this island. After accomplishing a rather hard task, I was called to help reorganize a department in the Children's Hospital, leaving in my place a graduate nurse to carry on the work in Zakynthus.

The Children's Hospital in Athens, and the only one in the country was built forty years ago by Queen Sophia of Greece. Until lately, the hospital had undergone several changes, due mostly to financial difficulties. Two years ago the Patriotic League took over the hospital with all its departments. Ever since then it has been gradually remodeled and reorganized. So far we have the infants, contagious and the general children's departments. We take children up to twelve years old. In the near future, we hope to add a surgical and orthopedic department. Within two months a new building will be all ready to house the new Patriotic League school of nursing with Miss Wilms as the director of the school, and Princess Irene as the President.

We are all very busy preparing new facilities for the departments where the student nurses will be taught the elementary nursing technic. I am supervising in the model infants department where students from other hospitals have to come for affiliation. My work is fascinating, even though under many handicaps.

In the middle of my work, last summer, I was chosen by His Majesty, the King of Greece, to nurse one of His English guests, whose family had been so good to our King when in exile in England, staying with Him in the summer palace in Corfu. I lived in the palace seven weeks. It was a most thrilling experience to know His Majesty.

The work in Greece has been a hard task—believe me—but patiently and silently, as we were taught, I have gone on and am going on at my work.

These are my experiences. Reading them, if you think I accomplished anything worthwhile, I owe it to you, and to the training you have given me.

Through it all, wearing the Presbyterian Hospital uniform, my aim was to keep it proudly up to the high standards set by you, Miss Maxwell, and others. I always am thankful to you for all you did for me while in America.

I was so touched to read in the Quarterly Magazine and the American Journal of Nursing that you got the Columbia University Medal. I was so pleased, but not surprised, knowing you are worth it.

PIONEERING IN AMERICA

Palm Springs, California.

[In a letter to Miss Young, Georgina Thompson Griffith, '18, tells of the floods in California this Spring, and of the organization of Public Health and Red Cross Services.]

These last two seasons have been "unusual" in California. The recent floods certainly were devastating. Palm Springs was among the very most fortunate, contrary to press and radio reports. True, a bridge was washed out, and we used our fireplaces and candles for light for some three days, but no damage was done in the village. We had to move three families from tents to houses, but that covered our rescue work.

We desert rats (Miss Young, can you believe I have lived here for ten years?) were more than upset to have our radios tell us that Palm Springs was under two feet of water. Not being able to talk back made it that much worse. When the power went off and the radio could no longer tell us of our sorry plight we felt better.

Through the Anaheim-San Bernardino district, the whole terrain is really changed, and the loss of life horrible. They are still finding bodies in the mud in what before was a garden country.

We have but one nurse doing Public Health and School work. Our school has five hundred children in it, so you can guess she has little time for community service. In the past three years I have done a good deal of charity work in a voluntary way. However, since the town outgrew our Public Health situation, the Chamber of Commerce asked me to assist. Not being really qualified, I would not accept salary, but have an expense account. This includes maid's wages, and gas and oil for my car. I have really been very busy all winter but it has been a real thrill to me. The town is incorporating this Spring, which means our city will have a welfare department which will be a blessing. I will have the satisfaction of feeling that perhaps I have been of some service in the interim.

This year Palm Springs formed its own Branch Chapter of the American Red Cross, and I am Home Service Chairman. At present we are working on a Supply Closet to include everything for the sick room, plus crutches, wheelchairs, etc. We think this will be a grand service, since we have no hospital here. Other objectives of the chapter at present are: Braille work, First Aid, and Life Saving. We hope to achieve much.

My boy is really quite a young man. He was eight the first day of February, and has only ten more weeks of school to complete third grade. He has been so well at school this year, that he has not missed a day.

When I started this letter, I meant merely to write a note of thanks and enclose the check, but it has turned into a regular epistle.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

DEAN RAPPLEYE

Mr. President, Members of the Graduating Class and Friends of the School of Nursing: It was Ben Johnson who once remarked: "It is of the highest of earthly honors to be descended from the great and the good." Those of you who are about to enter upon your career as nurses may well feel proud of the professional ancestry and rejoice in the traditions which have made nursing one of the noble callings of life. But please remember that the traditions of which you may so justly feel proud exist today only because of the sacrifices of our early leaders of the profession and the high and lofty ideals for which it stands. Yours is a real responsibility to carry on and extend the humanitarian services which have made nursing one of the most important and indispensable functions of society. Never have there been greater opportunities than now in your profession to contribute to the well-being and happiness of your fellowman and to obtain for yourselves that enduring satisfaction which comes only from unselfish service to others. We of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing—and I speak of it as "we"—are confident that you will carry on the traditions of this institution which is founded on the inspiration of Florence Nightingale, the courage and vision of Anna Maxwell and the devotion and skill of Helen Young. Please be assured you are entering your professional life with our best wishes for every success and happiness in your own chosen field of nursing.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

DR. ARTHUR LEE KINSOLVING

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen and more especially members of this Graduating Class: At this Commencement, we have come upon one of those moments in life that seems to reveal its true dimensions. The theme of the address which I have in mind may be stated as "The Fourth Dimension in Nursing; the Spirit".

But may I first acknowledge that the dimensions of the responsibility unaccountably accorded to me on this occasion are quite beyond my ordinary experience. Those of us who dwell out in the provinces are not used to being summoned to the center of things to speak at the celebration of so great a hospital and nurses training school.

In his gracious invitation, Mr. Kinnicutt mentioned some of the eminent persons who had formerly made addresses on this occasion. Though aimed to attract, this quite intimidated me. And yet I come because of a sincere admiration for nurses and an interest in your vocation. I know you well enough at least to know better than to break Rule I, which is to soft-pedal high-flown references to Florence Nightingale. I reluctantly obey a suggestion sent on by one of your number, "Please do not call us noble."

Would that I had the wit or the ingenuity to excite your special attention by announcing a theme which had a touch of novelty about it but I shall doubtless be reiterating that which you must frequently tell yourselves and exactly what you expect to hear when a clergyman comes to give your Baccalaureate address.

How shall we state the matter? Most young doctors and nurses become absorbingly interested in the phenomena of disease, the diagnosis, treatment and cure. Now it so happens that diseases occur in people. But the center of interest may be in the disease rather than the person in whom it occurs.

My friend and Vestryman, Dr. Jason Mixter, told me that his father used to say, "You may view an individual as a case or as a patient and between these two there is all the difference." In the research laboratory or in the operating room, though the basic motive may be spiritual, the preoccupation is almost bound to be with the scientific interest. In the operating room there is a certain type of nurse who finds her chiefest satisfaction in the perfection of a technique and in the spirit of team play that provides the organization that makes the modern wonders of surgery possible.

And yet without further qualification, I should be disposed to affirm that the genius, the satisfaction and the achievements of nursing find their fulfillment only in terms of an intense interest in the individual and a religious consecration of one's sympathies in the service of the particular patient.

It is your part to perform a service of Holy Matrimony, the perfect marriage between the scientific and the spiritual interests of your profession toward which I am sure your training has already disposed you.

If I may exercise the privilege in this instance of speaking as a layman, I should venture one observation that the doctors and nurses of greatest insight among us are now occcpied with redressing the balance by giving adequate recognition to the spiritual factors in the cure of the sick. In the achievement of this end, you occupy a strategic place. For you enter most intimately into the personal equation that each patient presents.

An Italian laborer was recently brought into the Johns Hopkins Hospital with a serious set of fractures sustained in a construction project. After the bones were properly set, the patient refused to improve as expected. Communication with him was difficult because he did not speak English. Finally, they resorted to the expedient of assigning an Italian nurse to take care of him. She readily discovered that this man, in a new and strange country, was tortured by an agony of fear as to what might be happening to his family. So soon as this fear was removed, and by the remedial sympathy of a nurse who was his fellow-country woman, he began quickly to mend.

There are in human beings many more forms of sensitiveness than those catalogued by skin tests to determine allergies. A little lad was recently brought to the Children's Hospital. They tested him for eggs, for fish, for grasses, and finally they told him they were testing him to see if he was sensitive to horses. When his mother who was standing by remarked, "But Johnny doesn't see any horses", he replied, "But Mother, I am sensitive to lions."

No small part of the adventure of modern medicine is the discovery of the play and interplay of our fears and phobias upon the physical organism. An increasing percentage of human maladies seem traceable to troubles that may be characterized as mental and spiritual.

At this point, I shall venture to record a malady which may be new in medical annals. A teacher in one of the Boston public schools sent one of her pupils to the hospital convinced that he was suffering from St. Vitus' Dance. He was forever squirming about and could not stand on his feet and give a direct answer to any question without going into the most grotesque contortions. The doctor, a friend of mine at Oxford, finally got the boy to speak for himself. "You see, it's this way. I broke my belt and Father lent me his, and I couldn't tell the teacher, but it really doesn't feel like it's going to keep my pants up."

Dr. Joseph Pratt, one of my parishioners, and the head of the Boston Dispensary, has been pointing out in recent years that every patient who enters the hospital has a spiritual history to be taken quite as much into account as the medical history. Every single individual is deserving of study. The roots of the maladies of your patients may go very deep and you, the nurse, may be the only one who will ever be given the full opportunity to explore and discover exactly what has twisted their personalities and deformed their lives. And since, in contrast to the doctor's ten or fifteen minutes opportunity for daily observation, you have eight hours to observe the patient, your chance to make an important contribution to the diagnosis is patent.

But beyond that, I am impressed with the significant spiritual influence which you may exert. In your contribution, there is something which seems to me more significant than what you do which will derive from what you are. I should call in question the attitude that when a nurse is off duty, her conduct of life is nobody's business. I am sure that your calling and my calling coincide in this particular, that like Jesus, "for their sakes, we must consecrate ourselves", that the real contribution we may hope to make will come even unnoticed by ourselves when we may be used by some Higher power for restoring the soul of a person who is beaten by life.

I should attribute very great importance to the fact that you deal with many fewer persons per week than a clergyman. My opportunities are well-nigh pre-empted just because I speak to so many people each week. I sometimes covet your opportunity of concentrating on a private patient in the hope that I might lift a few eternal burdens.

This dedication of yourself to a very few people demands the spiritual vision and insight which discerns the exceeding great importance of the individual in the sight of God. Only as you are moved by that strange haunting passion for the cure of souls, only as there burns in you that intemperate desire which shines with such brilliance in Jesus that men might have life and have it more abundantly, will you be reminded of the worthwhileness of your task.

You see, we bespeak from you far more than mere professional services. We look to you for human compassion because you get us when we're down. Eighteen months ago, I was a patient in a hospital maintained by the Episcopal Church. During convalescence, in the late afternoon or eventide, I had occasion to ponder the meaning of that hospital, and lo, it was a holy place dedicated to bringing the grace of God to suffering humanity. I realized vividly the essential equation of the purpose of the Church and the Hospital. We share the commission to reach and to quicken the spirits of men and to remind them again of the great-heartedness of God in whom they may put their trust. But in order to do so, we ourselves must have a sense of trust in God and our natures must be daily infused with the warmth of His love.

Into my office one day this winter came a woman who was taking with great seriousness the request of a group of nurses to address them. They looked to her as an older friend who seemed to have a grasp of the meaning of life. When I asked her what she intended to say, she told me that her main concern was that she had met so many nurses who, in the economic insecurity of modern times, seemed to feel no fundamental foundation to their lives, no inward assurance that God who had called them to this service would sustain them and enable them to see that purpose through. She added that she had come to a minister to find out how to convey to nurses the importance of their prayer life, that through prayer they might find themselves fortified against the wear and strain and disillusionment of their exacting calling. For short of this, she felt that many nurses would meet an experience which would be a very conjugation of defeatism.

How can I tell you how sure I am that the ultimate equipment for your service is spiritual? It is always a good sight to me to encounter some of the veterans of your profession, the ones who are giving to our great hospitals the spirit that animates them. Just for instance, at the Administration Desk at the Children's Hospital in Boston, Miss Hedley, a great human being, a Scotch Presbyterian, of the type that only religion has seemed to produce. Her friends would be most surprised to know that she is 73 years old and just as interested today as she was 40 years ago to face again each day that unending line of applicants with their stories of woe and suffering. Shrewd and discriminating, she is quick to trust one mother's story, and to discount another as she allocates one to the medical, another to the surgical, and another to the orthopedic wing. She manifests an uncanny power of quick diagnosis. Watching mothers enter in desperate anxiety, she readily makes them feel that they have come to exactly the right place and all will be well. Each day from her friendly, hospitable personality, an uncounted amount of good seems to accrue. Her quick eyes are always seeking opportunities to do more than was expected. This I may illustrate by one little story.

A certain Mrs. Temple brought in a little boy who was ill and because there was no other place to leave her, little sister came too. While admitting the boy, Miss Hedley noticed that the little girl's breathing was not exactly right; that there was somewhat of a wheeze. The mother strongly insisted that the little girl was all right and was not brought in as a patient. But when she found there was asthma in her history, Miss Hedley persuaded the mother to register her daughter, who, curiously enough, was named Shirley Temple, as a patient. The examining doctor was puzzled about what he heard, or rather did not hear in one lung. "What caused your asthma"? he asked. "My mother says it might be carrots". And not long after, a large piece of carrot was found in that lung. No wonder her breathing was not perfect!

Your profession, with all its discipline and its difficulties, is, in my opinion, the happiest I know. Without reservation or any insincerity, I congratulate you with all my heart on your vocation and your training.

As we began this autumn at Trinity Church, Dr. Richard Cabot gave a memorable address to 400 students on what he called, "The Wisdom of the Body". From his long experience, he illustrated the fact that howsoever we abuse our bodies, there is an intelligent, benign, and patient force working ever toward our health. No one could have failed to share to some extent in his vision of the spirit of God indwelling our life, seeking against all obstacles to give us life. You are but one more manifestation of that power that is working for the health of mankind. You have consecrated yourself to work in partnership with this Spirit of Life. I believe that it is He and none other who has sown it in your natures and dispositions to want to be trained nurses. You may be sure that He who has called you to this service will go with you and enable you in every situation to minister to the sick and suffering sons of men.

I trust that this may be to you an inspiration to regard yourselves as dedicated to this service that you may be attuned to His Spirit as you speak and act. For in the long last, it is the Spirit that counts and does the greatest things.

Over the doors of your Hospital, there is inscribed, "For of the Most High cometh healing". When you are working, perspiring in the most mundane tasks there are, for part of the glory is that in your profession you are willing humbly to accept any task, I hope that there will be a sort of rainbow round your shoulder, as of one being overshadowed by the Most High. And so may those who call upon you find more than just the healing of their bodies. May they in your sympathy and in your Spirit find that which will uplift their tired and bruised souls.

MR. SAGE'S ADDRESS TO THE GRADUATING CLASS

Members of the Graduating Class: If you but seek it, today you may take a long and rugged trail which leads on and ever upward to the summits where Peace resides. The way has been blazed by men and women who have toiled in the search for Truth, and have given to the utmost of effort and of faith that the fellowship of man might be fulfilled. Those who travel this trail labor as comrades to broaden and ease the path for each other and for those who follow. Thus they find the strength and the wisdom which life has to give. Emerson once said, "Only so much do I know as I have lived". Truly, the hidden treasures of life are opened to those who give their all to life, and the return is magnified an hundred fold.

Our mutual and rightful heritage is comradeship. A wealth of meaning is wrapped within the word. It signifies a giving without thought of return and a receiving without appraisal of reward. It means unity within oneself and with others. Its highest manifestation is found in the life of the Man of Nazareth. Comradeship is more than ever needed today in a world torn with strife, where vaulting but selfish and sterile ambition, a very Juggernaut of jealousy, rolls on, crushing freedom of thought and liberty of action.

To be alien to hatred and akin to the harmonies of comradeship is to travel the long trail alert and eager to know the truth and to point the way for other path-finders. Such a spirit is the lode-star of any life of service and its genius can solve the problems that today beset the world and you.

Be good comrades. Make easier the way for those who lead you and extend a helping hand to such as struggle behind. I believe that in the life of the Presbyterian Hospital you must have already discerned the substance of which my words are but a reflection. It was there that I found it, and there may it ever abide.

GRADUATION ACTIVITIES

Graduation day dawned this year a rather cloudy, misty day. That sent all our hearts a-fluttering, but by noon the sky was blue, the clouds fleecy and white, the air balmy, and everything pointed to an ideal day. And such it was. The garden looked beautiful, blue and white flowers sounding the keynote to Presbyterian's day. The procession of Alumnae was thrilling as ever. They were followed by the faculty and then by "The people of the hour," the graduating class numbering 63. They looked lovely in their starched "blue and white" with corsages of extraordinarily beautiful red roses.

Mr. Sage presided and introduced Dr. Rappelye, Dean of the Medical School, who spoke with pride of its new department, The School of Nursing. Dr. Kinsolving gave the address of the day. He stressed the spiritual aspect of nursing. He gave all who heard him much to ponder over at a later date. The presentation of the pins and diplomas was attended by the usual amount of clapping, broad grins, proud parents, and thrills to the recipients. Then came the "piece de resistance"—the recessional of the graduating class led by Miss Young and Miss Conrad, followed by the formation of the now famous "arch of diplomas". A lovely reception was held in and about Maxwell Hall after the exercises and happiness reigned.

The Alumnae Association had entertained the graduating class at a fine dinner at the Hotel Pierre on the evening of May 31, 1938. The perennial success of this occasion is credited to Margaret Eliot, '21, whose untiring efforts make these dinners a momentous occasion for each class.

On the day following graduation the new graduates were received into the Alumnae Association. The meeting was held at Maxwell Hall. During the meeting the election of Officers was announced, and our new president, Mrs. Fordyce B. St. John was presented. Many thanks and much admiration are due Miss Marie Byron, our retiring president. She has done a splendid piece of work as our leader and we are grateful.

Then followed the beloved "social hour" when all the old friends get together and enjoy remembering all the funny things that happened "When I was in training". All the newcomers are welcomed personally and everyone eats her fill of delicious refreshments.

By Friday evening all agreed that it had been a lovely graduation and everyone had had a wonderful time.

HELEN C. GOODALE, '32.

—— REUNION CLASSES ——

As one of the earlier classes, the class of '98 numbered only 19—of these 14 are still with us.

After so many years we thought it quite remarkable that 6 were with us at the reunion. The 6 present were:

Emily Clatworthy
Florence Isabel Brown (Mrs. Byers)
Lucy Fidelia Ryder (Mrs. Jordon)
Carolyn Stryker
Inez Newman
Janet Christie

Miss Newman could not join us for luncheon but came to the graduation exercises and to the reception in Maxwell Hall.

We had hoped that Georgia Bellinger and Charlotte Webster would be with us but both were obliged to leave town before the date of graduation.

After a delicious luncheon letters were read from absent members. We were sorry to learn from Mary Gilfillan's (Mrs. Hewett) letter that she has had a serious illness and glad to hear she is making a good recovery.

Gertrude Strain (Mrs. Garrison) was also absent because of illness.

An especially interesting letter was read from Lora Hyde (Mrs. Gihon) whose studio in Paris, some of our graduates have visited.

We were delighted to hear of her work and of her life as a successful artist. Her paintings have been hung in the French Salon and photographs of two that have recently been exhibited there came with her letter.

She also sent us a recent photograph of herself in which she looks as young and handsome as in the days when we knew her.

As we enjoyed our coffee personal histories were related and many incidents recalled—amusing and otherwise—of our days in the old P. H.

We felt that the wonderful spirit that prevailed while Miss Maxwell was with us—and of which we are so proud—is being carried on in the same way by Miss Young.

Each graduate, as she returns, finds the warmest welcome awaiting her and is made to feel that she has a real part in the traditions of the school.

We appreciate the kindness and interest of Miss Young and the Managers of the hospital in making these delightful reunions possible.

JANET CHRISTIE.

The class of 1908 consisted originally of 36 probationers, 23 of this number were graduated. Four of those graduated are dead, the addresses of three are unknown. An invitation to a reunion luncheon on Graduation Day, June 2nd at the P. H. celebrating the 30th Anniversary of the class was sent to the remaining 16 members.

Brief statistics are given since they are of interest to those unable to be present, also to tell the absent ones they were each and every one cordially remembered, their names spoken and great regret expressed that our comradeship was not shared by the entire sixteen.

Eight attended the luncheon: Gertrude Drake Ballantine, Elizabeth Phillips, Mary Mitchell, Lillian Merrill Knapp, Nellie Meyers Spangenberg, Caroline Bell Boyd, Nancy E. Yost, Louise M. Marsh. A most cordial, friendly, greeting was given to all, new and "old" graduates by Miss Young, Miss Conrad and the School of Nursing Staff on the roof of the hospital. In such an atmosphere of welcome everyone immediately began to loosen up and have a good time. It may have been 30 years since our graduation but we reverted to the age when we received a diploma and a pin and during an excellent luncheon everyone talked at once. However, time was taken out to read the names of the 36 "probs" who originally started with 1908. Even those who stayed with us but a few months were remembered by some one, and the absent ones of the 23 who graduated were all brought vividly to our minds.

Alice Boutwell Pease of Portland, Oregon, unable to come, sent a very interesting letter telling of her "young grandson, son of her eldest son Beadford Pease who is Resident Surgeon at a Portland hospital. Our second child, Barbara, is now working as X-ray technician and Medical Secretary at the Oregon Medical School." We all remember the romance of Alice Boutwell and our popular intern George Pease and it was a great pleasure to hear of them and their interesting family.

So far as we know Mrs. Pease and Jessie Grant Wyse are the only grandmothers of whom 1908 may boast. A very pleasant and interesting letter was received from Mrs. Wyse, Monctom, Canada, enclosing a picture of herself, her husband and "Mr. Wyse's two grandchildren." Congratulations Jessie on acquiring two grandchildren so easily! Mrs. Wyse expected to be with us June 2nd, but, unfortunately for us and her, was prevented from coming. Perhaps we shall have better luck when the next reunion comes around. The pictures of the lovely grandchildren were admired by all.

A note was received from Isabel McClive—"Madam McClive" to us—saying she didn't think she could leave her patient to be with us June 2nd but "this is not final as there may be a change in our plans." However, it was final and to our great regret she did not come.

The Chairman was asked some days before the reunion if she expected to request every class member present to give an account of her life. It seemed better to let every one be happy in her own way and nature take her course, any personal items voluntarily offered being listened to with interest. Therefor for absent members information: Mrs. Lillian Merrill Knapp and Mollie Meyers Spangenberg have children but as number and gender are foggy in the mind exact details must be omitted.

Time passed quickly with letters and talk of this and that until Daisy Bell Boyd announced she was getting into uniform to march in the procession and would represent the rest of our party. The trouble seems to be, while you love the uniform, before you go to one of these reunions (especially if the first is ones 30th) you think you haven't sufficient agility to be putting on and off clothes, when you get there it's surprising how rejuvenating the effect. Having learned this by our first reunion experience, when it gets to be the 35th or 40th Anniversary, doubtless all survivors of 1908 may step out in the blue and white when the band plays.

I am sure those of 1908 who enjoyed the delightful hospitality extended to us by the hospital, the pleasure of seeing old classmates again and the beautiful and impressive spectacle of the commencement exercises will welcome the next reunion.

It is the hope that all who received the 1938 announcement and could not attend may in the meantime get in touch with classmates directly or through the School Office. We missed you, and you missed a memorable experience.

LOUISE M. MARSH,

Commencement Day found ten members of the class of 1913 gathered for lunch to celebrate the 25th Anniversary of the day when, with feelings of relief and satisfaction, they received their pins and diplomas from Miss Maxwell and Mr. Sturges in the assembly room of Florence Nightingale Hall. As they sat, almost overwhelmed by the wonders of the new P. H. and enjoyed such a lunch as could never have come from those kitchens in East 70th Street, there was a feeling of home sickness for the old P. H. which, in spite of many trials and tribulations, they hold in affectionate regard.

Ruth McClelland Lee journeyed from Ithaca and must have felt like a frightened probationer spending the night in Maxwell Hall. Jessie Marks came from Poughkeepsie where she is now living, having retired from the strenuous activities of nursing. New Jersey furnished four of those present—Ruth Lambert Rogers of Nutley, Phoebe Taylor Barclay from West Orange and Eleanor Smith Owen and Elinor Posay Ewing from Montclair. Mabel Ward Cobb was present from Brooklyn. Two of the still active members of the class were present —Edna Smith who is superintendent of Veteran's Memorial Hospital in Ellenville, and Anna Balen who is doing hourly nursing in New York.

Hilda MacDonald sent a telegram of greeting from Truro, Nova Scotia, where she has been for several years teaching at the Normal College. There were letters from Nellie Winey from Orange, New Jersey, from Nell Sherman Eaton from Los Angeles, from Nancy Whitman Wadsworth who was abroad at the time and from Helen Latimer Moore Bennett from Malta. For several years "Lat" and her husband have been enjoying life leisurely cruising on their yacht.

Since the 20th reunion the class has lost by death one of its members, Ada Boone Coffey, and Ethel Moon MacKinnon who attended that reunion is now listed as "address unknown."

ELINOR P. EWING.

The class of 1918 met for its 20th Reunion this year and it proved to be a thoroughly delightful occasion.

We all met on floor R of Presbyterian Hospital at one o'clock for lunch where we received a most cordial greeting from Miss Young and many other old friends who were also re-unioning. Twenty members of the original class appeared and in that number it was a pleasure to have four girls who for various reasons did not graduate but felt loyal enough to return for reunion.

I am sure if those who did not appear in uniform had realized the ease with which varying idiosyncrasies of our figures were taken care of, they would not have hesitated to put on the "blue and white stripes."

A room in Maxwell Hall had been set aside, staffed by an efficient group of student nurses and we were literally poured into our uniforms with no opportunity to leave the room with anything on back to front or upside down. A neat trick was a little piece of apron belt known as an "extension." It was largely used and I hope was not specially invented for the class of '18. The class phenomenon was a member who decided not to attend the luncheon because she was too thin. This condition could have easily been remedied had she worn a uniform as there was a mass of unused safety pins beside the "extensions."

It would be hard to find a more beautifully decorated luncheon table than that which greeted our eyes from the foyer of Floor R as we stepped from the elevator.

Masses of delicate blue and white flowers beautifully arranged spread the length of the long table. Three "Jack Horner" pies of blue and white stripes were each topped by a doll dressed in a P. H. uniform, complete in every detail except a hair net, and these alternated with the flower arrangements. There were corsage bouquets of batchelor buttons, gardenias, and gypsophila tied with silver ribbons, at each place, plus extremely attractive hand painted place cards of slim graceful P. H. nurses with caps well on the backs of their heads. A most daring innovation.

Luncheon was delicious and ended in a burst of epicurean glory with a white cake with pale blue frosting.

During lunch letters and telegrams were read from members of the class who were unable to be present. We indeed all wished they could have been there. A touching and beautiful letter was received from the husband of Helen Gillespie telling us how much Helen had wished to come to her 20th Reunion.

Many of the girls had brought snapshots of events and people of the old 37 East 71st Street days, also photographs of husbands, children, and homes, and it was fun to see them all.

Very flattering verses had been written on the back of each place card. The original idea was for each person to read her own verse but the "poetess" had dealt so kindly with us, that it was found to be impossible to stand up and read such glowing tributes to ourselves, so we read each others.

A photographer appeared to take pictures while we were at lunch, and I feel sure that these will fascinate those who were unable to attend "guessing who that is" will cause many a dull evening to pass quickly away.

All in all, the luncheon was a huge success and to the committee of efficient workers goes our most heartfelt thanks for making it an outstanding day.

After lunch we joined the rest of the graduates, a few of us visiting Mamie on the way down. She unhesitatingly called us each by name. The years have dealt most kindly with Mamie who looks and seems exactly the same as when we left her in 1918.

It was sad to learn that Alexander had died last year.

To one who has not seen the graduation exercises at the New Hospital, I wish to say it is a most impressive sight. The setting is perfect with the magnificent buildings forming a fine background for the well landscaped garden. I am taking it upon myself, though I feel sure it is the earnest wish of all who attended their twentieth reunion, to suggest that the entire class come together when the school of nursing has its fiftieth anniversary four years from now, and may the demand for extensions not exceed the supply.

MARJORIE ROSS ARNOLD.

Eight members of the Class of 1923 met for luncheon in the staff dining room at P. H. to celebrate their 15th reunion. Present were: Netta Allison, Loraine Terhune Stevens, Ada Ruth McGowan, Sara Clarke Duley, Ruth Kupfer, Sadie Scott, Hazel Schisler and Louise Christman. Sudden illness prevented Margaret McFarland Payne from attending and an inconvenient sailing date kept Robbie away. Interesting letters from absent members were read. Blue medicine tickets as place cards brought reminiscences of the good old days on 70th Street. Loraine raided Chris' clothes closet and marched in the Graduation Procession. A good time was had by all.

LOUISE CHRISTMAN.

Twenty members of the class of 1928 attempted to account for the past ten years at luncheon on the roof graduation day '38.

The T shaped table was decorated with a large bowl of blue bachelor's buttons and white daisies between two tall blue candles. Blue and white nut baskets were at each place.

We were sorry all our classmates could not be with us, but we enjoyed hearing from them. Everyone looked the same, and the hub-bub was so familiar to our ears—Skoogie's infectious laughter, Alice Donovan's numerous conversational interruptions, and something new—Tishe's stories are now about her children. Frankie was her own gracious self and invited everyone to see her in Simcoe this Summer!

It would be impossible to bring everyone into our picture, but we do want to encourage the absent ones to be around our table in 1943!

We had such a grand time and are grateful to Miss Young for all her fine arrangements from fruit cup to birthday cake!

The twenty members present were: Helen Beach McCardy, Mary Coates Miller, Alcida Hannah Coulter, Alice Margaret Donovan, Delma Elizabeth Ewing, Ellen Fisk Bolieau, Rhea Franklin Reid, Janetta Rose Hadfield, Marion Higson Bullock, Ada Beatrice Langmuir, Margaret McGlashan McAlpin, Rhoda Fisher Reddig, Helen Maria Roser, Grace Elizabeth Selle, Olive Skoog Johnson, Mary Beatrice Speni, Dorothy Stothart Miller, Gladys M. Swayze, Emma Tallman Olsen, and Caroline Harper Nicoll ex '28 class of '29.

RHODA F. REDDIG.

The Class of 1933 held its fifth anniversary and first official reunion on June second in the Board of Managers' Room. Forty-nine members sat down to an appetizing luncheon which did not recall our former hurried ones in Maxwell Hall, for now we smoked and chatted for two hours. Conversation varied as our lives have varied. Irene Krause Hendry and Dorothy Duggan Larac persisted in discussing the pranks of their respective offspring. Some others among the married, as Ruth Ray Spiecker, Elizabeth Wheeler Porter, Harriet Lease Smith, Laura Hunt Bloomfield, and Marion Warner Morrier, boasted of their fond husbands. It was good to see Eleanor Crow, an ex-member of our class. Jo De Vito was beaming as she spoke of her continuous case now going into its third year. By dint of her exalted position in Dr. Auchincloss' office, "Skilly" (Florence Skillin) expounded on the latest technique of the care and cleaning of instruments. Betty Figgins, fortified by her experience in a boys' school, ably dissected one of our birthday cakes. "Frankie" Allen Rossiter, using a spoon as gavel resumed her old position as President to tell everyone how splendid it was that so many could "re-une" this year and expressed the hope that even more would be back for our tenth anniversary.

Cards and letters were passed about from absent members. Mary Anna Hervey Smith, Helen Wallen, Mary Bailey Millar, Isobel Cowan Anderson, Mildred Wick, Eloise Jennings Carlton, Marjorie Myers Broadfoot, Catherine McQuade Ponard, and Margaret MacIntire had all written their regrets at not being able to be present.

During luncheon Miss Young, Miss Conrad, Miss Williams, Miss Wells, and other notables dropped in to welcome us and wish us well.

Everyone took away a little blue or pink basket—only a symbol of the joy felt at being once again together at good old "P. H."

May we hope that five years hence our accomplishments and experiences may far exceed what they have been to date and that there will be more present to expatiate on all that has happened since 1933 when we meet again in 1943.

D. M. Borden.

The class of 1919 had a "special" reunion this year as one of its members, Alice Bliss Smith, is in this country from Beirut, Syria.

We all decided that Alice should come oftener than every seven years as apparently it takes a classmate from afar to bring us together.

The dinner at Pierre's was indeed a gala affair at which our class had a table. On graduation day we had our own reunion luncheon served in one of the loggias on floor "R". It was such fun. The department of nutrition at the hospital arranged a wonderful menu, topped off by a birthday cake with "1919" on the top in blue and white frosting!

You of our class who were not present must have felt your ears burning as we talked about you all. You missed a happy occasion.

Our heartfelt thanks to every one at P. H. who labored so hard to make our return happy. They certainly succeeded.

Ruby Carlson.

OUR FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE COLLECTION

During the past year widespread interest has been shown in our Nightingale Collection. The catalog prepared by the students as a project in the History of Nursing course was printed in November, 1937 and is useful in explaining the collection to visitors. Several copies have been sent upon request to individuals as well as to the following organizations:—

The Nightingale Fund Training School for Nurses— St. Thomas's Hospital, London.
Florence Nightingale International Foundation—London.
King's College Hospital, London.
Army Medical Library, Washington, D. C.
New York Academy of Medicine Library.
The Johns Hopkins Hospital School of Nursing.
Frances Payne Bolton School of Nursing— Western Reserve University, Cleveland.
Carrie J. Brink Memorial Library—Bellevue School of Nursing.
Medical Library—College of Physicians & Surgeons.

Miss Hillyers, Matron of St. Thomas's on receiving our catalog asked Mrs. Lucy Seymer, editor of the Nightingale Fellowship Journal to send us a copy of the catalog on the "Exhibition of papers etc. relating to Florence Nightingale held at the Nightingale Training School. St Thomas's Hospital June 12—July 24, 1937", at the time of the International Congress of Nurses in London.

A short account of our collection was published in the British Medical Journal of January 29, 1938 and Annals of Medical History, May, 1938. The story of our collection, with illustrations showing two of the pictures and a framed letter, was published in the American Journal of Nursing, May, 1938.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Colt have given three pictures during the year, two of which have been described in former issues. The most recent is a beautiful picture of "Miss Nightingale in the Hospital at Scutari," a colored line engraving by Greatbach.

Nine additional letters have been added to the collection, all of which have been framed and hung, making a total of 76 letters, 16 pictures and 20 books.

THE BIENNIAL NURSING CONVENTION

The National Biennial Nursing Convention was held in Kansas City, Missouri, April 24-29, 1938. The three nursing organizations participating were: The American Nurses Association, organized in 1896; The National League of Nursing Education, organized in 1893; and the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, organized in 1912. By this time the proceedings of the Convention and all the important papers have been published and read by all those interested and an account of what happened as long ago as April in this age of fast moving events will no longer be news, but the delegates sent by the Headnurses and by the Hospital and Alumnae were too impressed with the tone of the Convention and the outstanding work of nursing leaders to let the Quarterly Magazine go to print without giving some account of their impressions while they convened with 5,430 other nurses.

We were impressed with the fact that every phase of modern life meets the nursing profession at one time or another. In its turn the nursing profession is very much affected by modern trends; trends in education which place emphasis upon higher education, curriculum making, student guidance, accreditation of schools, computation of costs; trends in social problems where one encounters questions of wages and hours, workers unions, industrial and social diseases and preventive medicine; trends in government relating to registration of workers and members of professions and the use of the merit system in Civil Service. We liked the Convention theme, "The Individual Nurse's Responsibility for Professional Progress," which was a wholesome and invigorating challenge in this day of paternal governments.

As one progresses, it is interesting to turn back to a past milestone and note whence we have come. In our first Alumnae Quarterly Magazine which was published in 1906 there is an excellent account of the Ninth Annual Convention of the Nurses Associated Alumnae. This organization is now known as The American Nurses Association. It is interesting to compare a few of the problems considered at the Ninth and Thirty-First Conventions. The following statements about the Ninth Convention appeared in the first issue of the Quarterly Magazine:

Detroit, Michigan, June 5, 6, and 7.	Kansas City, April 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, and 29.
New York to Detroit by train Monday evening to Tuesday morning.	New York to Kansas City via Transcontinental Western Airways. Flying time a little over six hours.
Attendance—600.	Attendance—5,430.
Number of Nursing Organizations convening—1.	Number of Nursing Organizations convening—3.
Discussions:	Discussions:
"'What Can a Nurse Do with Her Margin of Time and Money?' was considered an amusing paper because the nurse seemed to be conspicuous for her lack of both."	An eight hour day is rapidly becoming the rule in nursing and the nurse can now use her margin of time.
"'How Can Skilled Nursing Be Procured by the Family of Modest Means?' The scheme that seemed most in favor though far from a solution was one whereby the graduate nurse appraised what the patient could pay and any deficit was made up to the nurse by a fund in the registry. 'Hourly Nursing' was favorably received."	Today we have the hourly nurse, and the visiting nurses associations, and where less skilled nursing is required, the practical nurse. New York State is very much in the limelight since the recent passage of the new Nurse Practice Act which requires the licensing of all who nurse for hire. The consensus of opinion seems to be that the nursing profession should take upon itself the responsibility of training and control of all subsidiary workers.
"'Should One Nurse Take a Case From Which Another Nurse Had Been Dismissed Without Cause?' Common sense and good judgment was a remedy suggested for this."	No better solution has been found and the same ethical problems arise.
"'The Influence and Value of Alumnae Journals.' It was advised that the cost of Alumnae Journals should be included in the Alumnae dues."	"Why Put It in Print?" Again the value of both Alumnae and Nursing Journals is stressed with suggestions of how and what to print.
"Another interesting paper had as its subject, 'Are Nurses Overtrained?'"	Can this question have been asked thirty-two years ago?

The problems seem to be similar but the attempts at their solution in 1938 must be quite different from those used in 1906. Increase in population, urban life, modern material conveniences and new industries make new problems of the same subjects. One finds, however, a constant and inspiring essential in the splendid and stimulating leadership of women whose vision transcends difficulties and carries the standards of the nursing profession to ever greater accomplishments. Through them the multiplicity of difficulties seem to become integrated by a unified objective of service to mankind. It is inspiring to attend such a Convention and we are grateful to have had this opportunity.

And such a magnificent party as it was! On the fifth of May, 1938, the results of the combined efforts of the various hospitals at the Medical Center were astounding to say the least. The reason for the party—to raise money for Stony Wold, a sanitarium in the Adirondacks for the care of business and professional women suffering from tuberculosis.

Since the party was a benefit, a tremendous effort was made to have all necessary expenses kept at a minimum. The roof of the Presbyterian Hospital was chosen as the site for the May Party. The view and the layout of the rooms certainly vies with any midtown amusement place, not excepting the Rainbow Room or the Hotel Pierre.

On stepping off the elevator guests were startled (to say the least) to behold a bar! Close investigation revealed that pink lemonade was the extent of purchases possible there. But it served the purpose of a real bar—refreshing hot weary dancers, furnishing a resting place for all party-goers, to say nothing of furnishing the "bar-maids" with ample amusement for many a day.

In one room opening directly off the reception hall were tables laden with delicious examples of the culinary art prepared by various folks in the Medical Center. Also in this room was a grab-bag, supplying plenty of amusement. To further the air of "taking a chance" were past masters in the art of fortune-telling and reading handwriting. The continuous crowd in this room spoke adequately for the popularity of its entertainers.

Another room was devoted to games—Bridge, Rummy—anything the heart desired. This room was full most of the evening too. (May I be permitted to add here an observation of a bar-maid? That game-playing makes people very thirsty—witness the fact that we sold traysful of lemonade in that room during the evening).

The gymnasium was transferred into a bower of springtime with the use of a small amount of crepe paper, some wooden lattices, and a profusion of lilacs donated for the party. Here the ardent dancers "tripped the light fantastic" to the lilting rhythms of a fine orchestra. To add to the spirit of the occasion many little tables were set around near the walls. With tables near the walls and people sitting at the tables a "floor show" seemed a requisite. And lo! there was a floor show—of the finest. A beautiful solo dance, a "skating horse", a penguin dance, and last but not least, a fine original song sung by the interns (four of them). This last brought down the house.

Refreshments in keeping with the spirit of Springtime were served and declared delicious by all. Soon the dancers grew weary, the bridge players tired, the onlookers anxious for their beds, and so all departed, exclaiming over and over again what a lovely party it had been. But the loveliest part was when the receipts were made known—and a check for $1,110 was sent to the Stony Wold Auxiliary from the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center.

AN ADMISSION ANECDOTE

"Either both of us will be admitted or neither." Thus emphatically spoke an old gentleman in the clinic when the time came for him to go to the Ward and his zither to storage. Now this zither was a masterpiece, a beautiful hand-made instrument that represented many hours of the old man's time and was apparently most essential to his happiness. To be deprived of its "company" and not to know its whereabouts would be nothing short of a grave calamity, for the two had never been separated these many years.

"They" had arrived at the clinic some hours previously, and had reposed together in the Overnight Ward. This was ideal. If he had only known hospital life was like this, he would not have hesitated about coming in. The situation was perfect: he receiving medical treatment, his zither constantly by his side, to be played whenever he chose.

But this ideal life could not last long, and when admission to the ward was proposed, the nurses and doctors found they had a difficult problem to deal with, and soon realized that the zither would not be given up without a terrific struggle. The superintendent's office insisted the zither go downstairs with the man's other possessions. He insisted it go upstairs with him. There was no use arguing. No concessions would be made. "Either both of us will be admitted, or neither." The zither had to be close at hand, and furthermore it had to be played every day. Finally, after hours of discussion, it was arranged to have the zither kept in one of the attending's offices. The old man had won his point, and soon had one of the strangest orders ever written in a doctor's order book: "Allow to play zither one hour O. D."

—— SCHOOL NEWS ——

There is a timelessness to the days at Maxwell Hall. They run so rapidly into weeks, into months, that it is only when we stop and consider the happiness they have held, the quiet pleasant hours, the gala eventful occasions, that we suddenly realize another whole quarter year has passed.

The Forum Club held two open meetings. Mrs. Bretz, wife of a New York physician, gave us some insight into the problems of the blind, and, using herself as an example, proved, that possessing a brain and a backbone, not even blindness should keep one from a normal, well-rounded, pleasant and helpful existence. Mrs. Frederick Vester, President of the American Colony Charities in Jerusalem, Palestine, was at Maxwell Hall for her daughter Frieda's graduation, and we had the pleasure of hearing her lecture on her many interesting experiences in Jerusalem and among the Arabs, where she has a child welfare station.

The Dramatic Club, sponsored a Theatre Party to the W. P. A. play, "Prologue to Glory". After the play the members voiced their appreciation over sandwiches and coffee, and for weeks we heard fragments of the play through Maxwell Hall. The Glee Club gave a selected group concert followed by "Open House" with dancing and refreshments.

The Lending Library is growing quietly and steadily, both in new and enthusiastic members, and by the addition of the latest and most interesting books. It is a pleasant sight, on coming over from the hospital each Friday evening, to find the south alcove lighted up, books everywhere, our classmates standing around in groups, skimming through books, tasting a line here and there, and each going off with her selection under her arm.

On the evening of May 8th the senior nurses from all over the city met at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine to pay honor to Florence Nightingale. Two buses called at Maxwell Hall and the students looked very smart, as well as very professional, in their blue stripes and blue sweaters.

The senior class, in preference to having a year book, took over the June edition of the "Student Prints" and made it a "Senior Class Issue". They succeeded in producing a very original, interesting, and entertaining piece of work. The Student Prints Staff is particularly proud of having sold so many extra copies that the project has paid for itself. Miss Gudrun Christensen, present editor of the Student Prints received the Class of 1920 Memorial Scholarship Award.

Coming down to sheer amusement, the Student Government gave a cotton formal, each girl making her own dress, and supplying her escort with a handkerchief and tie of the same material. It was a gay and pleasant evening. The prize given for the prettiest dress was won by Miss Louise Miller. The traditional Freshman Senior Dance was the opening wedge to the graduating exercises. Sturges, gay with flags, masqueraded as the deck of an ocean liner, the Hudson lending itself admirably to the disguise. Then came the dinner dance at Pierre's, given by the Alumnae to the graduating class, a delightful evening, an excellent dinner, accented by appropriate speeches and fine music. It was thoroughly enjoyed and will be long remembered.

For Commencement we had a perfect June day. The gardens made a lovely setting for the stiff white aprons, the bright blue of the "stripes", the corsages matching the scarlet coats of the band, and in the background our "men in white" adding just the proper note, and then the perfect finale, Miss Young and Miss Conrad passing under the arch of new diplomas held high by the Graduating Class. A reception was held at Maxwell Hall after the exercises for the friends and relatives of the new graduates. Dr. Russell took some vivid and colorful moving pictures of the graduation exercises and showed them later at Maxwell Hall where he had a very interested and enthusiastic audience.

June 3rd was Alumnae Day with the Staff and the graduates of former years appearing in "stripes", and the new graduates were welcomed as members of the Alumnae. The graduation class presented the school with a new flag and with their class picture. Instead of the traditional class group this picture is made up of small individual photographs, each bearing the name of the graduate beneath it; Miss Young's picture being in the centre and the class officers grouped around her. In the afternoon the Annual Hobby Show opened. Our two Greek students arranged a very interesting corner consisting of Greek art, photography, some rare laces and pottery. The hobbies were many and varied from goldfish and porcelain horses to lump sugar and madonnas, from knit goods to evening dresses, from flowers to penguins.

Graduation week over, there was a general vacation exodus, and the school settled down to enjoy the long warm days of a New York summer.

AILEEN HOGAN.

Distinguished Visitors

His Royal Highness, the Crown Prince of Sweden was admitted to the eleventh floor of Harkness Pavilion on June 28, 1938, as a patient of Dr. J. Bentley Squier. The Prince was stricken with renal colic on board the S. S. Kungsholm, enroute from Sweden to Wilmington, Delaware, where elaborate plans had been made to celebrate the Tercentenary of the founding of a New Sweden in America.

Dr. Squier, who was called in consultation at Wilmington, advised that the Prince be admitted to the hospital for observation. He proved to be one of the best patients we ever had as well as one of the most interesting. The Crown Princess also stayed at the hospital for several days as well as Dr. Harald Ernberg, personal physician to the Crown Prince.

On Thursday, June 30th, at 4:30 P. M., President Roosevelt made an official call and spent a pleasant half hour with the Prince and Princess.

When the Prince became well enough to be up and about he ate all of his meals in Harkness Pavilion Dining Room, took walks around the garden and in general enjoyed the facilities of the Hospital He was discharged on Friday, July 8, 1938 and upon leaving presented his autographed photographs to Mr. McCormack and Mr. Merritt.

Many Alumnae will regret to hear of the death of Mrs. Katherine Geitz on May 25th, 1938. Mrs. Geitz was beloved and well known for her splendid work with the Katie Geitz Kitchen.

OUR VOICE IN RELATION TO OUR WORK

[Sue Belden, '20, has been teaching Voice Preservation and Development at her Vocal Art-Science Studio at 37 E. 35th St., for some years and has written the following at the request of the editor.]

I have strayed away from good old P. H. in the last few years, back to my former profession of music,—to be specific, the teaching of singing, and training of the speaking voice.

Although we hear bad speaking voices around us, and although examiners of candidates for teachers' diplomas paint a gloomy picture of the vocal situation of today,—I still think there is more voice-consciousness now than ever before. Interest in the subject has grown noticeably in the last few years, and the increase in the number of schools of elocution, public speaking, and other branches, that are springing up on all sides, must be indicative of a greater desire for improvement along these lines. There are business men who come to me and say: "I realize that my voice isn't what it should be; can you do anything about it?" Now these are practical people, and they realize the importance of a good voice in the business world. It is the instrument of contact, a great deal may depend on its power to convince or its ability to "put over" the idea. The proposition may be good in itself, but often, if presented in an unconvincing manner, it may not strike the other person favorably, and the deal may not go through.

To you who are engaged in any of the branches of nursing, your voice is just as important, if in a different way. You come in contact with people who, of all others, require the very best you have to give; who need soothing, often need reassuring, and at all times freedom from everything irritating,—and we know that the aggressive type of voice is irritating; so also are the weak, indistinct voice, mumbled diction, the pinched, nasal voice, and other characteristics which we all notice in others, if not always in ourselves. It is difficult to hear our own voice; we are too close to it, are really inside of it, as the whole body may be said to be our vocal instrument. I can guarantee quite a surprise to anyone who has a recording made and then listens to it!

What does voice-development mean? It means starting with the equipment which the person already possesses, and through a process of freeing, strengthening, exercising, balancing,—obtaining the utmost beauty and power of which that particular voice is capable; then, through habit, making the instrument automatically responsive, so that at the moment of using it, whether it be in the act of singing, acting, public speaking, or simply in conversation, the technic may be entirely forgotten, thus leaving the person free to concentrate upon the subject at hand. Voice is "a form of energy caused by a series of coördinated muscle-actions". It stands to reason, therefore, that the better we bring these governing muscles under our control, the better our vocal results.

"But," I hear you say, "What is to be done in the case of people who haven't the time to study?" Well, begin by being voice-conscious, that is, conscious of your own voice; listen to it and try to discover wherein it falls short of what you would like it to be. Study its effect on other people; if you have plenty of courage, ask some of your friends who speak the truth, to tell you what they really think of it. Study the voices of those about you, especially the good voices. Now, when I say "good", what do I mean? What is the standard?

The best voice for anybody is the type which nature designed for that person. By "type" I mean masculine or feminine, high or low, lyric or dramatic,—the voice which best expresses that particular personality. So, recognizing that each of us has been endowed with the most suitable kind of voice, we must strive to take proper care of it, to develop and control it, so that it may be as perfect an instrument as possible to convey our thoughts and emotions.

BAHIA, BRAZIL

Was so glad to see your name signed to personal note in Alumnae propaganda. It was forwarded by my sister from home. I'm so sorry our money in Brazil is no earthly good to you and I'm terribly upset about my dues. I wrote more than a year ago and some one sent me the Alumnae Quarterly which I devour and through some good fortune it always gets here. It must be the good God "Good Fortune" that looks after P. H. sees it through for we lose so much mail. I'd so like to keep my membership. Will you please write me about this. Maybe I could get someone at home to do it as my Xmas and holiday gifts.

I was married in Rio—a gloriously beautiful city, Feb. 21, 1935 to one of the American Singer Sewing Machine Divisional Superintendents here. We are located in Bahia, most interesting port along the coast and we live a wonderfully happy tropical life. It's eternal summer of course but we're having cool rains just now which we call winter just to be reminded that we are in a world of seasons. We have lovely sea breezes as we are practically living on sea front with a grand beach across the street, and it never gets as hot as New York in July. Our average temperature is about 82 to 85 I think.

Servants are very cheap as the four I use, cook, maid, washwoman, and polishing boy come to about $9 or $10 a month the four of them. Tell that to your $10 a week maid there. But it does make us all lazy and what a life we lead. Our colony is mostly English (150) with about a dozen or so Americans, so we do things English fashion, more or less. I have American cooking in my house as my cook has learned lots of our dishes but the inevitable tea must come. It makes lots of petty entertaining as we are not very intellectually inclined and no literary or study clubs have been started.

I have a cute old house with large rooms and a little quintal (court) out in back filled with ferns, palms, and the most beautiful bougainvilla vine in full bloom now. The floors are of wide planks and the boys polish them until they look like mirrors. Workmanship is poor here so walls are terrible as they won't resist the dampness and they're always mottled and faded but one gets used to it.

I find our vegetables a bit inferior here and fruits though native of here not equal to ones we've cultivated. Pineapples and avacadoes are best. I made a quart of avacado ice cream of two avacadoes the other day, they are so large and full. The ice cream is delicious. I pass avacadoes through a sifter and just add lemon juice and sugar. My two cost about four cents.

We have many kinds of bananas but I prefer the Central American ones we buy at home, pears, grapes, cherries and strawberries they only have in the far south and we get them shipped in. They've never tried shipping cherries and strawberries. We have no berries of any kind.

I could write reams about Bahia and yet I know practically nothing of the volumes of interesting things to be learned here. It was the first old slave center and the slave market is still here. In Sâo Paulo the servants still congregate around the old slave market and when you're out you may go and pick up one. Here in Bahia we pass them around among ourselves. When we get fed up with one we trade with some one else and sometimes find happier combinations.

There used to be about 300 Catholic churches here. Now we boast about 170 I believe. Once it was said you could have mass in a different church every day in the year. The one that interests me most is the one which has a big shrine and room of promises and boasts many miraculous healings. They are very rich in murals and hand carved wood and silver lamps. Bahia has her legendary Indian Princesses and their romances and in the church of Nossa Senhora de Graca are the tombs of Paraguassu (who married a foreign white man after saving his life) and another whose lover killed her with a golden bullet rather than give her to another man.

The remnants of old African slaves still have their fetish worship and their dances which are forbidden by the Government still go on in hidden out-of-town places. Most weird and terrible things go on due to excitement into which they work themselves and drugs and herbs eaten and drunk. My wash woman has promised to take us to one sometime and I do hope we don't miss that. A man from the University of Chicago took our house for a few months last year and he made quite an interesting study of them.

I surely will appreciate it if you can find time some day to write me about alumnae members' obligations.

NORWOOD, CEYLON

[Excerpts from a letter from Louise Clark Bingham, '18, to Miss Young.]

"We have for this past year been living up-country. It is great to have a high altitude for a change—and be where it is cool enough to enjoy an open grate fire in our drawing room every evening.

"There are a large number of European planters with their families in this district so there are plenty of clubs, and gay life going on all the time.

"The British Red Cross Society started a branch in Ceylon in February, 1936. There are now quite a number of local branches. Such a local branch was started in this district last August and has been steadily growing so that we have over 300 members.

"The general Secretary in Colombo wrote and got special permission for me to become a member—and a lecturer in Home Nursing and Child Welfare. The reply from London was: 'She may be a member except when Great Britain and U. S. A. are at war!'

"They made me the chairman of this branch last January and I have been kept hopping all over the place in my little car, to arrange First Aid and Home Nursing lectures, and to get detachments going. I couldn't find trained nurses enough in the district so had to get two from outside the district to teach Home Nursing—and took one class myself.

"The district covers about twenty square miles, with six small villages or towns in it, so that my nearest class was seven miles away. The doctors very kindly consented to give First Aid lectures—if I would teach all the splints and triangular bandaging for them. Yesterday I started another class of 37 on First Aid. No one expects war out here, no one worried about air raids, but after the malarial epidemic a few years back, when more than 100,000 died within six months, the Ceylonese are beginning to wake up—but it does take a lot of pushing to do the waking!

"Last January when I was on a visit to Joffna, up the northern end of this island, I saw Annette Beals at Manipay. It is grand to have her out here, but she is in a very hard place, one which demands a lot of patience and courage—I know because it is the hospital to which I came out in 1929. The last I heard, Annette had gone to Kodai, in South India Hills, for her vacation, in April."

—— ANNUAL MEETING ——

The Annual Meeting of the Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital was held on Friday, June 3rd, 1938 at 3:00 P. M. in Anna C. Maxwell Hall. The President, Marie C. Byron, '17, presided. The reports of the officers and Committees as presented at the meeting are herewith published. Before the reports were presented the following letter was read by Miss Byron:

Litchfield, Connecticut,
June 2, 1938.

Miss Marie C. Byron,
President of the Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing
In the City of New York.

Dear Miss Byron:

It is with great pleasure that the Class of 1897 is giving to Miss Young today a check for four hundred dollars ($400.00).

This completes their pledge of one thousand dollars ($1,000.00) to go towards a fund for a building for graduate nurses to mark their 40th anniversary.

Sincerely yours,

Constance Baillie Ripley,
Chairman.

Alumnae Report of the Distributing Fund Committee
Margaret E. Conrad, '20, Chairman

The report of the Alumnae Distributing Fund Committee for 1937 has already been published in detail in the January number of the Quarterly Magazine.

The fund reached a total of $2,745.97 including a gift of $250.00 from our good friend, Mrs. John Hartwell, $345.50 from the sale of the Quick Reference Book, and an accumulated balance from previous years amounting to $254.97. Three class gifts totaled $100.00 or more:—1907, 1920, and 1936. We are especially pleased to see 1936 discharging their alumnae responsibilities so enthusiastically and effectively.

The total number of donors to the fund last year was 380. The class of 1931 had the largest number—23—thereby "topping" 1917 and 1932 by one!

In the statistical report for the year, we added two items on recommendation of the Executive Committee: The average gift, and the percent of graduates contributing in each class.

The Fund was distributed as follows:

Sick Benefit Fund	$ 500.00
Pension Fund	500.00
Emma Baker Kennedy Fund (Graduate Scholarship)	750.00
1920 Memorial Scholarship	100.00
Student Scholarships	500.00
General Fund	375.00
Unassigned Balance	20.97
	$2,745.97

The donation to the General Fund was made as a safeguard against the necessity of raising the regular dues, and on the principle that increasing our General Fund is sound policy.

The student scholarships were awarded as follows:

1938—Miss Lucille Buffinton
1939—Miss Edith Purick (Feb.)
Miss Theodora Westcott (Feb.)
Miss Janet Hopkins (Sept.)
1940—Miss Wilhelmina Elder (Feb.)
Mrs. Alice Potter (Feb.)
Miss Susan Ralph (Feb.)
Miss Jean Bennett (Sept.)
Miss Virginia Maxwell (Sept.)
Miss Martha Reis (Sept.)
Miss Gudrun Christensen, 1938, is to receive the 1920 Memorial Scholarship.

You have all received the little striped coin banks for donations this year. We hope that our investment in these boxes will serve for more than one year, as we shall request you in the fall to send us a check for the amount which they contain—and start saving for 1939!

The committee for the coming year consists of Helen Roser, '28, Virginia Harrell, '19, Helen Scott, '27, Winifred Scott Caughey, '33, Eleanor Hall, '36.

There are 34 class agents busily at work in the last 25 classes. The complete list of names appear in the April Quarterly. We are sure that they are an important factor not only in raising the money, but in interpreting the activities of the association, in keeping our address list up to date, and in increasing our membership. The committee and the class agents had a very pleasant supper together last fall, and we expect to repeat the occasion this next autumn.

With 1,565 living graduates of the School—1,154 of whom are members of the Alumnae Association—it seems reasonable to hope that our Association income may be regularly increased by $3,000.00 annually through the Alumnae Distributing Fund.

Developments in the University Program of the School
Margaret E. Conrad, '20, Professor of Nursing

Miss Byron has asked me to give you a brief resumé of the developments in the School.

The first class to be enrolled in the University, entered in September, 1937, with a registration of 81 students, 20 college graduates eligible for the short course, 8 students with two or more years of college credit acceptable for transfer, making a total of 28 degree candidates—and 53 students, qualifying for the diploma but not the degree.

A condition of University approval for the course was the separation of the degree and the diploma candidates in their class instruction after the preliminary period. The freshman block of classes is to be given first to the degree and then to the diploma candidates in the spring. The same sequence holds for the junior classes in the fall. The classes will thus be given twice a year as previously. The sixteen weeks allotted to them has been evenly divided into eight week periods for each block. It is evident that this schedule requires the enrollment of only one class a year.

Beginning with the freshman classes for the September students, we rearranged the schedule to include only three hours of ward duty during class periods, the University supplying graduate nursing service to compensate for this difference in the student's time (ten hours per student per week), appropriating $4,500.00 for this purpose.

The School enrollment as of June 1st, totals 215 students divided as follows:

Third year students	34
Second year students	77
First year students	104	32+72
University registrants—Degree		25
University registrants—Diploma		47

We hope to take in a class of 110 students in September. The class schedule makes it important that it shall be not too unevenly divided between degree and diploma candidates.

Of course we have many visitors from other schools, and the one thing which seems to be most difficult to explain is the harmony between the University and the Hospital officials and staff. It appears that friction exists in most places. I thought as I listened to Dean Rappleye and Mr. Sage at Graduation yesterday that the answer lay firmly embedded in the friendly comradeship and devotion to a common cause which was evident throughout their remarks. I think we should all be aware of our good fortune in having such leadership, and I know that we all warmly echoed the Dean's tribute to our own leaders in nursing.

Report of the Education Committee
Eleanor Lee, '20, Chairman

The Emma Baker Kennedy Scholarship Fund

Two Scholarships of $300 each were awarded this year to G. Harriet Mantel, '33, and Margaret J. Hawthorne, '27, both of whom were given a leave of absence to study full-time at Teachers College, Columbia University. Miss Mantel and Miss Hawthorne will complete the few remaining points for the Bachelor of Science degree next term.

A Scholarship of $150 awarded to Ruth L. Fitzsimmons, '17, for the Spring term has been postponed at her request until February, 1939.

We have on file to date five applications for the academic year 1938-1939 and three applications for 1939-1940. The committee will meet about July 1st to review the applications for next September.

An interesting activity of the Education Committee has been to raise money for a Head Nurses' Convention Fund. The proceeds from the sale of blue and white boutonnieres on Alumnae Day for the past six years have been as follows:

1933	$100.00	1936	$175.00
1934	200.00	1937	281.00
1935	137.00	1938	308.40

The balance on hand on June 1st was $24.60, giving a total of $333.00 in the fund. This money is used to pay the expenses of delegates from the Head Nurse Group at the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Centre.

This year two delegates attended the New York State Nurses' Association Convention at Lake Placid in September, Alice C. MacKinnon, '32, from Presbyterian and Bernice Knowles from Sloane. Helen L. Scott, '27 was the delegate from the Head Nurse Group at the National League of Nursing Education Convention in Kansas City in April. Reports were given by each of the delegates at the regular Head Nurses' meeting following each convention.

Report of Social Committee
Margaret Eliot, '21, Chairman

The Social Committee would like to report that the Alumnae Association entertained the Class of 1938 at dinner at Pierre's last Tuesday evening. The lovely flowers which decorated the tables were given by Mrs. Talmage and Mrs. Taylor and again the Rosary florists arranged them for us. The main decoration, however, was the Senior Class, each looking especially charming and until after dinner they adorned the two largest tables.

After some urging on the part of your chairman, Miss Byron, Miss Young and Mr. Sage each spoke a few words which pleased us all very much. Following this the Spanish lady and gentleman who dance on the Pierre Roof descended the 42 stories to dance for us and were very much appreciated. Eleanor Lee and Maria Auchincloss Look have my sincere thanks for their help.

Other activities of the Social Committee are deciding what to have to eat at the various Alumnae meetings. It is very important to decide whether it shall be sandwiches and cookies, tea or coffee, or both—cake, cookies and ice cream—or just sandwiches and cake and lemonade. The November meeting is the easiest because crullers and cider make it seem like Hallowe'en only three weeks back.

Winifred Kaltenbach, '20

In the interest of economy the Executive Board has voted to have, temporarily, three numbers of the Quarterly Magazine instead of four. This arrangement will become effective in 1939 when the Quarterly will be issued in March, July, and November.

The editor wishes to take this opportunity to thank the members of the Board and the various contributors for their help and coöperation during the past year. The Board as appointed for 1938-39, starting with the October issue, will be as follows:

Florence Graham Weber, '14
Dorothy Wandel Bancroft, '21
Margaret Eliot, '21
Maria Auchincloss Look, '32
Ruth Tuckey, '36
Marion Kieth, '36
Nancy Balis, School Editor

Report of District 13
New York County Registered Nurses Association
Annie M. Thomas, '05

There were four regular meetings and one special meeting. The District Office moved from the Central Club for Nurses, 132 East 45th Street, to 50 West 50th Street, Room 1222.

A magazine, "Nursing Today" which it had been hoped would bring in a revenue to the District, through its advertisements and publicity, proved to be a great expense and therefore it was voted to discontinue it after the May issue.

A card party and dance was given at the Hotel Pennsylvania and the proceeds were added to the Treasury for general expenses. $15.00 was taken from the reserve fund and added to the general fund.

There were 6,355 members of District 13 in 1937 and this year to date there are 5,552.

A delegate was sent to the National Convention from the District and a supplementary fund raised by the private duty nurses enabled them to send a delegate.

It was voted that a complete financial statement be sent to the Board of Directors each month and that it undertake no new project until the District functions on a firm financial basis. It is feared that there will be a deficit this year.

There have been many discussions and a great deal of hard work has been done to help legislate the Nurse Practice Act.

It was voted to keep the files of the Private Duty Section in the District Office.

A budget for 1938 has been prepared for the coming year as follows:

Estimated income		$6,300.00
Salaries	$3,790.00
Office maintenance	1,652.00
Supplies	725.00
Insurance	84.35
Dues to other Organizations	22.00
Magazine subscriptions	13.50
Deficit at end of 1937	6.04
Balance	7.03
	$6,300.00

Recommendations for changing the By-laws were made and will be passed on at the September meeting.

Present Ruling:

Any New York State registered nurse so qualified residing in District 13 shall be eligible for individual membership through the Association of Graduate Nurses of the Manhattan and Bronx.

Proposed Change:

Any New York State registered professional nurse so qualified residing in District 13 or adjacent District which does not have Alumnae Associations in the District shall be eligible for individual membership.

Section 3:

Organizations desiring to become members of the Association shall send the form provided by the District Association with the dues for one year, to the recording secretary of the District. Organizations shall at the same time submit a copy of their constitution or certificate of incorporation and by-laws.

Proposed Change in Section 3:

Change Recording Secretary to Executive Secretary.

Addition to Section 3:

Applications for individual membership shall be mailed to the Executive Secretary on forms provided by the District Association together with recommendations from two members in good standing.

Article V:

Section 1. The Treasurer of each alumnae association, on or before the fifteenth day of January of each year, shall send to the Executive Secretary of District No. 13 the names and basis of membership taken January 1, which makes each resident addresses of all resident members, with $3.00 per capita on the member automatically a member of District No. 13 and of the New York State Nurses Association and the American Nurses Association. This amount ($3.00 per capita) is divided as follows: District No. 13, $1.00; New York State Nurses Association, $1.50; and the American Nurses Association, 50 cents.

Proposed changes in Section 1. The following are the annual dues: (a) Alumnae Associations shall pay $3.00 per capita, which shall be collected from the Alumnae Associations to which the members belong. (b) The annual dues for individual members shall be $3.50. (c) This amount ($3.00 per capita) is divided as follows: District No. 13, $1.00 — (Individual members, $1.50); New York State Nurses Association, $1.50; American Nurses Association, 42 cents; International Council of Nurses, 8 cents.

Section 2. Members failing to pay dues before the first day of March shall be notified at once, and those not paying before the fifteenth day of April shall be dropped from the rolls and thereupon forfeit the rights and privileges of membership.

Proposed changes in Section 2. Dues shall be paid in advance not later than February 1st, for the current calendar year —on the basis of membership January 31st.

SECTION 3. Former members whose dues have lapsed may be reinstated by a plurality vote of the Board of Directors, upon the payment of dues for the current year.

Proposed changes in Section 3. Alumnae Associations and individual members whose dues have not been paid before the first of March shall be notified by the Executive Secretary, and those not paying by April 15th shall forfeit rights and privileges of membership.

Proposed changes in Section 4. Alumnae Associations and individual members having forfeited their membership may be reinstated upon the payment of dues for the fiscal year.

Proposed changes in Section 5. Dues received by Alumnae Association after February 1st shall be paid monthly during each year.

Article X:

SECTION 1. The voting body shall consist of duly accredited delegates from Alumnae Association active resident members, and of the Board of Directors.

Proposed changes in Section 1. The voting body shall consist of all members of the District Association (alumnae and individual members).

SECTION 2. Alumnae Association members of this Association may send delegates in the ratio of one for every five active resident members of its Association; all delegates must be New York State registered nurses.

Proposed changes in Section 2. Substitute — Each member may cast one vote on all matters including the election of officers.

SECTION 3. A delegate may cast one vote on all matters, except that in the election of officers a delegate may cast one but not more than five votes.

Proposed change in Section 3. Delete.

Article XV:

SECTION 1. Amendments to these By-laws may be proposed at one meeting and voted upon at the next meeting, provided notice of changes has been mailed to all Association members not less than 10 days, nor more than 40 days before the meeting at which said changes are to be voted upon; changes to be made on the approval of a two-thirds vote of all delegates present.

Proposed changes in Section 1. Delete word "delegates" and substitute "Members."

SECTION 2. By-laws may be amended at any meeting, without previous notice, by unanimous vote of all delegates present.

Proposed changes in Section 2. Delete the word "delegates" and substitute "members."

At the Board of Directors meeting it was voted that Alumnae Associations make revisions in By-laws permitting the member to be reinstated without benefits on the payment of dues (without paying back dues).

The Historical Committee reported that after eighteen months on the preliminary research data is ready for typing.

The Nominating Committee recommends that a Nominating Committee be made up of a representative appointed from each Alumnae Association with the exception of the Chairman who shall be appointed by the President from her own Alumnae also that two candidates for every office be put on the ballot with the written consent of each candidate.

It was recommended that the Chairman of the Program Committee be a member of the Program Committee of the previous year.

It was suggested a two day Institute be held twice a year instead of four successive days also that consideration be given to the Public Health nurses' section on the program.

A speaker's bureau is to be formed.

It was suggested from the District Service Committee that the District be asked to contribute a stated amount yearly to the State Service Fund in view of the fact that District 13 draws more money from the Fund than any other District and contributes less.

The following officers were elected for 1938-1939:

President.....A. Isabelle Byrne
Second Vice-President.....Loraine Dennhardt
Treasurer.....Jessie Warner
Directors.....William F. Marquette
Jeanette Robert

Report of Committee on Eight-Hour Duty
Dorothy Rogers, '25, Chairman

The Committee on 8 Hours for Nurses held two meetings this year. In the fall of 1937 the committee sent a questionnaire to all private duty nurses in District No. 13 in an attempt to find out how the nurses felt regarding the 8 hour duty and what were their objections to it, if any. Of 4,000 questionnaires sent, about 700 were returned. This was not a large enough number to make a statistical report. However, the questionnaires that were returned indicated that the majority of the private duty nurses objected to the $5 a day pay for 8 hour duty as not being an adequate income to live on in New York City. The Committee felt that this was not an auspicious time to start any campaign to increase the pay, and therefore it was decided to do nothing further at the present time about an 8 hour day for the private duty nurses.

In our own registry we are having very few calls for the 8 hour duty.

I am very happy to report, however, that the Board of Managers has instituted an 8 hour day for the General Duty Nurses, and for the orderlies throughout the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Centre. This was gradually introduced beginning in November, 1937, and has been fully established in all departments since April, 1938. The day nurses on this new schedule work 52 hours one week and 46 hours the next week, averaging 49 hours. They have a half day free each Sunday, a half day one week and a whole day the next week. Most of them are on a straight 8 hour shift, but in some cases it is necessary for them to have broken hours. The evening and night nurses work 48 hours each week, having a night off each week and working straight eight hours. The salary has remained the same—$75 per month with maintenance.

A total of 44 nurses was added to the payroll to institute the 8 hour day and the Board of Managers voted an increase of $80,000 to the budget.

It is hoped that the 8 hour day will reduce the turn over, though it is still too early to tell that; and also it is believed that the amount of time lost by illness will be decreased.

None of the credit for this tremendous step forward can be assumed by the 8 hour Committee. It was all accomplished by the quiet work of Miss Young and the help of some of the graduate staff at the Centre in doing time studies and collecting statistics.

Report of Legislative Committee
Emily Bauer, '09, Chairman

The 1938 session of the New York State Legislature convened on January 5, 1938, and adjourned March 19, 1938.

New York State nurses are to be congratulated on having secured the passage of the new nurse practice act, Bill 186-1069, sponsored by Miss Todd in the assembly and Mr. Feld in the Senate.

The objectives of the new law are:

To provide a sufficient number of qualified professional nurses to serve those acutely ill.

To provide a sufficient number of practical nurses who will be licensed and responsible for their acts.

To provide for the enforcement of these professional requirements by making licensure compulsory.

The act becomes effective July 1st, 1938.

Another bill which was passed and is of interest to nurses is Senator Twomey's. This requires a standard serological blood test for syphilis of every pregnant woman at the time of first examination. A standard test is one done in a laboratory approved for this purpose by the Board of Health in New York City. Elsewhere the State Department of Health performs these functions. On and after January 1, 1939 every birth report must show whether such blood test has been made and the date, but in no event shall the birth certificate state the result of the test.

The Armstrong Miller Bill "to provide liens for registered nurses for treatment and care of certain injured persons" was defeated.

Report of the Special Duty Nurses' Group of the Presbyterian Hospital
Elizabeth S. Zimmers, '31, Chairman

Special duty nurses sometimes have problems that need a guiding hand, and, sometimes they, themselves, are problems. In order to "find a way" the Presbyterian Special Duty Nurses are organized and have a committee who meet with Miss Young, monthly, if necessary.

Since the formation of the present committee, meetings were held with Miss Young during the months of January, February, and April—at which meetings problems pertaining to the Special Duty Nursing Group of the Presbyterian Hospital were discussed and measures taken to further cooperation between the special duty nurses and the executive group of the Presbyterian Hospital.

General meetings were held with Miss Young February 11th and May 26th to acquaint the group with matters of particular interest to them.

Miss Caroline Nicoll, '29, as a delegate from the Special Duty Nurses' Group of the Presbyterian Hospital to the Institute held under the auspices of District Thirteen on April 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th gave a very interesting report at the general meeting of May 26th.

At the Biennial Convention of the American Nurses Association in Kansas City April 25th to 30th, Miss Helen Scott, '27, represented the Head Nurses, and she very graciously gave to us the salient facts of the Convention at our last general meeting.

Members of the Committee attended the Private Duty Nurses' Section meetings of District Thirteen held March 7th and May 2nd.

In order to carry on its duties effectively and to the satisfaction and understanding of the Group, By-Laws were submitted by the Committee to the Special Duty Nurses' Group of the Presbyterian Hospital at their meeting held immediately after the general meeting of May 26th. The By-Laws were approved and became effective at once.

The retiring committee has chosen Miss Marion Nelson, '26, to be chairman for the coming year.

Report of the Program Committee
Caroline Nicoll, '29, Chairman

At our Alumnae Meeting in November we had an interesting talk on the "Underlying Causes of the Sino-Japanese Situation". Dr. Edwin C. Lobenstine, who had recently returned from twenty-five years of missionary work in China and Japan, gave us a very fair and enlightening address.

The February meeting was also interesting as the students with the able assistance of Miss Lee, Miss Rogers and Miss Philips, presented a brief pageant of "The History of Nursing".

Report of the Red Cross Committee
Marjorie Peto, '29, Chairman

Total amount collected in November for the American Red Cross was $870.35.

Report of the Alumnae Shops
Cecile Covell, '26, Chairman

The Alumnae Shops are beginning to feel their importance for during the past year we have acquired a set of By-Laws.

The committee of twelve is to be a rotating one which seems to be a great diplomatic step. Until this spring, the officers and members functioned on and on through the years. Now no matter how good we think we are, we shall be automatically dropped after serving a three-year period. This has shaken many of us out of our complacency but I am sure will result in many advantages to our shops.

At our last annual meeting, the following officers were elected: Miss Rhoda Reddig, chairman; Miss Ernestine Arnold, treasurer; Miss Ruth Whitfield, secretary. Those of us who have held on to those positions far longer than we should have finally been persuaded to give someone else the opportunity to administer shop affairs.

There has been little change in the operation of the shops themselves. We are most fortunate in retaining the same three paid workers who have been with us for several years. Because of their interest, cooperation and courtesy, we always feel that the credit for our success unquestionably goes to them.

The financial statement for the year is an extremely pleasant one to announce. The profit per periodical report rendered up to and including April 30, 1938, is $20,620.81. Of this $16,216.41 has been transferred to the Endowment Fund of the School of Nursing. The remaining amount is in inventory and cash on hand. Since 1935, we have been turning in between four and five thousand dollars a year, and we feel encouraged in the hope that our five million dollar goal will be reached in possibly two hundred years instead of the originally estimated two hundred and fifty.

Report of the Membership Committee
Anne Penland, '12, Chairman

The Fiftieth Anniversary of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital will fall due in 1942. This should be an occasion of great interest to all members of the Alumnae Association, and it is therefore important to urge those whose dues have lapsed to become members. Since 1942 is "just around the corner" it is none too soon to make a start. The class of 1938 was presented for membership in the Alumnae Association. Miss Voetglen, the president, then graciously presented to the School the gift of the class, an American flag, to replace the one carried by the class of 1918.

Following this the secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for each of the following officers for the ensuing year:

Mrs. Fordyce B. St. John, '13.....President
Mrs. Martin DeF. Smith, '20.....Vice-President
Florence L. Bouton, '33.....Corresponding Secretary
Elizabeth Wilcox, '27.....Recording Secretary
Helen Young, '12.....Treasurer

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
(Term expires 1941)

Mrs. John A. Lockwood Margaret H. McCurdie, '22

The Executive Committee appointed Cecile Covell to fill the unexpired term 1939 of Mrs. F. B. St. John.

Report of the President to the Members of the Alumnae Association
Marie C. Byron, '17

You have heard today the detailed report of the various Committees. The progress we have made is due to the unity of our members and their ever-willingness to shoulder the responsibilities connected with an organization of this kind.

The Alumnae Shops report shows an increasing gain in receipts. Under the able management of Miss Covell and her Committee, the Shops have become a credit to the Presbyterian Hospital as well as a source of income to increase the Endowment Fund of our School.

The receipts of the Radio Fund about which Miss Penland says little and does much is real music to our ears.

Your generous yearly contribution enables us to increase our Sick Benefit and Pension Funds, which are our first interest and to create a Scholarship Fund so badly needed in our type of School.

The Quarterly Magazine brings you news of your classmates, tells of the progress of nursing in the world today, keeps you posted as to Alumnae Funds and their use. The Editor, Miss Kaltenbach, and her Committee are to be congratulated on the years' result. Miss Kaltenbach in a recent study has found that 73% of our graduates are active members of our Association. This is splendid but can we not try to make it 100%?

As your representative to the School of Nursing Committee, I have eagerly listened during the past year to the discussion of ways and means by which the 8 hour day could be put into operation at the Medical Centre. It was no small task from both a financial and administrative angle and this graduation finds the 8 hour day in operation. This Committee supported the Todd-Feld Bill about which our Legislative Chairman has already reported. This bill was passed by both Houses in Albany on March 18th and signed by Governor Lehman on April 6th, thus giving us a new Nurse Practice Act. Should you wish to refresh your memory regarding this bill, please consult the Quarterly Magazine.

It is with regret that I report the death of the following members:

Edith M. Ambrose	'94
Elizabeth Stewart	'96
Frances A. White	'96
Elizabeth Fehrman,	'96
George Vinton Byington	'99
Katherine Greenwood Reilly	'01
Alberta McKeon Curry	'01
Naomi Meiklejohn Patton	'12
Marjorie Decker Owens	'34
Eleanor Vandeburg Morrison	'22

There were nine class reunions this year:

Minnie Healy, B.S.
Emily Simonson, B.S.
Mrs. Margaret Robertson, M.A.
Martha Fabricius, B.S.
Mary Ellen Coyle, B.S.

Today we are all conscious of missing the welcome of one held in great esteem by every graduate. Alexander McKenzie passed away on the Monday following graduation last year. For 28 years Alexander by his kindness and thoughtfulness made life just a little brighter for us. We have lost a real friend.

Six years ago with great timidity I assumed the office of President of this Association. Today I would like to tell you how grateful I am to you for having given me this opportunity to serve you. I am deeply grateful for the splendid co-operation I have received from each and every member and wish to thank you for your interest and help given me at all times.

JOHN M. WHEELER

On the 22nd of August 1938 the Medical Center sustained a great loss in the death of Dr. John Martin Wheeler, Professor of Opthalmology at Columbia University and Director of the Eye Institute of the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. This was not only the passing of one of the world's greatest eye surgeons but a personal loss to countless numbers at the Center who miss the happy encounters with his genial and friendly personality. His idealism and complete self-forgetfulness in service to others will remain always as an inspiration to those who worked with him. Articles and editorials giving an account of his distinguished professional accomplishments appeared in many of the daily papers at the time of his death. The following editorial which appeared in the New York Herald Tribune is a worthy tribute to an outstanding and understanding personality and to a surgeon of renown.

Dr. John M. Wheeler

In the death yesterday of Dr. John M. Wheeler, the distinguished eye surgeon, the profession of healing lost one of its outstanding masters. He was not only a practitioner of unsurpassed technical expertness, but he was a teacher and guide to hundreds who had studied and worked under him. To be able to say, "Wheeler taught me," was to have the hallmark of professional competence. His name was already famous among surgeons, although he was little known to the public when he was called upon in 1931 to operate upon the King of Siam for cataract. The natural and unavoidable publicity attendant upon this event came as something of a shock to Dr. Wheeler, who was one of the most reticent of Vermonters. But he conducted himself, as always, with dignity.

He was on the staffs of many hospitals. He received many honors. His work as director of the Eye Institute of the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center and as professor of ophthalmology in the Columbia University Medical School added to his fame. Moreover, he was an understanding human being and a philosopher. Sometimes, instead of delivering a lecture on surgical technique, he would talk about how to bring peace to the blind. He thought it best not to pamper the blind too much, or show them a maudlin and crippling excess of sympathy, for he understood that blindness is not the ultimate tragedy, and the blind sometimes are able to draw upon amazing mental and spiritual reservoirs. In this he could take his text from Milton: "It is not miserable to be blind; it is miserable to be incapable of enduring blindness."

It is odd to reflect that this man, dead at fifty-eight, had been near-sighted all his life, and sightless in his left eye for the last three years. But there was nothing myopic about his insight into life. He saved vision for many; for others he brought the spirit to face, without bitterness, the everlasting dark.

[Reprinted from the New York Herald Tribune, August 23rd, 1938]

"One figure which the artist has introduced will be recognized with feelings of unutterable admiration and respect by many now in England, who beheld the original engaged in her brave and devoted labour of love.

"They will recall her as they saw her in the days gone by, when her presence cheered the bed of pain and sickness, and made its light penetrate even the thick darkness of the valley of the shadow of death; when men, wasted by disease and fevered with wounds, watched for her gentle ministrations and her words of consolation, even as they who watch for the morning; when she walked in the beauty of the holiest charity and love through scenes of horror and of anguish which thrilled hearts for which battle had no terrors, and when the rough soldier in his untaught but noble chivalry kissed her shadow on the wall as she passed along. Long may England possess such daughters to tend such sons!"

The above quotation is from the descriptive text in a book "The Seat of War in the East" brought from London by Dr. Hugh Auchincloss and given to our Florence Nightingale Collection in October. A large book 16 by 23 inches, bound in red leather contains 81 colored plates made from sketches by William Simpson in the East during the Crimean War. The titles of some of the pictures are:

"The Graves in the Fort on Cathcart's Hill"
(of the officers of the fourth division who fell at Inkermann)
"Charge of the Light Cavalry Brigade"
(25th, October 1854)
"One of the Wards of the Hospital at Scutari"
(referred to in the above quotation)

A gift of twelve letters by Florence Nightingale was made by Dr. Auchincloss in October also. One was written from Balaclava 30th June, 1856.

Regarding a monument sent to her from England and asking her correspondent to ascertain its proper destination.

" . . . I have not the least idea what it is. Whether it is a mistake for Major Gordon's Cross, or whether it is really some other monument, possibly for Scutari, as I have ordered several for that place." Etc.

Four letters were written to Messrs. Henry Graves between 1873-1878.

Referring to some engravings for Edinburgh Infirmary, and a hospital Hymn.

"I am extremely indebted to you for your great kindness in sending the three beautiful 'Christ the Light of the World'; 'The Good Shepherd' and the 'Shepherd at Jerusalem', framed; for the Edinburgh Infirmary.

"With regard to the last four lines of the hospital hymn to be done in illuminated scrolls, I am much obliged to you for the offer of writing them on a card 14 x 6 and would gladly give 66/- for having them done in the prettiest style, did I think it would answer the purpose. But hospital people complain that they cannot read a thing of that size, except by going quite close. What they want appears to be an illuminated scroll of very large size to catch the eye, like a text, across a large room or ward." Etc.

Six of these letters were given to Dr. Auchincloss for the collection by Miss Florence Harvey, a member of the Social Service Department of the Presbyterian Hospital. Five of these written to Surgeon Colonel Hamilton of the British Army between November 10-December 9, 1893, concern conditions in army hospitals and the need of reform. The other letter dated is an eight page letter marked "Private" to "My dear Sir" (no name) concerning the work of the "Barrack and Hospital Improvement Commission."

27 Norfolk St., Park Lane W
March 8, 1865

The last letter in this recent gift was written by Florence Nightingale from 10 South Street, Park Lane W to Wm. Stewart Falls, Esq. M.D. concerning "An Invalid, my maid" who is to be transferred to Bournemouth to a sanitorium. A most interesting letter giving the symptoms and medical history of the patient which are "indicative of incipient Phthisis."

Nov. 20, 1883

"LEAHURST"

On a beautiful day in July, Eleanor Lee and I left Stratford-on-Avon for Derbyshire. Our destination was Leahurst, Florence Nightingale's girlhood home, for Mr. Shore Nightingale, a cousin of hers had invited us to come for lunch and to spend the day there. After changing trains once or twice we arrived at Derbyshire where Mr. Nightingale met us and took us in his car over the beautiful hills to Halloway, a small village, where the Nightingale estate is located. We were thrilled as we drove up the long winding road inside the grounds which led to that beautiful home which we felt we almost knew from the many pictures we had seen. Mr. Nightingale, a charming English gentleman and a most gracious host, took us right into the house where he introduced us to Miss Elkins, his housekeeper-secretary and a very hospitable and delightful lady.

Then followed a tour of the entire house. We saw the many rooms, some of them arranged just as Florence Nightingale knew them and from all the windows lovely views of the surrounding country. Then we went to the small library downstairs and here Mr. Nightingale had arranged a little exhibition of some of his most valuable and important treasures of Miss Nightingale. There were many pictures, books and other writings among them. One of the most valuable of the treasures was a small writing desk given to Miss Nightingale by her "fellow citizens" as an expression of their great pride and affection.

Very soon luncheon was announced and we were taken to the dining-room overlooking a lovely garden. The beautifully polished table and silver were very impressive and we greatly enjoyed the essentially English luncheon of pigeon pie, vegetables, pudding and wine. After coffee which was served in the living room—the one with the large bay window seen in nearly all the pictures of Leahurst—we were taken to the garden. It was typically English, evidently tended with the same care and devotion which makes the English garden famous and countryside so beautiful. It was a great pleasure to see Mr. Nightingale's interest in all the flowers and planting, and to have him tell how he is constantly trying to improve it.

Then we went for another drive through this charming, rolling country where luxurious hedgerows, sometimes made the road so narrow that one had to stop in a turnout to let another car pass and where even the most unpretentious home had a garden full of flowers.

We couldn't have had a more delightful day!

MARGARET ELIOT, '21.

It was too soon to go down to dinner and too late for anything else, so I turned the radio on and lay down across my bed. I had closed my eyes to enjoy the music when suddenly I knew that I was not alone. I sat up and found myself facing a large white rabbit. He held a watch in his hand, the crystal held in place with adhesive tape.

"Oh," he said, "I shall be late for tea in Maxwell Hall" and rushed off down the corridor. I remembered somewhere someone had followed a rabbit and seen strange things, so I jumped up and ran after him. I was just in time to see him disappear down the laundry chute. I followed him and felt myself falling. I landed in a linen hamper. The rabbit was nowhere to be seen. But to my right was a great stack of sheets bearing the sign "2700 sheets from H floor for one month". A smaller mound was labelled "2500 sheets from G floor for one month" and another "11,000 towels from the O.R.". In front of me was a huge mountain of white so that I could not see beyond. On this was a sign reading "For one year 5,000,000 lbs. of laundry."

I began to wonder how I should get over these obstructions when I noticed a pool of blue forming on the floor. The pool became higher and higher until I was forced to climb upon a large box which floated. On the box was huddled a small brown mouse. "Hello," I said, "What's this?"

"Alcohol," said the mouse. "Just alcohol used in the hospital for one year, 86,400 gallons." Strange objects began to float by. One barrel was labelled "Mineral Oil, 750 Gal."; another "Milk of Magnesia, 500 Gal."; and a large one "Ether, 4,000 lbs." "All that was used in Medical Center in one year", said the mouse. A box labelled "Aspirin, 400,000 tablets" bumped into us and nearly sent the mouse overboard. It was followed by another box marked "Cascara, 100,000 tablets, Phenolbarbital, 750,000 tablets, Codeine, 50,000 tablets".

"We can't have the Codeine", I said. "There is no prescription."

"Oh, yes there is", said the mouse. "There are 550 prescriptions of various kinds filled every day at the pharmacy".

Suddenly, I noticed that we had floated over the mountain and I found a large table. The rabbit was there, and seated on either side of the table were many people in grey robes. "They're the patients", said the rabbit, "from the year of 1936. There are 18,000 from the hospital, 55,000 from Vanderbilt Clinic, 2300 babies from Sloane. They have already eaten 1,500,000 meals but they are still hungry. They're going to eat this," he said pointing to the table. "2100 lbs. of turkey. That's for Thanksgiving day; 1300 qts. of milk, 110 qts. of cream, 2800 eggs, 1000 lbs. of potatoes. Thats' the daily average at Medical Center."

Suddenly all the patients jumped up and started to leave. "They're going to bed now", said the rabbit.

"Where?" I said.

"There are 401 beds in Presbyterian", he said. "There are 153 in Sloane, 144 cribbs, 207 in Harkness Pavilion, 162 in Babies, and 90 in Eye Institute."

While he spoke, I heard someone call "Barney". The rabbit heard and turned into a cat and then disappeared entirely.

I rubbed my eyes and looked around. I was back in my room. My radio was saying. "—7th Ave. and 17th St." and the clock showed the dinner hour.

INNIS ARDEN CAMP

"A halt upon the battlefields of life
A truce from all that wounds, a brief repose,
A momentary surcease of the strife
A passing perfume of the minute's rose."

This verse, written by Mrs. Tod, expresses so well the feeling that our alumnae have for the camp on the Tod estate in Old Greenwich. Many are the happy days and weekends that small groups of congenial friends have spent in this delightful retreat on the shores of the Sound. Here every detail has been taken care of for the pleasure and comfort of the faculty and staff of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing. All who have been privileged to enjoy this lovely place will hear with great regret of the havoc caused by the devasting hurricane of September 21st. The retaining wall in front of the camp was undermined and stones and sand from this wall now replace the former well tended patch of lawn. The porch was separated from the main house of the camp and floated over to the kitchen which in turn was moved into the woods. The dining room was demolished and one of the sleeping cabins was carried back many feet. The road was washed away and the lake near the vegetable garden was made part of the sound and now rises and falls with the tides. This damage seemed at first irreparable but Mrs. Tod with her usual generous thought for the nurses is having the camp reconditioned so that it will again be available for those recreating weekends which are as "A passing perfume of the minute's rose."

1942, THE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING

ALUMNAE PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

NEW YORK STATE LEAGUE OF NURSING EDUCATION CONVENTION IN ALBANY

October 6-7, 1938

The State League of Nursing Education met as usual this fall, in spite of the fact that the New York State Nurses' Association voted last year to make its meeting biennial.

Several members of the Staff at Presbyterian attended:—
Helen Young '12, Margaret Conrad '20, Eleanor Lee '20, Rhoda Reddig '28.

The Head Nurse Delegates were:—
Sheila Dwyer, Head Nurse Urological Service.
Margaret Waechter, Head Nurse Pediatric Clinic, Vanderbilt Clinic.

Student Delegate was:—
Janet Hopkins 1939.

The following topics were of special interest:

"Proposals for the Training of Practical Nurses"
Dr. Harlan H. Horner

"Public Health Education by Affiliation"
Katherine Faville

"Public Health Education in the Out-Patient Dept."
Rhoda Reddig

"Degree Programs"
Isabel M. Stewart

"Teaching Units in Psychiatric Hospitals"
Elizabeth Bixler

Jane R. St. John '13, President of the Alumnae Association is a member of the New York State League Committee on Lay Participation which met in Albany during the Convention.

Eleanor Lee '20 conducted a Round Table for Instructors, on the subject of Examination Questions.

Margaret Conrad '20, Chairman of the Program Committee, conducted a Round Table on Post Graduate Clinical Courses.

Among the New York State League of Nursing Education officers are the following P.H. graduates:

Grace A. Warman '17, President; M. Helen Gibbard '23, Secretary; Margaret E. Conrad '20, Director.

Other P.H. Graduates present at the meetings were:
F. E. Fortuine '16, E. W. Conway '22, A. H. Coulter '28, Esther G. Johnson '24.

ELIZABETH ASHE, '02, TELLS MORE OF HER STORY

[The readers of the Quarterly who read about Telegraph Hill Neighborhood Association in 1931 will be very pleased to hear again from Miss Ashe who has told us in the following article, something of the splendid work that is being accomplished on Hill Farm at Bothin Convalescent Home.]

In 1890 a group of young women who were, one might say, forerunners of the Junior League of today, founded an embryonic settlement, which was run by embryonic social workers. It was christened the "Telegraph Hill Neighborhood Association." Young and inexperienced in life as we were, before we knew it, we found ourselves confronted by knotty social and health problems. I became more and more interested in the latter phase of the work until I decided to enter a hospital and learn what I could about the care of the sick so in 1899 I entered the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing.

Fortunately for me a dear friend of mine lived at Henry Street. Consequently all through the three years of training I watched with eager eyes the work at Henry Street. I assure you in those days much more was required of the nurses than making home visits. Every nurse took part in the social activities of the house. They were leaders of the clubs and classes, organized recreation, relief giving.

Within two weeks after being graduated, I was at home in San Francisco climbing the steep slopes of Telegraph Hill, bag in hand, hunting for my first patient. This Italian neighborhood was familiar to me. In fact I had many friends living on its precipitous sides where goats broused on tidbits growing between the cobblestones. Never shall I forget my first reception at a strange door, which was begrudgingly opened in answer to my timid knock. A belligerent woman glared at me suspiciously through a crack in the door, when in answer to her rude question, "What do you want here?" I replied, "I hear your little girl is ill. I am a nurse. Perhaps I can help you care for her." She stared at me a moment before declaring, "I have buried nine. I think I should know how to take care of them by this time" and slammed the door in my face. But I was not dismayed. My old neighborhood friends saw me through and soon suspicion was overcome. A neighborhood clinic was our next development. Friends in the medical fraternity eagerly offered their services. A complete health center was developed, with the cooperation of the Department of Public Health.

Our next great unmet need was a place in the country where we could send women and children for their convalescence or to prevent disease by giving proper food and sunshine. Then Mr. Henry Bothin came forward with an offer of a beautiful piece of land situated in the heart of giant redwoods. An old farm house barn and small orchard were renovated for our use. We opened with a capacity of twelve beds. It was the first institution for the care of convalescence on the Pacific Coast. In those days the necessity of helping people who were recovering from illnesses after weeks, perhaps months, of hospitalization was not realized by their physicians. Relapses occurred many times from the exhaustion following return to normal home life.

The development of preventative medicine has also grown and greatly increased the demand for convalescent care. Children have such recuperative powers that a short illness has little effect on their future lives. But children suffering from diseases such as asthma, arthritis, chorea, bone tuberculosis, etc., are indeed to be pitied as their minds as well as their bodies are not normally developed. Their education is often completely interrupted. Children are sent to us whose whole future happiness depends on the wise understanding and sympathetic care given them when they leave the hospital.

To get good results the nurse in charge of such an institution must have a thorough psychological understanding of child life as her problem is to build up these wasted little bodies and minds. The spiritual life is altogether too often quite neglected and the child may grow up in darkness even if body and mind are developed.

Children frequently come to us blind to the beauties of the world. Their supreme ignorance in regard to the simple lessons of Mother Nature are astonishing. Many refuse to believe that cows give milk. When invited to go to the barn to see the cows milked, they think it a hoax and reply "you can't fool me. I know milk comes from out of a bottle." They don't know the names of the common flowers and nine out of ten won't believe that goats do not grow up into cows.

The invalid child who has acquired the reading habit is rare. It is one of the avenues of natural development which we make the greatest effort to open to them. It is pathetic that the only game many little girls can play is "Hospital." I wish I could take the space to give you many examples of both women and children who are lifted from despair to the enjoyment of healthy lives by these natural experience-lessons of life taught them by understanding nurses and teachers. There is the story of the development of the starved boy, who came to us after spending twelve years of his life in an institution. He was wholly ignorant. He didn't even know how to smile. He couldn't tell time. We gave him a pet, a lovely collie. The dog taught the boy to smile. The gift of a one dollar watch started him on the path of knowledge. Today he is our handy man on the farm, an omnivorous reader and happy as the day is long.

The asthmatic condition of another boy for years had been so acute that he never attended school. He was emaciated, narrow chested and suffered from constant recurrent attacks. The poor little fellow spent most of his life sitting erect in bed gasping for breath. In desperation he was sent from the Children's Hospital to us. He made marked improvement from the beginning, put on weight, attended school and the attacks of asthma became less frequent. But at the end of the year the Superintendent of Nurses was discouraged by an increase in the frequency of attacks although the general condition of the boy, then aged twelve, continued to improve. She watched him carefully and concluded that the housemother who cared for him was too solicitious and sympathetic, that the attacks were really due to a bad breathing habit. She promoted him to the big boys' unit. This house is occupied exclusively by boys from twelve to sixteen years of age. The cure was complete. It is nine months now since John has had an attack. He is at home and at school in the fourth grade.

Every day pediatricians are becoming more alive to the necessity of psychological approach to the medical problems of childhood. Nurses who have thorough psychiatric training will be more and more valuable in the convalescent field of medical work. The need for homes such as ours is ever greater. We feel that the new vision of life, the hope for future happiness with which our little sufferers have been inspired is our greatest achievement.

Today the old farm house is a pleasant memory of the past. It is replaced by a beautiful fireproof building with a sixty bed capacity for children, a ward for adolescent girls and bed cases. A beautiful swimming pool and well equipped play grounds were added last year. The adults work in the flower garden and the children have individual gardens and pets to care for. All come close to Mother Nature's healing care.

NURSING THE CONVALESCENT

By Christine MacDonald, '32.

[Condensed from an article written by Miss MacDonald]

To the average physician and nurse, the convalescent patient is not as interesting as is the patient with an acute illness, nor is he so well understood. But we find that he is more in need of someone who is interested in him as a human being—not merely as the embodiment of an ailment. He is now less dependent on the nurse for his physical well-being and more dependent on her for sympathetic understanding.

Given equal technical abilities, graduate nurses on private duty differ greatly in their knowledge, education, experience and personal qualifications. Patients also differ. Some differences are due to disease. Variation in glandular functioning alone is an important factor in explaining individual differences in activity and temperament. Some patients are characteristically cheerful and optimistic, while others are melancholy and pessimistic. Many others are nervous, irritable and unduly sensitive.

It is always important to remember that the patient sees life from his own angle and as it touches his own ego—not from the nurse's angle and as it touches her. So to get along with her patient, the nurse must have the ability to put herself in his place, to see things from his point-of-view. She must have a real interest in him, and a desire for his welfare.

One of the greatest difficulties the nurse encounters in a hospital is the inability of the patient to adjust to the daily routine. When the patient who, for many years, has lunched at a late hour in the afternoon and dined at a late hour in the evening is required, on short notice, to alter these hours as well as revise most of his other habits, it is not surprising that he shows discontent or even irritability. An adjustment that is satisfactory to the patient is here the nurse's duty.

The patient's mind will not be occupied with imaginary woes if some more profitable and less harmful grist for the mill is supplied. As convalescence gives more time, there is much that the nurse will have opportunity to do. Quoting from a certain physician: "The private duty nurse ought to be able to read out loud in a pleasing manner. She ought to be versed in current events and able to talk intelligently about several subjects of interest, gardening, crocheting, fishing, traveling, whatever will serve as a point of contact between her and her patient."

Individual differences may be expected to express themselves in amusements as well as in other fields. Each patient is likely to be a rule unto himself. Here the nurse must be prepared to play the patient's game; she must not try to run the show. Occasionally, the nurse encounters a vagueness of feeling and thought; the exercise of choice is in itself tiresome and in some cases impossible. Here it does not suffice merely to let everything bathe in a solution of sympathy and understanding. The nurse must see to it that a regular program of activity (for the patient's benefit) is carried out. Amusement for the convalescent exists in many forms, depending a great deal on the illness, age, preferences and degree of convalescence. Books, radio, newspapers magazines, puzzles, knitting, growing plants and excursions through the hospital are some of the diversions of hospital patients. At home, patients usually have the added interest of the household.

Occupational therapy has many sorts of usefulness. It diverts attention from minor and fancied ills. Its self-organizing reaction on the personality of the patient is very important. It serves to give aim, direction and system to activities otherwise scattered, incoherent and antagonistic. Nurses do not need to be told about the therapeutic values of the arts and crafts; they have seen them pull many a patient around to normal.

Music is said to have definite values for the individual. According to an authority: "The possibility that the endocrine glands are affected by music, thereby changing the whole nervous functioning of the body, is one of the theories advanced to account for the remarkable effects that are being obtained from music applied therapeutically. Whatever the cause, the scientific world, stimulated in the first instance by the experiments of Dr. Willem van de Wall of Teachers College, Columbia University, is daily discovering benefits, both physical and psychologic, from the use of music in hospitals."

Book service has been provided for patients in many hospitals. Reading leads to impersonal discussion in the solving of the patient's problems and provides for self-analysis. (We can talk freely and candidly about characters in books. Ourselves and our problems we may hesitate to discuss.) Sometimes the selection of reading material is left to the nurse. She must make her selection with care, to meet age, taste, preferences, capacities and attention span.

The convalescent child is a problem all to himself, not so much to the physician as to the nurse. The nurse must make a friend of the child at once and have him trust her. She must approach the child on his own level. The pediatric nurse must have great patience with the child and with the child's parents. Children are at once fascinating and exasperating, sometimes petulent with illness or restless with returning health. Such petulance and such restlessness must be met. In entertaining the child it is well to know that attention is now given to special toys adaptable to convalescent children. Often the desire to build or draw is awakened not by direct instruction but by bedside story-telling. Soon the child himself instead of the nurse is drawing the illustrations for the stories. An occupied child is apt to recover normal health more quickly. He will not dwell upon his sickness, upon symptoms, as will an adult, and if kept busy, will have a healthy mental attitude towards his experience.

In view of the foregoing, it would seem that caring for patients during convalescence should prove as provocative of interest and effort as the care of patients during the acute stage of illness.

Contributors to "Alumnae Professional Activities"

Elizabeth Ashe, '02: The School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital may well be proud to claim Elizabeth Ashe as an Alumna. Hers is a pioneer spirit as keen today as in 1899 when she entered the Presbyterian Hospital. Before studying nursing Miss Ashe had been interested in Neighborhood work. She soon realized that she would be able to do more for the people whom she wished to help if she had a knowledge of nursing. Breaking away from family tradition, she crossed the continent to study nursing under Miss Maxwell. Upon her return to San Francisco she was instrumental in establishing the first neighborhood clinic and dispensary and visiting nurse service, the first school nursing and the first convalescent home on the Pacific Coast.

Miss Ashe has worked unceasingly in the interest of Public Welfare, keenly alive to the changing needs of changing times. Her work in San Francisco was interrupted in 1917 when she was in France for two years as Chief Nurse of the Children's Bureau of the Red Cross under the direction of Dr. William Palmer Lucas. On the seventeenth of November the nursing organizations of San Francisco are giving a dinner for Miss Ashe, thus publicly proclaiming their admiration for her and their appreciation of her many splendid accomplishments in the field of Nursing and Public Welfare.

CHRISTINE MACDONALD, '32, went to Prince Edward College for three years before she entered the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing. After her graduation Miss MacDonald took a post-graduate course at the Westchester Division of the New York Hospital. This led to her appointment as teaching supervisor at the same institution. After two years she resigned to join the Presbyterian Hospital registry and is now being kept busy as a private nurse. Miss MacDonald is also studying at Columbia for her bachelor's degree.

NEWS BY CLASSES

Elizabeth Haywood Ashe was the guest speaker for the Senior Class on Monday evening, November 24th. The gales of laughter heard in Sturges Hall bespoke her ability to entertain. She not only provoked laughter but inspired the students with a feeling for the ideals of the nursing profession and with a more personal admiration for Miss Maxwell whom Miss Ashe was privileged to know so well.

1905

Jean I. Gunn, O.B.E., one of our most illustrious alumna, again received recognition for her outstanding service to her school, her profession and her City. On the evening of the 28th of September the Alumnae of the Toronto General Hospital payed tribute to Miss Gunn at a silver anniversary dinner. Our Alumnae sent Miss Gunn a basket of flowers on this occasion and in her letter to Miss Young, Miss Gunn writes that "nothing ever takes the place of or lessens the affection for the school in which one's student days were spent. . . . It is a great satisfaction to realize that I am one of the hundreds of graduates of our school who have endeavored to make some contribution to nursing . . . ."

On October 15th in the presence of many hundreds of distinguished guests who practically filled Convocation Hall, the degree of LL.D. (honoris causa) was conferred upon Miss Jean Gunn.

Rose Taylor Cameron has a daughter, Mary Elizabeth, in the entering class at "P.H." this fall.

1912

Frances Johnson Bledsoe has a daughter, Mary Elizabeth, in the entering class at "P.H." this fall.

1917

Elizabeth DeBaun Pike has a daughter, Gertrude, in the entering class at "P.H." this fall.

Sympathy is extended to Helen Kendall Macleod in the loss of her husband Captain J. K. Macleod who died on August 2nd.

1920

Grace Wheeler Barnes (ex '20) has a daughter, Katherine, in the entering class at "P.H." this fall.

Sympathy is extended to Nellie Estey in the loss of her mother who died in August.

Louise Ayres Rowan's son, Archibald Hamilton Rowan, age 17, has been awarded a scholarship at St. Paul's School. He is one of seventeen enterprising English public school boys to be sent to this country. Margaret Eliot and Eleanor Lee visited Louise Rowan in Bletchingley, Surrey, England this summer.

Janet Fish represented the Presbyterian School of Nursing Alumnae Association at the unveiling of the Monument in the Army and Navy Nurse Corps Section at Arlington on November 8th.

1924

Anne Ashe is the nurse at the Out of Door School. This school divides its eight months' term between Manchester, Vermont, and Florida.

1926

Many of the alumnae will note with sorrow the name of Edwina Von Gal under "In Memoriam." Miss Von Gal had been supervisor of the private floors at the Greenwich Hospital for several years. She was killed instantly in a motor accident while on her way back to Greenwich after a short holiday.

1927

Ellen Black has accepted a staff position with the Brooklyn Visiting Nurse Association.

1928

Helen Stoddard is School Nurse at Avon Old Farms, Avon, Conn., near Hartford.

1929

Jane Wilson has left her position at Williams College Infirmary and has returned to the registry.

Sympathy is extended to Caroline Nichols in the loss of her mother who died suddenly this summer.

1931

1932

Sympathy is extended to Evelyn Whyard Albright in the death of her infant daughter who died a few hours after birth on September 2nd.

Alice MacKinnon is studying at Simmons College, Boston, this winter.

Elizabeth M. Kellar is working for her degree at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dorothy E. Smith has accepted a position as a member of the nursing education staff at the Bronx office of the Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor. She writes that the work is extremely interesting.

Ruth Kline Wilks introduced her younger sister Elizabeth as a preliminary student at "P.H." this fall.

Grace Beatrice Chilman has a position with the Public Health Nursing Association of Rochester. Miss Chilman expects to do some studying at Rochester University.

1935

Beatrice Urban Elliott is the nurse for the Personnel Department of the New York Public Library at 42nd Street and Fifth Avenue.

1936

Pauline Christie has been awarded the scholarship in Health Education offered by Massachusetts Institute of Technology. This is a one year course leading to the Certificate of Public Health.

Mary E. Foster is taking the course in Public Health at Simmons College. Miss Foster was most enthusiastic about her experience as camp nurse at the Pathfinder's Camp, Cooperstown, N. Y., this summer.

Ivy Taylor has a position as general staff nurse with the Stamford Visiting Nurse Association.

Jean Gordon writes enthusiastically of her work as Head Nurse at the Children's Hospital in Los Angeles. She plans to take some courses at the University of California.

Helen Curtis is studying at Simmons College this winter.

Elizabeth Beale Schafer is enjoying her work at the Emma Pendleton Bradley Home in Providence. Her sister Ruth is in the September class at "P.H."

Katherine Hardeman is acting superintendent of nursing at the A.M. Hospital for Women and Children, Madura, India.

Beatrice Moore and Martha Stanton are taking the Post-Graduate course in Psychiatric nursing at the Neuro-Psychiatric Institute of the Hartford Retreat, Hartford, Connecticut.

Alice Cameron's sister Beth Cameron is a student in the Preliminary class.

Nellie Youngsman LeBaron is happily settled in Denver. She has a position in the Children's ward of the Colorado General Hospital. She is very appreciative of the cordial reception she has received from Dorothy Watkins Conrad an alumna of the class of '22.

SCHOOL NEWS

In July, when time stood still and there were long hours of leisure, Maxwell Hall had the pleasure of giving a tea in honour of the Crown Princess of Sweden. While the Crown Prince was still a patient in Harkness Pavilion, Princess Louise sent for Miss Young and presented her qualifications as a trained nurse. She had trained in England and her interest in the School of Nursing and the hospital was very real. The tea was held in Sturges and the staff and students had the honour of being presented, and the opportunity of talking with the Princess later. An autographed photograph of the Crown Princess is now in the recreation room, a reminder of a charming and gracious guest.

In September the "probies" arrived. It is good to see the grey uniformed groups again. They sweep around corners, up and down halls, and flow through the tunnel like a grey froth fringed tidal wave.

Which brings us, in natural sequence, to the hurricane. It was a unique experience to be in Maxwell Hall as the lights dimmed, flickered for a moment, and then faded out. The elevators stopped where the current left them. The halls were black except for the occasional glow from a cigarette. Looking across to the hospital we could see the flicker of flashlights and the sputtering of candles. We are rather proud of our staff, and the quiet efficiency with which they handled the emergency.

Wednesday afternoon is no longer just another P. M. Now that the Proby Teas are in full swing it is a time of firelight and gleam of silver, splash of fall flowers, laughter and chatter and fun. We would like the graduates to make a habit of dropping in and having a cup of tea with us.

Forum Club started the season with an open meeting presenting, Miss Louise T. Schlichting, who spoke on "Behind the Scenes at Macy's. She drew a fascinating picture of the different activities, business, social, medical, personal, that dovetail in the management of a huge store. Even more interesting was the speaker herself.

The Glee Club has plans for an operetta and hopes this year to produce a school song. Miss Phillip's dream of a school orchestra may come true, as the probies have not only brought the regular allotment of new talent, but they have their instruments with them.

The Dramatic Club opened the year's social activities with a Hallowe'en Cabaret. It was Open House with dancing and refreshments. Rehearsals have started on several one-act plays in preparation for the production of a three-act play in March.

An International Discussion Club is being organized. The Lending Library is right up to the minute. It gives us a smug and satisfied feeling to know that Harpers and Student Prints, without consulting each other at all, have reviewed the same group of books at the same time. And, of course, all books we review are in the Lending Library.

In Student Prints, October issue, we had an exceptionally interesting account of how a student on vacation took charge of an emergency relief station during the recent hurricane. In the same issue our Student Delegate wrote on the convention held by the New York State League of Nursing Education in Albany, New York. Great stress was placed on the need of psychiatric training in all phases of nursing.

Behind all these activities there is the constant echo of classes, studies, Palisade hikes, plunges in the pool, picnics, group discussions, lectures. Faster and faster go the hours till we feel at times that the great need at Maxwell Hall is a forty-eight hour day.

AILEEN HOGAN.

Willard C. Rappleye, Dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, sailed November 8th on the Nieuw Amsterdam for England, where, on special invitation from Sir Norman Walker, President of the General Medical Council of Great Britain, he will attend the Council's sessions. He will also study the work of graduate medical schools in England.

Obituaries

On the 7th of August Dr. Frederick Tilney died at his home after an illness of several months. Dr. Tilney, internationally famous as a brain specialist and well known to all at the medical Center, had been professor of Neurology at Columbia since 1914. In July 1935, he was elected Medical Director of Neurological Institute, which position he held until January, 1938.

The death of Mrs. Geraldine McAlpin Webster is deeply mourned by the staff at The Babies Hospital. The hospital has lost one of its most understanding friends whose influence will always be remembered with gratitude. Sincere sympathy is extended to her husband, Dr. Jerome Pierce Webster.

Mrs. Webster began her association with The Babies Hospital six years ago when she took charge of the Recreational Therapy Department. She organized and developed this department and under her it has become an invaluable asset to the hospital both because of the joy it brings the children and the contribution it makes to their recovery. After her marriage four years ago Mrs. Webster continued to be keenly interested in this work but was unable to devote the same amount of time to it. Through her generosity it was possible to engage first one and then a second nursery school teacher and to continue to have the supplies necessary to continue the work of the department. At the 50th anniversary of The Babies Hospital Dr. Butler paid a beautiful tribute "to the individuals who have through their loving and generous service built themselves into the fabric of the institution and thus merged their lives with the significance and the enviable reputation of this structure of bricks and mortar." This tribute we are privileged to pay to Geraldine McAlpin Webster.

PALESTINE IN AUGUST 1938

[From a letter sent to Miss Helen Young by Mrs. Frederick Vester, the mother of Frieda M. Vester, '38.]

You are anxious to hear how I found Palestine after an absence of nearly six months in the United States.

My husband met me in Port Said looking very tired. No wonder, living as he has in an atmosphere rent by strife and hatred. It takes its toll. As we boarded the Palestine train in Kantara we were made conscious that we had entered a zone of conflict. Police, armed to the teeth, guarded the train, and as we sped over the desert sands, the anxiety grew lest the tracks had been tampered with. Many such accidents have occurred. We reached our destination in safety, I am thankful to say; but how sad everyone looked! People have forgotten how to smile it seems. We have "curfew" imposed on the Jerusalem, Jaffa—Tel-Aviv, and Haifa areas. That means no one can even cross the road between the hours stated by the Police. We feel like prisoners.

A bomb was thrown into a Hebron bus, filled with poor fruit vendors, killing and wounding many people. This happened not more than a hundred yards from my husband's office. Every day since I returned something terrible has happened.

Bombs, assassinations, and murder are every day occurrences. In a short letter like this I cannot explain the "wheels within wheels" of politics, broken promises and misunderstandings, of which the present state is the outcome.

I believe the British Government is going to push through the "Partition of Palestine," which is the conclusion the Royal Commission came to last year as being the only solution to a bad situation. To the layman like ourselves, it seems a fantastic idea that such a small country could be divided. It is pleasing no one; the Jews are desperate and the Arabs more so. They are fighting each other and the Government. Under such conditions business is paralyzed. Very few tourists venture here and when the few do come, "curfew" prevents their visiting the shops in the evening after the restricted sightseeing they can do. As Jerusalem subsists entirely from the money left by tourists and pilgrims, you can think how sad is its plight.

Our charitable work has continued without interference. Our personnel has worked under trying conditions, even physical danger. My young daughter Louise has taken charge during my absence, and I must say I am proud of her courage and ability.

I have never seen Jerusalem so poor as now since the world war. . . .

MANIPAY, CEYLON

[Excerpts from a letter written to Miss Young by Annette Beals, '37, on August 31, 1938.]

When I sailed last October, I had no idea what kind of a job I was really in for. All I knew was that I was at last getting out to the Mission field where I had wanted to come for so long. I knew nothing at all about Ceylon, although I did know several of the people who belonged or had belonged to the Mission here.

I had been assured that language would not be a problem because everyone talked English. I found out that my American and the English of these people were hardly even related. Gradually I learned that it was merely a matter of getting used to pronunciations and English ways of saying things. I suppose I really did not have as hard a time as someone who might come out for the first time. I do know that many things seemed quite natural to me that must be a trial to new people who have never been in the tropics. For instance, the ever present and annoying crows that caw ceaselessly all day long, I did not even hear after the first day or two. The numerous ants and bugs of all sorts that one comes across at any moment were quite a part of the expected picture to me.

The hospital here is just about as different from any hospital one would ever see in America as it is possible to imagine. But in many ways it is very much like the hospital that my father has up in India.

It is quite a large hospital for a mission hospital in this part of the world. There have been as many as a hundred and fifty patients in the hospital at once since I have been here, though I don't know where we put them all. They would not have minded being put on the floor, but I know we found beds for all of them somehow. Most of the time, however, there are only about a hundred in at a time. The dispensary does good business too, and all the doctors are continually being called out on private cases.

The running of the School of Nursing is my special job. I am in charge of anything that has anything to do with nursing. Fortunately, I have two very good assistants, one to take charge of the graduates and supervise one half of the hospital, and the other to help me teach the students and supervise the other half of the hospital.

We have a lovely, very complete building that was opened for use just after I arrived last November in which is housed the Willis F. Pierce School of Nursing. The girls eat, sleep and have their classes all in this building. The hospital is very near and yet quite separate from the School. All my efforts are being spent on trying to raise the standard of nursing here in Jaffna. It is a hard job trying to convince people that nursing is not the degrading job of a servant. Fortunately, I have the Ceylon Government back of me, for this year they raised the standard of qualifications for all girls wishing to take the Government examination in midwifery which is the nearest thing to becoming a registered nurse in Ceylon. I have managed to collect seven girls this year who have the educational requirements demanded for this examination. One thing that makes this even more of a problem than in other hospitals is that this is a general hospital, and in conservative Jaffna it is practically impossible for the parents of "nice" girls to let their daughters come to a hospital where there are sick men as well as sick women to care for, in spite of the fact that there are plenty of orderlies to do practically all of the nursing of the men. But even though it is up hill work all the time, it never ceases to be interesting.

Very recently, I took ten days off and went up into the mountain country of Ceylon and visited Louise Clark Bingham. It was such fun talking about P.H. with another P.H.er even though she was there some years before I was. There were plenty of people that we both knew, and we had plenty to talk about. She is doing a splendid piece of work up there in Red Cross training. The work keeps her flying from one town to another in her tiny car from one bandaging class to a lecture and so on. Besides learning all about her work, I learned a great deal about Ceylon that I had never known before. The country up there which is one solid mass of tea plantations, is just about as different from palm and rice studded Jaffna plains as it is possible to imagine. The trip was a grand experience because besides having a marvelous time, I added a great deal to my general education.

A RED CROSS NURSE IN SIBERIA DURING THE WORLD WAR

[From an article written by Delia M. Battles Lewis, '15.]

In the old Presbyterian hospital there was a mail box on Miss Maxwell's door. This was to be used by students who wished to write to her. I had one occasion to drop a note in this box. I asked for some special work in my senior year, for when I graduated I planned to go as a missionary to Korea. I soon received a little yellow note with her most individual handwriting (will the nurses of those days ever forget those yellow notes?)

Miss Maxwell was willing for me to have the work I wanted, but could not understand why I wanted to go so far away. Then in her most majestic way she waved her hand toward the East Side and said, "How can you go away and leave all of this?" I granted that there was an appeal there for service but it seemed to me there was a greater need abroad, and so few nurses were then willing to go to a foreign country.

When I left for Korea, the first Presbyterian nurse to go to the mission field, Miss Maxwell sent me off with her best wishes. When I wrote for permission to have the Maxwell and Pope Nursing book translated into the Korean language for our Korean nurses, she willingly consented and sent a generous gift toward the work from the alumnae association. After the world war Presbyterian nurses were to be found in Mission hospitals in many foreign lands and Miss Maxwell felt proud to have her Nurses serving in these distant countries.

When the United States entered the war I was in Korea and I wanted to join the P.H. unit, but our Bishop assured us that we could not serve our country in any better way than in doing just what we were doing—our daily mission work—which he said showed the good will of the United States toward the country we served.

When the Czechoslovakian army crossed Siberia, planning to return to Europe to fight with the allies, they appealed to the allied forces for medical assistance. It was then that an American Red Cross unit was made up in the Orient and sent to Siberia.

The unit consisted of nurses and doctors from Japan, Korea, and China. They were chosen by the American Consul General and known as the Chosen (Korea) Branch of the Japan Chapter of the American Red Cross. Dr. Tueslar in charge of St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo, Japan, was the head of the unit.

It was a hot Oriental August day when we left Seoul. We were dressed in kakai but later in Harbin, Manchuria, when winter came we had regulation Red Cross uniforms and capes. When we found ourselves in the midst of a Siberian winter with the temperature at 60° below, fur coats were added to our equipment.

From Seoul, Korea, we travelled by train north to Harbin, Manchuria, where the Red Cross headquarters for our unit were located. Harbin, situated at the junction of the Trans-Siberian and Southern railroads was an important military point. All allied forces were stationed there. Practically every man on the streets was in uniform. While there I saw Russian, Chinese, Japanese, Czechoslovakian, English, French, Italian, Canadian and American soldiers. A few months before we arrived in Harbin the city was the scene of disorder and lawlessness. While we were there the city was under Chinese martial law.

After a prolonged wait in Harbin a Red Cross train for our trip into the interior of Siberia was finally procured. Although we were made as comfortable as possible there were many signs of the disorder and confusion of war times. The beautiful Trans-Siberian cars, peppered with bullet holes, were in a dirty and run down condition. Since we were to live in the train for a few weeks, we beat the upholstery, washed the windows, and scrubbed the woodwork in our coupes and sprinkled insect powder about our berths. The electric light system was out of commission, so we used candles throughout our whole trip across the country. The road bed was rough and most of the cars were in need of repair so we traveled slowly.

Our trip across Siberia was most interesting. The scenery along the way was superb and varied. We passed through great plains on which were herds of cattle, horses, and camels. Later when the ground was covered with snow, the many white birch trees and evergreens covered with frost, made a picture more beautiful than an artist could paint. As we proceeded on our way we saw many evidences of the destructiveness of war. Bridges had been blown up, boats partially burned, buildings burned and riddled with bullet holes. And in the close smelly stations, for want of homes, there were countless refugees huddled together munching their bits of black bread.

In the various cities where we stopped we always visited the Greek Catholic Cathedrals which we found most interesting. In the shops and places of business supplies were very low. It was almost impossible to buy anything, for shelf after shelf and great show cases were absolutely empty.

After travelling two thousand miles into the interior of Siberia we reached Omsk, where a large building was obtained for a Red Cross hospital. The building was occupied by Cossack soldiers. It was a couple of weeks before the building was evacuated. It was impossible to obtain rooms. The city, as it was, was overcrowded with people who were living in box cars, in station waiting rooms, in congested apartments, and many in dugouts under the ground. So there was no choice for us, we had to live in our cars in the railroad yards.

Our train stood on the track with other trains containing soldiers, refugees, and freight. At one time we stood beside a French cavalry train, and we could hear the horses stepping and stamping day and night. Cows, pigs, and dogs ran about and there was filth everywhere. We were thankful that it was winter for we were at least free from dust and smells.

Our hospital was finally obtained. It had been an agricultural school on a large estate, three miles from the city of Omsk. The house was a beautiful modern building well lighted and heated. There were double windows all over the house, and two vestibules at the main entrance. The cold was terrific, reaching 60° below zero. We went out into the cold gradually, going through the vestibules but even then when we first stepped outside we could hardly catch our breath. We dressed in fur from head to foot and wrapped up our heads so that only our eyes could be seen. One day when it was 25° below zero, we remarked how warm it seemed.

The agricultural school, a large three-story stone building, was readily turned into a hospital. It was planned to have a thousand beds, but while we were there only four hundred were put up for use. I had charge of a large surgical ward of fifty beds. For patients we had Russians, Poles, French, Czechs, Tartars, and Hungarians. One needed the gift of tongues. For help we had Czechs for headmen and German and Hungarian prisoners of war for orderlies.

On the Russian front there was principally guerilla fighting, so most of our patients had simple gun-shot wounds. We also had a great many cases of frost bite.

We received a slight scare one day when typhus broke out in one of the medical wards. As soon as diagnosed these cases were sent to a typhus hospital in the city. There were thousands of cases of typhus in Omsk and many thousands in other cities of Siberia.

It was always a pleasure to work with the lovely materials that our American ladies had prepared for Red Cross hospitals. The supplies were all so neatly and well made and packed and shipped in such splendid condition. The Red Cross in Siberia did much to aid the people in their time of need, as well as being a means of helping to maintain a friendly relationship between Russia and the American Government.

After eight months I returned with some of the members of my party who had gone out in the first unit. Our trip back across Siberia to Vladivostock was under much more trying conditions. We traveled in a fourth class car. It had just hard board seats. We piled blankets on these for beds, but they were so hard the first night we could not sleep. But we adjusted ourselves in time. With very special permission we were allowed to have our car attached to the mail train. Half way across the country we found ourselves left on a siding and the mail train had gone off without us. But our Czechoslovakian guard who knew Russian very well persuaded the station master that we had a right to be attached to a mail train. After some delay we went out on the next mail train.

After we arrived home we found we faced a hard period of readjustment. We admitted that we never again wanted to go through some of the ordeals we had had, but the opportunity of serving as Red Cross nurses during the World War was the greatest experience of our lives, and should our country call again we would be willing to go.

ALUMNAE DAY IN LOS ANGELES

[From a letter to Miss Helen Young from Mrs. Frederick B. Morlock (Jessie M. Welch, '04)]

Last week I drove around to see the old graduates in hopes of having them with us on Alumnae Day when I will have some kind of a meeting for them, luncheon outside or tea at my apartment. I went first to South Pasadena to see Miss Fletcher, '97, and at the address given in the Magazine found Miss Williamson who looks after Miss Fletchers' mail and affairs. She told me that Miss Fletcher is now in Glendale and she is planning to have her moved to a Rest Home in the Fall because she is almost helpless and requires constant attention. I will try to call on her soon. Down to Long Beach to see Miss Helen Sill. Her sister-in-law told me Helen died June 13, 1937 at the age of 72.

I enjoyed reading of Mrs. Griffiths in Palm Springs where I had a brother-in-law at the time. Conditions were bad in places. Seeing one whole town washed away—but the southland looks good now and very enjoyable according to Easterners who are now here.

JUNE 1942

ALL PATHS LEAD BACK TO P.H. TO CELEBRATE THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUNDING OF THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING IN 1892

50TH ANNIVERSARY

1892 1942

In 1892 Anna C. Maxwell was called from St. Luke's Hospital to the Presbyterian Hospital to organize a School of Nursing. In 1942 this school will celebrate its Fiftieth Anniversary.

Today 1942 seems far away but there is much to be done in these next three years if we are to commemorate this Anniversary in a way that is worthy of our heritage. Jane Rignel St. John, '13, our president, is chairman of a sub-committee composed of Helen Young, '12, Marie Byron, '17, Margaret Conrad, '20, Winifred Kaltenbach, '20, and Margaret Eliot, '21. This committee is very happy to announce that Emily Clatworthy, '98, has consented to act as Chairman of the Anniversary Activities Committee.

A membership of 100% by 1942 is our goal. The work toward this objective is progressing under the able leadership of Anne Penland, '12. Miss Penland, Chairman of the Membership Committee, has sent letters to 371 non-members. Already 22 have rejoined the Alumnae Association as current members and the letters expressing pleasure at being able to renew this membership are very gratifying. Two of this number have paid all back dues and have become completely reinstated. Some of the graduates have for some reason been unable to rejoin but have subscribed to the Quarterly Magazine and have thus shown their interest. Watch for announcements in the Quarterly about the progress of plans for the Anniversary. Send suggestions to Emily Clatworthy, '98, 140 East 46th Street, New York City. We shall need the help of each and every graduate to make this event one that is worthy of our history and of our two leaders through these years, Anna C. Maxwell and Helen Young.

ATTENTION! BASE HOSPITAL No. 2

Nurses, officers and enlisted men of the Presbyterian Hospital Unit are cordially invited to a reunion of the Unit. Dinner at the Collingsworth Hotel, 45 West 35th St. Any member of the unit who has not received a notice please communicate with Dr. Harold Newhof, 4 East 95th St., N. Y., or with Mrs. Joseph Manning, 16 Argyle Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

CHANGE IN BY-LAWS

At the Quarterly meeting of the Alumnae Association on February 14, 1939 the members voted unanimously to accept the following change in the by-laws. During the discussion which preceded the voting it was brought out that the membership committee must be responsible for determining the eligibility for a Resident Associate Member. No alumnae practicing in the counties which comprise District 13 is eligible for such membership.

Newly Adopted By-Laws Relating to Membership

Only graduates of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital in the City of New York in good standing and all members of the unincorporated body known as "The Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses in the City of New York" as it existed on March 10, 1899, shall be eligible to membership in this Association.

Such members shall be divided into the following classes:

1. Resident.
   (a) Active.
   (b) Associate.
2. Non-resident.
3. Honorary.

Sec. 1. (a) Resident active members shall be those who are registered nurses (New York State) residing or working in the counties of New York, Bronx, Westchester and Richmond (District 13).

(b) Resident associate members shall be those registered nurses who are not required to belong to District, State, and National Associations, owing to the fact that they are not participating actively in the practice of nursing. Resident associate members cannot hold office but may attend all meetings of the Association. They may take part in all discussions at such meetings, serve on committees and vote on all questions in which the welfare of the Association or its work is involved except to vote on or represent this Association in matters pertaining to District, State and American Nurses Associations.

Sec. 2. Non-resident members shall be those registered nurses (New York State) not residing or working in any of the aforesaid four counties. Non-resident members cannot hold office but may attend all meetings of the Association. They may take part in all discussions at such meetings, serve on committees and vote on all questions in which the welfare of the Association or its work is involved except to vote on or represent this Association in matters pertaining to District, State and American Nurses Associations.

Dues for Associate Resident Members shall be the same as for Non-Resident Members. $3.00 annually.

Obsolete By-Laws Relating to Membership

Only graduates of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital in the City of New York in good standing and all members of the unincorporated body known as "The Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School for Nurses in the City of New York" as it existed on March 10, 1899, shall be eligible to membership in this Association.

Such members shall be divided into three classes, viz.: Active resident; Non-resident, and Associate Members.

Sec. 1. Active resident members shall be those who are (New York State) Registered Nurses residing in the counties of New York, Bronx, Westchester and Richmond. (See footnote 1.)

Non-resident members shall be those who are (New York State) Registered Nurses not residing in any of the aforesaid four counties. They shall be entitled to all the privileges of active resident members (attend all meetings of the Association, to take part in all discussions at such meetings and to vote on all questions in which the welfare of the Association or its work is involved) except to vote on or represent this Association in matters pertaining to District, State and American Nurses Associations. (See footnote 2.)

Associate members shall be those who are not entitled to active resident or non-resident membership. They shall be entitled to all the privileges of non-resident members, but shall not hold office in the Association.

Footnote 1.—These counties comprise District No. 13 of the New York State Nurses Association.

Footnote 2.—Active resident members are, as such, entitled to membership in the New York Counties Registered Nurses Association and the New York State and American Nurses Association; but non-resident and Associate members are not as such entitled and are urged to join such associations through the district of the Association in which they reside.

All other sections of the By-Laws on Membership remain the same.

Because of the campaign for 100% membership we repeat the clauses relating to reinstatement.

Any member of the Association whose membership shall have been terminated by default of payment of dues or resignation, may be reinstated on the recommendation of the membership committee, under the conditions stated below.

(a) Graduates may be reinstated as members of the Alumnae Association with all privileges upon payment of all dues in arrears.

(b) Graduates who have been dropped from the Association because of non-payment of dues may be reinstated without payment of dues in arrears in which event they are ineligible for the Pension Fund, the Sick Benefit or the Loan Privilege.

ADDITIONS TO THE FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE COLLECTION

The following letter to Miss Young explains a recent gift—

171 East Seventieth Street

"Dear Miss Young,

These letters, books and excerpts from books with Florence Nightingale's inscriptions, were made possible by a gift this Christmas from Mr. Russell C. Leffingwell.

He asked me to use his gift toward our Nightingale collection or any other purpose I wished.

I am sure you know how much pleasure it gives me to send them to you.

Yours very sincerely,

HUGH AUCHINCLOSS."

January 9, 1939.

BOOKS

1. A Bible with the following inscription on the title-page

"Offered to Fanny Burton
With Florence Nightingale's very best wishes for her highest & humblest success both here & hereafter in God's strength & for all her work done in God's name."
July 1890.

2. The Fall of Man and other Sermons,
Preached before the University of Cambridge, and on various public occasions.
By Frederic W. Farrar, M.A., F.R.S., Canon of Westminster, Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen.
Publishers—MacMillan & Co., London 1878.

Inscription on the title-page

"Offered to Nurse Vousden
On her entrance into St. Marylebone New Infirmary: with Florence Nightingale's earnest prayers that she and all her Patients & all the Nurses may be led to that higher life which our Lord wills for us all."
June 1881.

EXCERPTS FROM BOOKS

1. Front page of a cover of a book given to Alice Mochler.
"Offered to Miss Alice Mochler on her birthday with Florence Nightingale's best love & faith & thanks: And that she may have many, many happy returns of this day to go on & enjoy doing good to all 'As ever in our Great Taskmaster's eye' is the most earnest prayer of her fellow pilgrim."
Lea Hurst, Sept. 24, 1879.

2. "With F. N's. truest gratitude to Miss Mochler for her ever great kindness to my dear Mother and for many other things."
Lea Hurst, Sept. 24, 1879.

3. The title-page from a book, The Life and Work of St. Paul, with the following inscription—
"Offered to
Alice Mochler on our parting after my dear
Mother's going 'home', with Florence Nightingale's love."
London, March 1880.
"And pray that we may all be followers of St. Paul.
And why are we not? God is the same.
He can again make perfect
His strength in our weakness."

LETTERS

March 20/65

"Miss Nightingale presents her compliments to Mr. Leffs, and begs to know whether there is any chance of the arrival of the book ordered on February 25 and finally promised last week—from Paris,—Chinese poetry. —Translated by M. d'Herve."

3. The page from a letter (no date) to Bernard Mallet, Esq., with Florence Nightingale's signature—in reply to a letter asking for a recommendation of an applicant.

4. A letter to Sir Neville Chamberlain—

"10 South St. Park Lane W.
July 5/86

Dear Sir Neville Chamberlain:

How good of you to call! I should be so sorry not to see you before you leave London. Might I hope to see you on Wednesday at 5 or at 6? or, if not then, to-day (Monday) at 6:30 or at 3?

Ever sincerely yours
Florence Nightingale."

PICTURES

AFFILIATION IN NEUROLOGICAL NURSING

On February 1, 1939, the affiliation in neurological nursing at the Neurological Institute became a unit in the University nursing program. This affiliation does not replace the experience in psychiatric nursing at the Westchester Division of New York Hospital, but is an alternative to it. Beginning with the September section of 1939, every student will have either the twelve-week affiliation in psychiatric nursing, or the eight-week service in neurological nursing. Ten "P.H." students reported to the Institute on February first.

The University appointments for supervision of this educational program are as follows:—

Assistant Professor—

Cecile Covell, R.N.
The Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing
In the City of New York, 1926
B.S. Teachers College, Columbia University, 1936

Instructors—

Dorothy D. Daubert, R.N.
Mount Sinai Hospital School of Nursing, 1932
B.S. Teachers College, Columbia University, 1937

Edith M. De Young, R.N.
B.A. Hope College, 1934
The Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing
In the City of New York, 1936

Miss Daubert comes to us from the University of Michigan, where she has been instructor in neurological and medical nursing.

The other schools affiliating at the Neurological Institute are those of St. Luke's Hospital and Lenox Hill Hospital, whose students come for a period of twelve weeks.

The importance of instruction and experience in nervous and mental disease nursing is becoming generally recognized. This phase of nursing is receiving increasing emphasis and attention, and its inclusion in our basic course is a significant event.

"NURSES' HOUSE" BENEFIT

There's magic in the very words of Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center combined with party. On the evening of February 10, 1939, a Valentine Party was held on the roof of the Presbyterian Hospital building. It was conducted as a benefit, the proceeds going to Nurses' House at Babylon, Long Island. This Nurses' House at Babylon was made possible through the generosity of a woman, who was anxious to provide a home for convalescent public health nurses. In the past few years the House has been managed by Miss Alta Dines of the A.I.C.P. and Miss Florence Johnson of the American Red Cross. Nurses may go there for convalescence or vacations of varying lengths at exceedingly reasonable prices. It fills a great need. At present plans are under way to build a new wing on Nurses' House, to be known as the Clara D. Noyes Memorial Wing. The money from the Valentine Party is to be used for this addition.

Everyone at the party seemed to be having a fine time. There were the usual fortune tellers, white elephants, cake and candy sales, and the most realistic drinking spot called "Joe's Saloon" with all the atmosphere, but none of the spirits, of the corner saloon of the '90's. The floor show was excellent, consisting of demonstrations of ballroom dancing and the fine tricks of a Medical Center magician. Delicious refreshments were served and after a few more dances people departed—exclaiming again what a fine party it had been. And the financial results were most gratifying, the total profit being $836.00.

HELEN C. GOODALE, '32.

Who can go to Nurses' House?

COMMENTS ON THE 1939 INSTITUTE

The fifth annual institute of the New York Counties Registered Nurses Association was held January 30-February 1, 1939 at the Hotel Commodore and at Hospitals and Health Centers in New York City. The total attendance was 3,022.

The opening dinner at the Commodore on Monday evening was a great success with Margaret Eliot, Chairman of the Dinner Committee. Seven hundred people attended among whom were many distinguished guests, members of Nursing Committees and Hospital Boards of Trustees and prominent representatives of the medical and nursing professions. The need for more better-prepared nurses was stressed in the discussion of the Proposed National Health Program and the Nursing Needs of New York City.

The Red Cross luncheon at the Commodore on Tuesday was another outstanding event of the Institute. Of the five hundred guests present about one-third were student nurses. It was an inspiring occasion and made everyone most enthusiastic about the Red Cross Nursing Service.

Twelve clinical conferences were held at eight different hospitals and at two Health Centers, Kip's Bay and Lower Westside. The attendance at these meetings totalled 1,500. Directors of Nursing cooperated in every way to make these programs profitable. Among the topics were, "Care of the Pneumonia Patient," "Recent Developments in the Treatment of Diabetes," "Newer Concepts in the Diagnosis and Treatment of Peptic Ulcer" and several others. Presentation of a subject from all the points of view, that of the doctor, the nurse, the social worker and the dietitian gives opportunity for correlation which is invaluable.

The program at Presbyterian Hospital consisted of two very interesting and instructive talks. Dr. David Seegal spoke on "Recent Advances in Therapeutics," emphasizing the use of "M&B 693" in the treatment of pneumonia. Dr. Thomas T. Mackie of Roosevelt Hospital discussed the recent advances in the treatment of "Ulcerative Colitis."

The clinical conferences at the Institute this year were a new venture and responsible in a large part for the enthusiastic and gratifying attendance at all sessions.

IMPROVEMENTS MADE AT THE CENTER DURING THE PAST SIX MONTHS

Sterilizing Room
Locker Rooms
Additional Quarters for Resident and Interne Staff
Reading Lamps for Patients
Emergency Lighting System

Sterilizing Room

Due to a closer affiliation with the Neurological Institute, Babies Hospital and Presbyterian Hospital, it was deemed advisable to have a central sterilizing and surgical supply room located as near to the center of all activities as possible. With this end in view, space was provided on Floor X, opposite the Storeroom. Three 50 drum sterilizers and two smaller sterilizers have been installed. A storage room for 500 sterilized drums and bundles has been provided. The plan of operation calls for the preparation and sterilization of all surgical supplies used throughout the above mentioned hospitals. The packing of all drums for sterilization such as towels, gowns, gloves, dressing and draping will be done here. Additional storage space for sterile supplies will be needed on each floor. One very interesting innovation is a glove powdering cabinet which will enable the workers to powder and prepare gloves in the main workroom without distributing powder all over the room.

Locker Rooms

Room 450 on Floor X is now a spacious well ventilated locker room for the use of nurses and a few technicians who have to change from street clothes to uniforms. There are 325 lockers in this room. The arrangement of the room resembles that of the locker room for special nurses in Harkness Pavilion. There are facilities for showers, there are ironing boards, sufficient benches and well lighted mirrors and an attractive and comfortable rest room. Plans have been made and work is progressing on the Locker Rooms for the following groups:

All female clerical workers
All male employees
Waitresses and pantry-maids
Housekeeping maids, and cleaning and grounds maids
Nurses aides

The rearrangement of the space on Floor X will provide locker accommodations for 1,060 employees.

Reading Lamps

A very much needed addition to the ward equipment was recently made when 131 treatment and reading lamps were authorized by the Board of Managers to be placed on the ward floors of the hospital for the use of patients. Mr. F. Louis Slade, Chairman of the House Committee, made this helpful suggestion and not only the patients but the nurses and doctors benefit by this addition.

Resident and Interne Quarters

Due to the increase in the Resident and Interne Staff, the Board of Managers of the hospital authorized that quarters be provided for twenty additional men, ten to be placed in the stem on Floor E and ten in the stem on Floor C.

Emergency Lighting System

The installation of an electric power system throughout the hospitals of the Medical Center is nearly completed at a cost of about $30,000.00. This electric generator will insure sufficient power to run the boilers and stokers and to provide limited elevator service as well as electric lighting in all tunnels and at key locations on each floor. Special care has been given to the emergency needs of the operating rooms and the delivery rooms.

ALUMNAE PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

THE ROLE OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE IN THE NEW YORK CITY DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

KAREN E. MUNCH, '26.

The Bureau of Nursing is the largest bureau of the Department of Health. At present there are over eight hundred and fifty nurses working throughout the city. Miss Amelia Grant is the Director. She is assisted by six superintendents, five regional supervisors and a staff education group.

The five boroughs are divided into health center districts, each consisting of a population of about 250,000. A health officer, an administrative nursing supervisor with one or more field supervisors, and a group of staff nurses are assigned to each district.

The requirements for becoming a Health Department nurse are set up by the Municipal Civil Service Commission, and the applicant must pass the written oral and physical examinations given by this Commission. All past experience and training are investigated, and at the present time the requirements are: a high school diploma, graduation from an accredited School of Nursing, New York State registration, and six months' experience in public health or its equivalent in college credits. The applicant must also have resided in New York City for two years before filing an application to take the examination. Many of the nurses who have taken the examinations lately have academic degrees in addition to the above requirements.

With the opening of the many new health centers, there are more and more opportunities for promotion. After one year of service, any nurse is eligible to take the supervisor's examination.

In all the organized health centers, generalized nursing has been introduced. The services are educational and advisory. The nurse considers the family as her unit, and plans her work around this group. She reports to her supervisor in the branch office daily and receives her calls for the day. Before leaving the office, she goes through her files to see if there are any other members of the family to visit at this time.

The staff nurse assigned to a school goes to her school in the morning. Here she assists the physician with physical examinations and acts as advisor regarding the school health program. She examines the children sent to the medical office after the teachers' morning inspection and decides whether or not they should be excluded. She interviews the parents and explains the need of treatment or correction of defects found by the physician.

If the parent is unable to come to the school, the nurse goes to the home for a consultation regarding the child's dental care or orthopedic condition; and plans are made with the mother for correction and treatment. In the same household there may be a young baby who is under care at the Child Health Station, and the conference nurse may ask the visiting nurse to instruct the mother regarding the preparation of the new formula and the introduction of cereal into the baby's diet. If there is a three year old child in this home who is not under medical supervision, he is referred to the Child Health Station for vaccination and diphtheria immunization and to be registered for bi-yearly physical examinations.

The nurse may have to make a visit to a home where there is a new case of scarlet fever. Here she will give instruction to the mother and explain the reason for placarding the door. If isolation is not possible, the nurse arranges for hospitalization after consulting with the family physician. Visits are made to the tuberculosis patient, newly diagnosed or returned from the sanatorium, the family is helped to adjust to this new problem, and arrangements are made for examination of all contacts.

Staff nurses assist in the various clinics at the Health Centers one or two afternoons a week; for instance, the Child Health Station (a well baby clinic) and the Chest Clinic, where diagnosed cases of tuberculosis are examined regularly and contacts of diagnosed cases are referred for examination and x-ray. In some centers there is also a Social Hygiene Clinic for diagnosis and treatment; also an anti-rabic treatment clinic.

A Child Health Conference Session provides for medical and nursing supervision of the well child not able to afford other medical care. Except for emergency cases, examinations are made by appointment only. The baby is seen by the physician at regular intervals for examination and supervision. The nurse interviews the mother before she leaves to make sure that she understands the physician's orders and the preparation of the new foods. She also gives the mother an appointment for a nurse's conference between the doctor's appointments for a check on the condition of the baby. or requests that a field nurse visit the home and help the mother in preparing the new formula.

About nine visits are made to the physician during the first year, two of these being for diphtheria immunization and one for vaccination. As the child grows older, he comes in only twice a year until he is ready for his final examination before entering school.

Sick children are immediately referred to their family physicians or to a hospital clinic. The field nurse may visit the home to ascertain that the child is under medical care, but the child is not re-admitted to conference session until he is discharged from the other medical service.

An interesting Child Health Teaching Project was started last fall at Kips Bay-Yorkville Health Center. The purposes of this project are:

1. To improve the service given to the individual mother and child.
2. To teach the medical and nursing personnel improved technics and teaching methods.
3. To make the service more uniform throughout the city.
4. To help the physician and nurse to recognize the problems of their district.
5. To give added knowledge on child health and to stimulate interest for further reading and discussion.

The physicians and nurses from other Child Health Stations attend the Kips Bay-Yorkville Station for four weeks. During this time, they are relieved in their own stations by physicians and nurses who have had this experience. A program is prepared for each group. This includes conferences and discussions with the physician who is the director of this project and the nurse in charge of the project, assisted by the educational and nutritional consultants of the Health Department. Two or three conferences are held with the Health Officer and the supervising nurses from the visiting district; two conferences with a child psychiatrist; four with a professor of orthopedics; two with a professor of dentistry; and visits to a pre-school dental clinic and to a nursery school.

Other new teaching projects have been started in the last year or two to improve the medical and nursing service given to the people of New York City. At present, there are three Teaching Centers where the newly appointed nurses receive a six weeks' course of instruction in the procedures and policies of the Health Department.

NURSING AT THE LIGHTHOUSE

MARTHA K. GRAESSNER, '37.

The responsibilities of the eye nurse are many. First of all, an eye clinic differs from other clinics in as much as one deals with partially blind and blind cases. The voice should be the first consideration because the hearing of the blind is so acute, and their impression is often formed by the voice of the nurse and doctors in an institution. The blind do not wish pity, and so many of them do not wish others to be made aware of the fact that they are blind. This can be avoided in the way you help them to a chair, or go about their problems. The most important responsibility of the eye nurse is her first contact with the patient when she interprets the eye disease to him, and refers him to a recognized agency where he can be rehabilitated. This makes it necessary for the nurse to know all the resources and agencies for the blind. The same applies to a partially sighted person, known as a sight conservation case. By this we mean one whose vision does not enable him to do work which a normally sighted person can do, but who is not blind. If this patient is a child, he would attend Sight Conservation Classes in public school.

The main purpose of our Eye Clinic is the prevention of blindness, and I do not know where in any field a nurse can play a more important part. I think too, often when eye diseases are concerned, one only thinks of the eye and not of the many phases that go with it.

The question that most often arises is, what is the mental attitude of the blind? If the mental attitude of the blind appears to be worse than a sighted person, it is partly because of lack of economic security. This of course is true of anyone who lacks economic security. The way to combat the mental attitude of the blind is to give them work and play. The blind, with the proper orientation, have many capabilities. In our Eye Clinic, where they are first examined for their eye condition and recommendations made, we refer them to the social welfare division of the Lighthouse, where the work and play limitations and recommendations are carried out.

When a patient is first admitted to the Lighthouse Eye Clinic, he is examined ocularly and a diagnosis made. He is then classified as blind, sight conservation, or not blind. After the patient has been seen, the supervisor explains his eye condition to him. We feel that the first contact with a patient is very important because he will have confidence in the very fact that some one has had time to explain matters to him. If the adult or child comes under the sight conservation classification, he may be referred for music, camp, recreation; or the adult for employment, recreation and braille. A blind case is determined on the basis of diagnosis, field of vision, and factors which limit usefulness of vision, though the vision may be greater than 20/200. Both blind and sight conservation cases are the ones that are referred to the social welfare division of the Lighthouse for vocational and recreational guidance. They maintain a music school, work shop, and a club house for blind men, a camp for children and adults. They also provide the following services for the blind: General welfare, emergency financial relief in loans, health service, hand-craft classes, home teaching, training, placement, reading service, guiding service, clothing bureau, ticket bureau, braille, and a craft shop for the sale of blind-made articles. Their work includes news-stand, salesmanship, craft work (which includes weaving, furniture making), stenography and typing for the women, and musicians. The social life includes dancing, swimming, clubs, bowling, dramatics, in fact, nearly everything that a sighted man may do.

The normally sighted world is made up for normally sighted people, and when a person loses his sight, an adjustment must be made, and in so far as nurses and doctors around them assist the blind to as near as possible a normal life, then something worthwhile is being done.

In conclusion I cannot help but say, that I think three months each in eye nursing and mental nursing should be a required part of the curriculum of a training school. I mention mental nursing because I believe that while an individual is ill, he is a mental case. The tie-up between the eye and mental attitudes is very strong. One year of graduate work in an Eye Hospital would be advisable for practical work before taking charge of a clinic. Social service is also an important factor in the preparation of an eye nurse because of the extensive follow-up necessary for certain eye diseases.

Contributors to "Alumnae Professional Activities"

Karen Elise Munch, '26, received her B.S. degree after graduating from the five year course given at the Presbyterian Hospital and Teachers College. She was headnurse in the children's ward at the Medical Center for several years. In 1936 Miss Munch received her Masters Degree in Public Health from Teachers College. At present she holds the position of Instructor at the Kips Bay-Yorkville Health Center.

Martha K. Graessner, '37, spent two years at the Cornish School of Music after her graduation from High School. Following this she spent three years in training in a hospital from which she was unable to register in N. Y. State. After a year as an office nurse in eye work, six months theory in Social Service and four years social work at the N. Y. Skin and Cancer Hospital and N. Y. Association for the Blind Miss Graessner entered training again. Following her graduation from the Presbyterian Hospital she accepted a position as supervisor at the Lighthouse Clinic at 111 East 59th St., N. Y. City.

"Elizabeth Hayward Ashe has been made the first honorary member of the San Francisco County Nurses Association and the 'one and only consultant in public health nursing for the Public Health Department of San Francisco'. These honors were conferred on Miss Ashe at a dinner given by the San Francisco County Nurses Association (November 17th, 1938). Miss Ashe is known as a war nurse, social worker, philanthropist, friend of children, of the sick, and of the poor in Belgium, France, and America." Excerpts from an article in the American Journal of Nursing.

Sympathy is extended to Agnes Maynard whose mother died on October 25th.

1912

Frances Johnson Bledsoe has accepted the position of Parish Nurse at the Presbyterian Church at 73rd St. and Madison Ave. She began her work here on February 1st.

1914

Sympathy is extended to Olive Milroy in the loss of her mother on November 11th, 1938.

Sympathy is extended to Florence Graham Weber whose father died in December.

We have read with pride an article in the N. Y. daily papers which told of the work of Frances Goheen Avison. The article is headed "Woman Aids Korea in a 13 Year Service." Quoting from this article. "Mrs. Avison, home on a furlough is visiting the baby clinics of New York City. It was in Harlem Health Center that the story of her 'modified milk' for very young babies was told recently to a group of astonished nurses. Mrs. Avison's resourcefulness found in the ubiquitous soy bean an instrument for reducing infant mortality in a district where 95% of children were afflicted with malnutrition." We regret that space does not allow the printing of the whole article but hope that Mrs. Avison will some day write of her many activities which have been of such material service to mothers and babies in Korea.

1919

Mary Elizabeth Pillsbury has "gone into business." If you are in the neighborhood stop at The Tudor Gift Shop, 5 Prospect Place, Tudor City. Here you will find an attractive gift shop and lending library under the management of Miss Pillsbury and Miss Hudler.

1920

Sympathy is extended to Caroline Morris Holmes in the loss of her father. Dr. Jacob E. K. Morris who had practiced his profession as a surgeon in Olean, N. Y., for 52 years, died on January 24th at the age of 82.

1922

Sympathy is extended to Leila May Judson in the loss of her mother. Mrs. Judson was a returned missionary greatly respected for her services in the mission field.

1923

Many of the Alumnae may have heard of The Cape Cod Fishnet Industries but may not realize that this interesting work is being done by Ada Warden Worthington. A visit to her exhibit at 16 West 46th St. will be well worth while. All kinds of attractive smart wearing apparel have been created from fish net material.

1925

An interesting Christmas letter from Frances Wooding describes their Christmas at Tabriz. Her nurses were introduced to the singing of Christmas Carols. Since they were not able to speak English the carols were sung in Persian. Miss Wooding also wrote of the first government examinations in nursing. In the future it will be necessary for all nurses to take these examinations.

1926

Sympathy is extended to Hilda Gray Rossbottom in the loss of her father in January.

1927

Louise Watkins Atkinson is a true daughter of modern pediatrics. She writes that her young son was on a three meal a day schedule before he was four months old and at the age of 7 months he had tripled his birth weight. The old rating sheets for babies will have to be revised!

Sympathy is extended to Ethel Washburn in the loss of her mother who died in November.

1928

Marion Fitzhugh is now a member of the Social Service Staff at the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center. She began her work here on March first as medical social worker in the dermatology clinic.

1931

Henrietta Doltz finished her college work in June. On July 1st she became headnurse on the Gynecological Floor at Harborview Hospital which is connected with the University of Washington. In November Miss Doltz was appointed supervisor of the surgical division which includes five surgical wards and the classroom teaching of the students. Presbyterian Nurses who hold hospital positions will be interested in reading the very able discussion on Personnel Policies for Staff Nurses written by Miss Doltz and found on page 165 of the February issue of the American Journal of Nursing.

1932

Sympathy is extended to Harriet Thorn in the loss of her mother who died on March 4th, 1939.

1933

Elizabeth C. Stobo is the nurse at the Child Health Clinic at 342 East 86th St. This clinic is endowed by Mrs. Jesse Isadore Strauss and is run in conjunction with the department of health. Miss Stobo spends the morning at the clinic and the afternoon visiting in the homes.

Agnes McCabe has a position teaching problem children in a high school in Oakland, Cal.

Grace B. Chilman writes enthusiastically of her life in Rochester. She is studying at the University part time and hopes to go to Syracuse University for the Summer session during a leave of absence.

1935

Martha Aiken, '35, has a position with the Instructive Visiting Nursing Association in Richmond, Virginia.

1936

Mary E. Foster is a staff nurse with the Boston Community Health Association.

Nancy Baumis is on the private duty registry of the King Edward Memorial Hospital at Paget, Bermuda.

Alba Irequi King is now living in the Catskills. Her husband is the minister in a church in Arkville.

Grace Marion Keith has a position at the Shriners Hospital, Greenville, South Carolina.

1937

Cora L. Hiltebrant has a position in the William Beaumont General Hospital in El Paso, Texas.

1938

Marion Whitfield, class agent for 1938, has made a complete list of the class of '38 with the address of each member and a statement about what each is doing. This list was sent as a Christmas greeting to all members of the class.

Leona Berthot is headnurse on I. Center. This appointment should have been published in the November issue for the appointment was made in August.

Mary Draper is on the staff of the Fairfield Visiting Nurse Association.

Thelma Flint is with the Rochester Visiting Nurse Association.

May Goheen is instructor at The Presbyterian Hospital in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Julia Gromtzeff is with the Henry Street Visiting Nurse Association.

Martha Stanton is a post graduate student at the Neuropsychiatric Institute in Hartford.

Frieda Vester sailed in January to join her parents at the American Colony in Jerusalem.

Thirty-one of the 1938 graduates are on the general duty staff and are in various hospitals at the Medical Center.

1939 GRADUATION AND CLASS REUNIONS

Already we are looking forward to the Graduation of the Class of 1939! We will begin celebrating with the dinner at Pierre's at which the members of the Graduating Class are guests of the Alumnae Association. The dinner will be on Wednesday evening, June 7th and we hope you will urge your classmates to come and help us do honor to the Class.

On the following day, Thursday, June 8th, the Graduation Exercises for the Class of 1939 will be held in the Garden. Rev. Maitland Alexander of Pittsburgh will give the address. Immediately following the exercises the graduates will receive their families and friends at Maxwell Hall.

Friday, June 9th, is Alumnae Day. That afternoon at 3 p.m. the Annual Alumnae Meeting will be held at Maxwell Hall, followed by tea on the lawn, weather permitting. Other features of Alumnae Day are the Hobby Show and the boutonnieres! Miss Manola Phillips will be glad to gather in any pieces of your handiwork for the "show" for we want to see what you can do! If you just leave your "works of art" at Maxwell Hall good care will be taken of them and you will get them back unharmed. The blue and white boutonnieres have become tradition and no Alumnae Day would be complete without them. We make them and sell them just as fast as we can and by night everyone here and many others are wearing these little bunches of blue corn flowers and white sweet peas. The proceeds send the head nurses to the conventions during the year.

The classes having reunions this year are as follows:

1899	40th Anniversary
1904	35th Anniversary
1909	30th Anniversary
1914	25th Anniversary
1919	20th Anniversary
1924	15th Anniversary
1929	10th Anniversary
1934	5th Anniversary

Members of these classes will be notified of details later.

ALUMNAE MEETINGS

Two meetings of the Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital have been held in Anna C. Maxwell Hall since the last issue of the Quarterly Magazine went to press.

The first meeting was held Thursday evening, November 17th, 1938, with the new president Mrs. St. John, presiding. The main topic of the short business meeting was the reading and discussion of a proposed change in the By-laws of the Alumnae Association in respect to membership. This change was to be voted on, after due consideration, at the Quarterly meeting in February.

The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Ogden Reid, Vice-President of the "New York Herald Tribune." Mrs. Reid spoke concerning the newspaper as a potential tool in the mental care of the sick, to be used to maintain an objective interest in the outside world. She also stressed the need for a wider understanding of the meaning as well as the value of the much discussed "Freedom of the Press," which she defined as a protection of the rights of the individual reader rather than as a special license to the publisher.

The second meeting was held Thursday evening, February 16, 1939, with Mrs. St. John presiding.

During the business meeting, Mrs. St. John announced that Miss Young, Miss Byron, Miss Eliot, Miss Conrad and Miss Kaltenbach would work with her as a committee to prepare for the 50th Anniversary of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, to be celebrated in 1942.

Following the reports of the Committee Chairmen, the question of the acceptance of suggested revision of the membership section of the By-laws as presented at the November meeting, was brought to a vote. After a short discussion, the meeting unanimously voted to accept the revision as proposed.

At the close of the business meeting, Mrs. St. John introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Janet Pinney of the staff of the Museum of the City of New York. Miss Pinney gave a delightful talk illustrated with lantern slides, on "Old New York."

Both meetings were well attended and the programs enjoyed by all present, as were the refreshments and social hour at the end of each meeting.

THE ALUMNAE DISTRIBUTING FUND IN 1938

The Alumnae Distributing Fund for 1938,—its fifth year,—reached a total of $2,492.98. Three hundred and seventy-two of our graduates contributed to this result, as well as several of our good friends outside of the Alumnae Association. The Quick Reference Book is responsible for the largest single donation.

The Committee entertained the class agents at a supper party before the November meeting of the Association.

The blue-and-white striped coin boxes which were sent to every graduate of the School as an aid in saving coins for this important cause, met such a warm welcome that we have decided to be thrifty and to use them over again this year! The class agents and the committee will send out notices about them this spring, and will harvest the savings in the fall, as they did last year.

The large assignment to the General Fund seems justified by the unusual demands being made on it just now. It is understood that it will go either into principal or current expenses, depending upon the deficit.

The annual designation of a certain sum toward the expenses of our Fiftieth Anniversary celebration in 1942 seems a wise measure to establish at this time. Even if we set aside no more than $250 each year, we should have $1,000 in reserve when the Anniversary arrives.

Complete details of last year's achievement are published here, together with the list of class agents for 1939.

SCHOOL NEWS

Winter activities at Maxwell Hall started with the Red Cross Drive, and the students enthusiastically kept their quota up to par. Then in no time at all it was Christmas week, and Christmas at Maxwell Hall, thanks to Miss Rogers and Miss Phillips, is a gay and gala time. The Christmas Pageant was very lovely. On Christmas eve there was the traditional Carol singing at the hospital followed by a party at Maxwell Hall. Between Christmas and New Years day Student Government sponsored an Open House Formal Dance.

In January the class of 1940, under the direction of Miss Lee, presented a Pageant of the History of Nursing. The students gave an excellent presentation. We had the pleasure and the honor of having in our audience:

Miss Harriet Frost
Associate Director, New York Hospital School of Nursing.

Miss Ann Doyle
Historian, Bellevue Hospital School of Nursing.

Miss Mary Edgar Educational Director, Bellevue Hospital School of Nursing.

Miss Ethel Wigmore
Librarian—The Carrie J. Brink Memorial Library, Bellevue Hospital School of Nursing.

Miss Ruth Davis
Instructor—Methodist Episcopal Hospital School of Nursing, Brooklyn.

Miss Elizabeth A. Schramm
Assistant Librarian, Medical School.

Students from Bellevue, New York and Methodist Episcopal Hospitals.

Five students from the senior class were given the opportunity of attending a dinner and luncheon during the meeting of the Institute of Registered Nurses of New York. The meetings were held at the Commodore Hotel, and the students were quite enthusiastic in their reports.

February 1st, 81 members of the preliminary class were admitted into the school. The capping ceremony was a colorful and memorable event. Our new school song, Alma Mater, composed by Miss Covell and Miss Conrad, was sung for the first time.

At the Senior Class Banquet, Student Print Pins were awarded to students who had made outstanding contributions to the school paper. Pins were given to the Misses Balis, Westcott, McGuinnes, Blago, Elwood and Webster.

The students of the New York Hospital School of Nursing invited us to see the motion picture "The White Angel" starring Florence Nightingale which they were presenting in their auditorium. We thoroughly enjoyed the film and the "At Home" afterwards. We had heard so much about their beautiful Nurses Residence that we asked to be shown through it. They certainly have every reason to be proud of their home.

In February we started our affiliation with Neurological Institute. With all the proper pioneer enthusiasm the first ten lined up for inspection and were personally escorted through the tunnel by Miss Conrad. We feel we owe our Faculty a vote of thanks for the additional opportunities, both professional and personal, offered us by this affiliation.

February has been a short and pleasant month, punctuated by holidays and a Valentine party and brought to a climax by a series of "Spelling Bees" which were held in Sturges. When the winning team emerges we hope to challenge the Faculty to a return match.

A HONEYMOON ON THE SABI RIVER, SOUTH RHODESIA

EDITH FULLER AITKEN-CADE, '29.

On the day of the wedding the weather was cool since June is our winter season. The sun came out about nine and stayed out until long after we had left Silinda far behind. The seventy guests were an international group; our own Mission folk, mostly American, English, Dutch and Portuguese.

We had a five weeks honeymoon down on the Sabi River staying at three different camps. Our first was on the edge of a duck pan (pond). Stewart had gone down the week before and set up the tent, a mosquito proof one that he had made himself, and then he left the camp supplies in charge of a native boy who greeted us with a cup of fresh hot tea on our arrival. It was such a joy to find camp all set up.

The camp faced east, Silinda-wards, but the long range of hills separated us. The Sabi River valley extends for miles and miles on either side of the river and it is mostly flat. It is native reserve area so there are no white people except traders. Wild animals are in abundance. I saw several different kinds of buck, koodoo with their exclamation point ears, water buck with their very strong odor, eland, antelope, etc. It was most thrilling to see them in their own habitat.

After a few days we went fifteen miles farther and set up camp on the bank of the Sabi, a very beautiful spot. We could see a mile of the river from Camp, flowing in a quiet effortless way at the upper end but dividing into several channels opposite camp where huge boulders jutted up from the river bed, and developed treacherous currents as the waters swirled around the boulders. There is no bridge for miles and miles so when we hunted across the river we had to wade, picking our way carefully so as not to be carried off. In most places the water was not more than three feet deep.

We intended staying only a few days at the second camp, but when we had loaded the car, the engine wouldn't start and we discovered that the battery was completely dead owing to a short circuit! So we unloaded, pitched camp, sent a boy off on a bicycle for a new battery and settled down to enjoy ourselves for the five days he would be gone. We had taken my portable victrola and ten records. The music resulted in our having regular visitations from the natives of the nearby kraals at most any hour. The children were fascinated and came by the dozen, each small girl carrying a fat baby on her back. The women used to come in groups with their huge clay water pots balanced gracefully on their heads en route to the river for the day's supply of water. They would sit on the ground for a half hour or so of entertainment, clapping their hands in time to the music. They had a great time watching me cook meals for my husband, so altogether different from the way they cooked for theirs. They couldn't quite make me out either. They thought I looked like a woman, but here I was wearing pants like my husband instead of a skirt. When we left there was general mourning because they said none of the other white people who came there spoke their language and with whom would they talk now?

On the way to our third camp we stopped at a new Scheelite mine from which tungsten is derived and spent a fascinating two hours watching the native laborers digging the ore, crushing it with stones and washing it through hand sieves. The boys crushing the ore were using some of the original stones used by the ancients for the same purpose hundreds of years ago, and found there recently when the mine was reopened. We suddenly felt very close to antiquity! The mine is right on the bank of the river and a family of fourteen hippos spout, blow bubbles and gambol in the river quite oblivious to the workers and the put-put-put of the small power engine a few yards away!

Our third camp was some miles from Silinda but we might as well have been hundreds of miles away. 'Twas an altogether different world from any I had ever known. Camp itself was out of sight of the river but only a quarter of a mile away, and right through the middle of camp ran the broad track made by hippos grazing nightly. When the hippos discovered our presence they very accommodatingly moved off a couple of hundred feet leaving us in peace, but every evening at sundown we heard them snort and bellow to one another as they came down the river and along the bank to graze. Our first afternoon we walked along the sandy beach for a mile, then climbed the cliff for another half mile until we reached a sand spar where Stewart knew the hippos spent a lot of the day and there I stole up within a hundred yards of them and took two snaps, but they are very wary and one caught our scent and plunged into the water followed by the rest. There were three baby ones, too young to swim alone, and they spent most of their time standing on their mothers' backs looking at us. There was a herd of elephants in the vicinity but they kept well hidden and we only saw their huge tracks in the sand in the morning. At night we heard hyenas, wild dogs, and one night a lion, but he was across the river. It was wild country, thrilling country, new country, untouched as yet by civilization. We tramped miles using hippo tracks as paths since they are better beaten than the native foot paths. We spent hours climbing the cliffs along the gorge, that narrow section extending for miles where the broad Sabi pours its waters through a narrow tortuous passage punctuated with enormous boulders and making a deafening roar of defiance. Here it would be almost certain death to slip, not only because of the boulders but because of the tiger fish and crocodiles which would welcome a human meal. Near camp on a long sand spar, the same one on which the hippos took their daily siesta, we could find two dozen or more crocodiles at any time of the day basking in the warm sunshine. Stewart shot six of the brutes from the cliff at various times after we had crept slowly and silently along the top until we were directly opposite the crocodile contingent and 150 feet away. We brought the skin of one home, tied to the top of the car and whenever we stopped it created a furor of excitement among the natives who consider it their public enemy and anyone who destroys one a benefactor. This one was a female and we found fifty large opaque eggs inside her ready to be deposited within a few days in the cone-shaped hole which she had prepared in the sand. The bows and arrows of the natives are of little use against crocodiles.

After a month of this life we went to our new home where we are now settled in our five room thatch-roof cottage. My medical work did not cease with my departure from Silinda. There are almost a hundred native laborers on the farm, many of whom have their wives and families with them. I have a very convenient medicine cabinet with compartments and a sliding shelf in which I keep a few common remedies. So far I have treated over a hundred cases and with the approaching rains there will be many more. We are 34 miles from the nearest doctor and 68 miles from the nearest hospital, so I am very thankful for my medical training. I must buy a Bard Parker scalpel. There have been two incision and drainage cases and I had to use a razor blade, which worked all right, but did not look very professional. I'll write more another time of this life on a Rhodesian tobacco farm.

A ONE-MAN HOSPITAL

ANNE K. WILLIAMS, '15.

While on vacation in Maine last summer, and through the mischance of having an unusually severe internal disturbance of some sort, I had opportunity to see a very interesting and attractive hospital, of a type and quality unfortunately too rare in rural communities in this country of ours. It is owned and operated, in winter, entirely by one man, who is not only physician and surgeon, but managing director. He enjoys a fine reputation in the area that he serves. In winter it is a fishing village, a rather isolated community, at the end of a peninsula. In summer the population is greatly increased by an influx of summer residents who own houses in the neighborhood or are guests at the numerous hotels and cottage resorts scattered over an area of many square miles.

So, after a few days of being ill, with a high temperature for which there seemed no good reason, and waiting hopefully for it to disappear, I gave up and asked the doctor to come to see me. His personality impressed me at once, as keen, kindly, vigorous. The first thing I always want to know about a doctor is,—does he know and like people? I decided this one definitely did. After a brief examination and questioning he suggested that I drive over to the hospital the following morning for blood count and one or two simple tests. His presence was so reassuring that he left me completely at rest, mentally. After a sound sleep I was quite fit for the drive.

We found the hospital delightfully situated, on the shore, in a small, private park. A large frame house contains hospital facilities for twenty-five patients. A smaller white Colonial house is the residence of the doctor and his family. Another quite charming cottage is the nurses' residence. Nearer to the road, as we drove in, was a very picturesque one-story rustic building, bearing a placard over the door: "OUT-PATIENTS' DEPT." Being one of that group, for the moment, I entered the pleasant waiting-room, and joined three or four other out-patients. Everything proceeded in a very quiet, leisurely fashion and I settled back with a sigh of content, and confidence.

In a few minutes a competent, attractive young medical student came to take the blood count. It appeared she was a second-year medical student from Columbia. Being members of affiliating organizations, we became friends at once. While waiting in the artistic sitting-room for the "verdict," the doctor's son came in for a little chat. He has just finished his studies at Johns Hopkins, is an interne at Bellevue, and was spending his vacation assisting his father. Summer is, of course, the busy season. In winter the doctor is the entire staff, medical and surgical, and the leading physician of the district adjacent to Boothbay Harbor. From his son I learned something of the history of this model hospital that interested me so much.

It was founded about thirty years ago. The doctor owned the land. He had grown up in Maine and, having been ill and in need of a long rest, he decided to spend some months there. He envisioned what it would mean to have a good hospital in that community, then rather remote and unsettled, and decided to spend his life there. Gradually, as funds became available, and as increasing numbers of people arrived each summer and made use of the hospital, it grew and kept pace with modern medicine. An X-Ray Department was added, a residence for nurses, and finally the Out-Patient Department, until now it is as complete and efficient a small hospital as could be found or needed anywhere, and has an enviable reputation for miles around the countryside.

There is of course room for expansion. Last summer there was a campaign on foot to secure an endowment for a free bed, one of the greatest needs among the all-year residents of the fishing community. As soon as funds are available they plan to install a modern diathermy treatment equipment.

When the doctor's son has completed his interneship at Bellevue he plans to become an all-year second member of the staff. The doctor's daughter is a graduate nurse and directs the work of the Out-Patient Department.

It was very interesting to me to find an adequate, well-equipped, reliable hospital in so small a community. I think it is unique—at least it is in my own experience. I have always had great respect for country doctors, and their traditions, having been raised by them in the New England of forty years ago. It seems to me that some of our young doctors and nurses could render no better service to the country than by establishing hospitals similar to this in various parts of the country. I am certain they would grow and thrive and win the support of the communities they service, as this hospital has won the confidence of Boothbay Harbor, Maine, and the surrounding country.

Incidentally my own illness was quickly and accurately diagnosed, simply treated, and in a few days I was perfectly well and active. I thought of the episode as a fortunate one, since it brought me an interesting experience and added to the charms of a well-chosen vacation ground a sense of security that was comfortable to rest in for the remainder of the summer.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

DEAN RAPPLEYE

MR. President, Miss Young, members of the Graduating Class, staff and friends of the School of Nursing: You who stand today on the threshold of your professional careers are entitled to be somewhat puzzled by the unsettled conditions and evident disagreement among the spokesmen of medical, hospital, public health, nursing and governmental agencies, local as well as national, on the future needs and trends of medical care. There is a state of confusion which, however, is only a reflection of the whole state of economic, social and political thinking of the day. This period of national adjustment through which we are now going may be labeled in the future by historians who review this period as the "Era of Economic and Social Jitterbugs."

The confusion is bound, of course, to be transmitted to your own emotions and plans for the future. On the other hand, you should not be too much disturbed by this condition. In this regard there is one thought which should be emphasized to you who go out today to enter your professional careers. Regardless of how medical and nursing services in the future are to be organized, no plan will be permanently successful, no scheme will long meet adequate standards of public service which is not based upon sound and proper education of the nursing profession. We here at the Medical Center are dedicated to the maintenance of a high quality of nursing education and are satisfied that you who today are completing your training are competent in the fullest meaning of the word. We have no intention of even considering any program that does not follow and build on the tradition of high excellence which has motivated the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing since its founding. We are also fully confident that the ideals of humanitarianism and service to the sick and afflicted which are characteristic of this school and which you have come to cherish as the rich heritage of your profession will be a source of strength and inspiration throughout your lives. It is with confidence and with real affection that we bid you every success and happiness in your life work.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

Dr. Maitland Alexander

MR. President, Officers of the Faculty of the Training School and its Alumnae and Members of the Graduating Class: I am very happy about two things today. Ever since I was invited to come here to speak, it has been impressed upon me that should I bring rain I might as well go home. I see it is still holding off. The second thing that pleases me is that I have been invited to follow in that train of exceptional speakers that have made your Commencement Exercises here of note everywhere in the hospital world.

Your President said that I had been identified with hospital work a good many years, and I am still identified with it, and I have endeavored to adapt myself as far as I could to the advancing movements along the line of nursing, difficult as that may be. As I bring you two or three thoughts this afternoon I do not bring them to you as one who knows everything about your problems and everything about those things which you have been taught for the last three years. I have heard many speakers at commencement exercises; I think I have attended about forty-two graduating exercises and have been compelled —I use that word advisedly—to sit and listen to the speakers, and I trust that I may be given strength to avoid those things which ought to be avoided even if I do not say the things which ought to be said.

We are sitting here this afternoon in an environment which makes your graduating exercises wonderful because of the background around us. You know there are some pictures which depend for their effectiveness on their background. Here you sit today amid the physical surroundings which have made the Presbyterian Hospital and this Medical Center world renowned. You have wonderful hospitals; you have a wonderful training school; you have wonderful scientific laboratories; you have a great school of medical education. You are surrounded by these; and if it comes to pass that you should have left this school of nursing and have gone out and are able to come back and walk through the wards and through the pavilions and through the laboratories and through the schools, you can point with a pride that is justifiable and say "This is my school; I graduated from here."

But there is another background far more important than the physical background of which I am speaking. It has a mighty significance that you cannot see, you can only feel it; you cannot touch it; you can only sense its presence. The eye has nothing to do with it; it is what the soul is to the body. It is the history of this School; it is the sacrifice which has been made to put it where it stands today; it is the attainments that have been reached here; it is the work, the self-sacrificing work, of those who have made this School great by their service; it is the blood of the women who have given their lives to the success and the power of this School and made the name of the Presbyterian Hospital great wherever it is heard. You can walk among the wards and the pavilions, among the memories that surround this place; the halls of memory are filled with that which has been accomplished, all that has been built up, all that has been discovered, all that has been made by the sacrifices of those gone before, and then say to yourself with even greater pride "This is my School. Here is where I graduated."

I have listened, as I told you before, to a great many addresses of this kind, all the way from that idealist whose great sympathy welled up in his speech and thought of nursing only as the cool hand laid on the fevered brow of the attractive patient. I have also listened to those who thought that they could impart something that was not taught in the classes of the Training School, and I have heard them urge upon the graduates that when they went into homes of people of moderate means that all the towels were not to be used up in the first two hours. I do not care to meddle with any of those things today, but I would like to put just three things before you.

The evolution of scientific nursing is a wonderful story. Forty years ago there was not so much of scientific nursing but there was a great deal of wonderful nursing; and when you have imposed that scientific knowledge and training upon the foundation that was laid by those women who graduated long ago, you find that nursing, scientific or otherwise, is only wonderful when it is expressed in the terms of the cure of the sick. This is the primary duty of the nurse. In these last years, a great army has moved, has been marching onward in its conflict of disease and death. A great fight has been waged. This army has its divisions and has its regiments; it has its scientific men; it has its administrative men and women; it has its physicians and surgeons; it has its laboratory men and women, and all are moving with this one thing in mind: The conquest of disease and the driving back as far as may be of death. Now it has its regiment of nurses. You are enlisted in the nursing unit in the nursing regiment; and I am not saying anything that would hurt anyone's feelings at all who fit in any of the other departments of the army if I say that you belong to the shock troops in the fight against disease and death. Yours is the hand-to-hand struggle. You come out from your teachers, you administrators and your lectures and you are thrown into the darkness of the fight with that grim enemy of all mankind. I would just like to give you an illustration out of my own experience. I stood in the halls of a hospital one day and listened to a great surgeon speak to a great nurse. He said to her (she was not very much to look at but I knew what her reputation was and how men at the time of great emergency came, the physicians and the surgeons, and tried to get her to go on a desperate case) "I have done everything that I possibly can for this patient; everything else lies in your hands. If you can keep her alive through the night, I believe that she will get well; if you can't, I am afraid she will die, but it is up to you." I felt sorry for the woman but she didn't seem to feel sorry for herself. She gathered herself together, put her head up and said "Doctor, where will you be?" "I will be across the hall" he said. "I am going to stay here all night." So she went into the room, shut the door and then the night shut down. I couldn't sleep; I was worrying as to what kind of a fight she was making; I was wondering whether she was going to be able to have a victory. At seven o'clock in the morning (maybe you don't know here in the Presbyterian Hospital what seven o'clock in the morning means, but most hospitals know what it is like) at seven o'clock in the morning I was in the hall and when the shift changed the door opened and she came out and she had a look on her face of intense weariness but a sort of a ray of light striking across her face, and I said "Well?" She said "She is alive and I have won." I felt that if I had been in the army and if I had had the privilege of giving a decoration, I would have taken one of my own off and pinned it on her and said "Here, for that battle, here is your decoration." Can you think of anything more stimulating than that or anything that flashes a call like that! I am sure you cannot. When you drive back the enemy, and to save a life is a wonderful thing, do not forget that you belong to the shock troops.

Now I want to speak a word about a very touchy subject. I am going to ask you a question and you can answer it to suit yourselves. "Is the nursing profession a calling, and, if so, why should it be?" Why should it be a calling? Well, it has to be a calling because I think that the nursing profession, if any profession in the world, needs altruism among those who practice it. You know the great calls of life come by the needs of life. You can get some kind of a call to serve but that is not a persuasive call unless it is borne out of the need of a troubled world.

I am reminded of a funny little story which I might tell. I was told I must not joke when I spoke here, but it is difficult for me to keep from doing it. I knew a young minister, one of my own profession, who got two calls to two different churches and he was greatly upset as to which one he should take. So he went to a very renowned man, President Francis L. Patton of Princeton University, since dead, and he said "Doctor, what shall I do? Here I have these two calls; which call do you think I ought to take? I am all bothered by trying to decide what to do." "Well," the Doctor said, "what are the salaries?" And I think possibly the loudness of the call might have had something to do with salary. But your calls are calls to minister the emergencies of life. Your calls are calls to stand in the breach, in the great cataclysms of life to fight for life at any sacrifice to yourself. Then there are ordinary calls. Again, I would like to illustrate it out of my own experience. The hospital which I serve needed a director of nursing. As I looked around to see where I could find one, I decided that I would go down to Johns Hopkins Hospital and ask Miss Nutting, who was then Directress of Nurses there, if she could recommend someone to me. I got off the train very early in the morning and went right down to the hospital, and she saw me. I know just how she looked now and that is 25 years ago. She had on a black dress with a little white effect on her head. I said "Miss Nutting, I want someone to take our School of Nursing out at Pittsburgh." She said "What is the matter with it?" I told her. I said "This is what we want," and I told her what we wanted, and I said "Have you got anybody?" She said "Oh yes." So she sent someone to call in a nurse. She was, I suppose, about 40 years old, had just come off night duty and looked it. Miss Nutting said to her "There is a call come for you to go to Pittsburgh and take over the Nursing School of the Allegheny General Hospital." "But" she said, "I don't want to go to Pittsburgh." I could hardly blame her, and Miss Nutting said to her "You are called to go out there." And that is the first time I ever heard that word used to a nurse. Then she outlined the needs and she said "You are not going to fail Hopkins, are you? You are called." The nurse looked very sad, but she said yes, she would go. And then after she came out, I was on pins and needles all the time for fear that the nurse had been right and that Miss Nutting had been wrong and that it was not the place for her at all. By and by I saw how she commanded the respect of the staff and how she remolded the school without much apparent change, and when I saw after a while how the nurses that were under her were so afraid of her they could hardly stand before her but they loved her so much they would do anything for her, and when I saw her build up a great position, I said to myself "She was called; there is no doubt about it, she was called." Now, when you get that kind of a call you need very well be careful because you are called where your duties lie rather than where your inclinations lie. This is the day when we should follow our duty rather than our inclination; it is much more vital and much more important. And finally, under all the professional skill that you may have collected in your training, underneath all your talent and all your ability as nurses, I do not believe that you can rise as high as you ought to rise if you lack the great qualities of heart which means sympathy and compassion, and entering into the troubles of others.

I am not much of a sentimentalist; indeed, in the hospital where I come from I am regarded as quite hard boiled, but I cannot help thinking what a difference it makes when you are kind, when you are compassionate, when your heart goes out to people that have nothing and that need something a little more than you are doing for them professionally. Again, I have to give an illustration. I was in an evacuation hospital in 1918 and I was asked to go over and speak to a boy who had had both his legs shot off, and as I walked over there the nurse that was there came up to me and said "Chaplain, he is not going to live," and her eyes sort of filled up, and I said "Well, tell me a little more about him." "Oh no," she said, "I haven't any time; I must go back." So back she went to him to do the best she could for that boy, and I went over and stood by his bed. He said "I am going to die." I said "You are not afraid to die, are you?" He said "No, but I would like to have my little case that is in the pocket of my tunic if somebody will get it for me." So I found his tunic and I gave him the little case, one of those three-fold picture frames; on one end of it was an American flag, in the middle of it was a picture of a nice looking old lady, and on the other end of it was a little clipping of a verse: "How can a man die better than by facing fearful odds for the ashes of his Fathers and temple of his God." Holding it in his hand, he said "Could my mother have that? Could she get it?" I said "Yes." Then there was quiet for a little while and then he said "Oh, I feel so lonely," and that nurse went up to the bed and she slipped her arm underneath his head and she pillowed that head on her shoulder and she patted him, and spoke kind and gentle loving words to him, and she held him there until his taps sounded and he went on. I have never forgotten that because I thought to myself that was the height of nursing achievement, not only the care of the body but the great ministry to the soul which she performed.

Well, ladies of the graduating class, I congratulate you today first of all on your Alma Mater; in the second place I congratulate you on your having been able to stand the gaff for three years, and thirdly, I congratulate you on the unfolding for you of a great and somewhat undiscovered country into which you are going. What is this that has fallen at your feet today; something that has been dropped from the hands of the dead; something that has been dropped from the hands of the aged; something that has fallen from the hands of those who could not carry it any further? What is it? Is it not the torch of the standards and the ideals of the nursing profession lit by this great School and thrown down to you by it; and that School entrusts you to carry it. My friends, pick it up, keep it lit and lift it high.

ADDRESS TO THE GRADUATING CLASS

Mr. Dean Sage

MEMBERS of the Graduating Class: Many, perhaps all of you have gazed eastward from the upper reaches of this very building and glimpsed in the sunlight the shining Perisphere and the high-rising Trylon. As all now know, they symbolize the theme of the World's Fair. The Perisphere embodies the idea of the world of tomorrow. The Trylon emphasizes the spiritual longings of man for an ever fuller and better understanding of life. They stand a challenge to you today, you who are about to step from the privacy of preparation into the arena of accomplishment.

We look with little satisfaction upon the world of today. But a world of tomorrow awaits and it is such as you that will help make it what it proves to be. Look not backward to the mistakes of yesterday save for the lessons they teach. Nor yet be satisfied to live upon the fruit of the labor of others lest it become tasteless and dry and so unfit for sustenance and growth. But gather that fruit which is mellow and ripe, and eat of it that you may gain in your own strength to further the high aims for which others have striven. Look forward to the world of tomorrow. Envisage it with purposeful hope and with confidence that the reality may be in part your own achievement. There is an abundance in life for him who has the will to seek it. It is you who must fashion the future—make brighter days, months and years, for the aspirations of mankind to a higher and fuller life are cradled in the warm idealism of youth.

May each one of you find the opportunity to enrich the world of tomorrow, and thus realize the peace that comes with effort, well directed, well spent.

ADDRESS OF ALUMNAE PRESIDENT AT THE CLASS DINNER

JANE RIGNEL ST. JOHN

IT is a pleasure to welcome you to this dinner, given annually for the graduating class by the Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of The Presbyterian Hospital.

These young graduates know well how we prize our tradition and the excellent record of the past. They know the high and enviable position we hold in the world of nursing at present. It is they who will help build for us a constructive and educational leadership in the future.

Tonight we are presenting seventy-seven new recruits to be enrolled in our Alumnae, the membership of which now totals over fifteen hundred women, with an active membership of seventy-three per cent. We are very proud of this record.

When Mr. Sturgis made the address to the graduates of 1899 and presented to them their school pins he instituted for Presbyterian graduates for all time the "Order of Neighbors." Our school pin bears upon the reverse the simple word, "Neighbors."

In State and National meetings which I have attended at intervals it is an inspiring and satisfying experience to hear of the esteem and sincere affection in which Helen Young is held. Her opinion, in matters of great importance, is constantly sought, and accepted. By example, and by her integrity, she is our good "Neighbor."

In 1892 Anna C. Maxwell was called from St. Luke's Hospital, New York City, to found a School of Nursing for the Presbyterian Hospital. The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the School of Nursing will be celebrated in 1942. To make this celebration a success we must have the interest and cooperation of all who have been, and are now, associated with the School of Nursing and the Hospital: nurses, doctors, internes, members of the Board of Managers, and friends. Our plans are being made to publish in book form an account of those early days, including many interesting old photographs of places and people.

In closing, may I call your attention again to a significant and inspiring fact: that, in these troublesome times throughout the world, The Presbyterian School of Nursing of New York City is sending forth seventy-seven intelligent and well-equipped "Good Neighbors."

GRADUATION ACTIVITIES

THE long awaited event—Dinner at Pierre's—given by the Alumnae Association to the graduating class, finally materialized June 7th. A lovely summer evening added to the anticipation and to the actual enjoyment of the occasion. This is, beyond a doubt, the place for this event. Under Miss Margaret Eliot's able management, a marvel of thoughtful care, this repast is long remembered.

Entertainment, a trio from Pierre's Roof sang a number of selections, which, judging by the applause, were much appreciated by the class as well as all our P. H. guests. The cuisine was such that all look forward to returning at another time. This has been named the Class Dinner, for they are the cynasure of all eyes. Their tables, holding the center of the stage, are beautifully decorated with blue and white flowers.

Dancing between the dinner courses kept the floor crowded. Speeches, short and in the lighter vein added a sense of belonging which it is hoped this new group will continue to cherish. The interest shown by the Alumnae members and their friends makes it possible for this dinner to be a yearly event.

Following the dinner dancing continues until the wee small hours. Though Thursday will be a very busy day, the homeward trend begins all too early for the vivacious members of the class.

Thursday morning shows much activity on the Hospital lawn. Necks are craned to an amazing angle as all gaze skyward in an effort to foretell the weather for four o'clock. June 8th proved to be a perfect day.

At ten o'clock Miss Young, Miss Conrad and a number of assistants accompanied by as many of the graduating class as possible, gather in the garden where in the midst of the decorating of the rostrum and the arranging of chairs, a rehearsal takes place. Perhaps one should not tell of this but as all procedures are practiced with a purpose and under supervision, why not this one?

Hurrying off duty to have the group picture taken is now a thing of the past. Small individual pictures with the name beneath each one make up the class picture. One wonders if much of the fun, when reminiscing, is not gone when no group picture adds to the merriment. Surely, it is granted, this newer method assists the memory.

Class reunions are the order at noontime and a trip to Floor R shortly before the classes sit down is a treat. The tables are beautifully and individually artistic. These get-to-gethers are worth the long trips and the efforts some have to make.

Miss Young divides her time between the class reunion groups in her own impartial way.

The time between one and three is gone in such a short while and those dressing in "stripes" must reach Maxwell Hall and don their regalia. Faculty members in charge of the "wardrobe" are sure they will never get the group across the street for the appointed hour. It is quite likely these "old graduates" have forgotten how long it takes to get into uniform correctly —or do they remember all too well their speed of yesteryear? Hair nets, as guards against the breezes encountered in the garden, are brought forth and literally put upon the heads.

Alumnae who sit with friends in the audience are certain they enjoy the procession more than would be possible if they were participants. By new routing the graduates are soon seated which leaves the stage set for the graduating class. Led by Miss Young, Miss Conrad and the faculty, this double line makes its triumphal entry to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" poured forth by the red-coated Armory Band. A signal from Miss Campbell has started this journey down the ramp.

After the members of the class have taken their places, Miss Young, Miss Conrad and the faculty are seated and the impressive program begins. Mr. Dean Sage in his own inimitable way addressed the class, his subject being the one to which he has given most generously in every way, the recent developments of P.H. in relation to the Columbia Presbyterian School of Nursing. The Speaker for this momentous occasion, Dr. Maitland Alexander, knowing youth as he does, gave a message of hope and of will to achieve.

Through the traditional arch of diplomas, Miss Young and Miss Conrad, led the procession from the garden to Maxwell Hall. This seemed more joyous and colorful than the entrance. Miss Young took her place on the knoll to the left on the lawn and the new graduates went up one by one that The Pin might be placed properly by none other than their beloved leader and wise counsellor.

The faculty are busy greeting and directing families and friends of the class and of the School. Refreshments are served in the dining room immediately and seemingly continuously. The menu consists of fruit punch, chicken salad, tomatoes, rolls, ice cream, cakes and coffee, and, one should add, approximately one thousand are served.

Sturges Auditorium appears to be a moving mass until after 10 P.M. The dances are spurred on by the orchestra which ably aided during the exercises in the garden. Reluctantly the guests leave with thoughts that, while not this class, they may be privileged to see another such commencement.

On Friday morning Sturges Auditorium scarcely accommodates the faculty and general duty nurses, in student uniform for the day, as they arrive promptly for morning assembly. This is the one day in the year when the group march on duty by way of the garden walk.

Alumnae boutonnieres of blue and white flowers are sold more rapidly than nimble fingers can make them. Great salesmanship! Proceeds are used to defray convention expenses for staff nurses.

Visiting and luncheon engagements speed the early afternoon hours. The annual business meeting of the Alumnae Association begins at 3 P.M. with Mrs. Fordyce B. St. John ably presiding. The roll call shows representatives from many classes. The class of 1939 are received as members of the Alumnae after Miss Penland's presentation. Miss Keefer, president of this large new group presented a gift of two beautiful silver pitchers and their class picture framed and ready to be hung. Mrs. St. John graciously accepted these fitting tributes, opening the boxes that all might admire them. They were put in use immediately. Tea in the garden added greatly to the enjoyment of this day.

The Hobby show in class room 116 is a surprise which shows the versatility of our students and graduates. Many and varied are the crafts and articles displayed and all are well arranged by Miss Manola Phillips and her committee. One should add, and well guarded.

After almost a week of festivities members of the class who have "finished" depart for a long vacation or begin their professional careers while those who have "time to make up" go on checking off the days.

ELIZABETH ALLANACH, '21.

ON June 8, 1939 the class of 1904 met for lunch. There were four of us all living in New York. We regret that there could not have been more members of the class present. I am sure the sight of that beautiful birthday cake will help those of us that saw it thru our second childhood. Our thanks go to the makers and to those who had it made. The following members of our class were present:

Edith V. Gardiner
Mrs. K. C. Mooney Williams
Julia C. Hicks
Mrs. Samuel D. Newton

M. W. G. NEWTON.

1914

There were seven members of the Class of 1914 at our 25th anniversary luncheon:

Olive Milroy
Margaret Neal Shriver
Florence Owen Calderwood
Florence Graham Weber
Wilhelmina Rolfe McCrae
Anne Bauer Dingman
Ruth Dean Fitz-Gerald

Owing to a misunderstanding your class agent was late in approaching the class, but had replies from a number who were unable to come. However, what we lacked in numbers we made up in enthusiasm.

Grace Duncan Elder and Jane Durham were kept at home by recent family bereavements; Natalie Johnson Voygt is living in Oregon; Ruth Nethercut Rogers had been East in February to visit her eldest daughter who is in training at St. Luke's, and felt she could not make another trip at this time. Toddy's patient's condition was serious enough to keep her in attendance; Ruth Harvey Allison was visiting her son at Dartmouth; "S. Kitty" Scott Adams had recently returned from a West Indies cruise; Emily Robson telephoned greetings from St. Louis, Mo. Clarissa Johnson Sutherland was believed to be at Cape Cod. "Bunny" Graham Weber, in a spic and span striped uniform, did us credit in the procession. "Windy" and she are specialling at P.H. Olive is still in Dr. Osgood's office. Margaret's youngest daughter Priscilla, who is doing occupational therapy at P.H., spent the afternoon with us. Anne was leaving the next day to attend her daughter's graduation at Sweet Briar College. We were sorry to hear of the death two years ago of Johanna Brandis. Marjory Armstrong Taylor has recovered from her automobile accident and was only prevented at the last moment from joining us.

A delicious luncheon was served on floor R, the table decorated with delphinium, cornflowers, and phlox—and we were honored by a visit from Miss Young who greeted us each by name as friendly as ever.

It was fun to renew contact with many at the reception which followed a very impressive graduation, and may I urge you all to start making plans now for 1944.

RUTH DEAN FITZ-GERALD.

Gretta Goodearle, nineteen's class agent, though not present at the class luncheon, had labored so mightily with the pen in Toronto that eleven nineteeners put in an appearance. In spite of the passage of twenty years since their graduation, they partook of the luncheon straight through from melon to birthday cake and ice cream with the hearty appetite of youth, an appetite almost as good as they used to bring to the dining table from old Ward VIII. The amount of chatter chattered and old times rehashed was simply astonishing. If you wish to see how the veterans survived their twenty years, apply to Anna Kennedy, for she took pictures.

The following members of the class were present: Margaret Bridges, Marjorie Smith, Anne Smith, Rita McAndrew, Gertrude Duhl, Onie Snedecor, Anna Kennedy, Elizabeth Gordon, Virginia Harrell, Jennie Wideman, and Mary Daniel.

Telegrams were read from Gretta Goodearle and Emelie Perkins.

MARY KING DANIELS.

The class of 1924 held its fifteenth reunion on May 8, 1939. There were eighteen members present to partake of the very good luncheon. Though eighteen was the number actually present we felt the presence of many more as the letters they sent were read.

Every one enjoyed hearing of the others' good fortunes and happy home lives. We all hated to part from each other and decided that the class spirit is as keen today as it was in 1924.

GLADYS BARRETT.

Our tenth anniversary has come and gone but the memory of a joyous reunion will linger on. The Twenty-niners were represented by sixteen of their members and we were sorry it could not have been more. Those present were: Mary Cochs Bull, Breta Haynes Schroeder, Jessie Kohr, Bess McCulloch, Ruth Robertson De Voe, Theodora Sharrocks, Christine Shaw Ford, Margaret Wells, Helen Wood, Doris Ballard, Dorothy Reid Rondthalen, Geraldine Sibley, Evelyn Speirs Martin, Ammeline Steiner Woolley, Gertrude Thieler de Luca, and Jane Wilson.

We chatted like magpies, and only the arrival of the food caused the din to subside. It was a luncheon worthy of a few moments of silence and it was duly appreciated. The table was beautifully decorated with flowers from Helen Wood's own garden and at each place was a boutonniere of forget-me-nots and pansies tied in a blue ribbon. We were warmly greeted by Miss Young and she stayed long enough to look at pictures of the younger generation.

Doris Ballard startled us at the luncheon by announcing that Maureen Pelton was sorry not to be with us but her husband would not let her have time off from her honeymoon to come! Cards and letters were received from nine other members of the class and were read aloud. "Bougie" Boulden Waldron invited us all to visit her at St. Petersburg to see her flowers, of which she had innumerable varieties, to go gulf bathing and dine on seafood, and as she also raises tomatoes our vitamins would be assured. (Now, Boogie, wouldn't you be surprised if we all came?).

Time did not permit full personal histories but all reported agreeably occupied or giving useful service in their appointed jobs.

We were sorry that Helen McClymonds was not present to hear of these accomplishments. They would have been an answer to her daily query of some ten years ago when, in the self-appointed role of an alarm clock, she awakened those on her corridor with a, "Get up, do you think you'll ever amount to anything?"—at a time of day when we neither knew nor cared.

We were sorry too that "Donnie," who works in Vanderbilt Clinic, was not well enough to be present. We thought of all the missing members and hope that in 1944 it will be a bigger if not a better reunion.

A beautiful birthday cake proved a fitting climax for the luncheon—our heartfelt thanks to all those at "P.H." who made our tenth reunion so pleasant.

EMMELINE STEINER WOOLLEY, '29.

Five years have passed since we proudly flaunted our pin, white shoes and stockings, and gardenias. However, it seemed only yesterday as we gathered on the East side of Floor R for our reunion luncheon.

We are all very proud of the fact that twenty-seven of our sixty classmates were present. The room was filled with lively chatter and laughter as old friends were reunited. Apparently the years have failed to leave their marks; I might add, if anything, they have made everyone more attractive.

The luncheon was superb. The table was set in a T formation with our traditional blue and white flowers for decoration. The room hummed as everyone discussed the happenings of the past five years.

Bee Hyland Joyce, out to make the baseball team, presented the class with a baby boy. Jan Ayres sent us a telegram but we would rather have had Jan. Letters from Till Ryder, Bobby Williamson, Lucille Westrom, and Verna Stevens made the rounds to the delight of all.

Naturally we picked up bits-of-gossip. Many of our classmates are proudly raising the second generation. The rest of us are holding our standards high and we are advancing in the professional fields.

Our only regrets were for our absent classmates. We heartily hope that our Tenth reunion will bring everyone back more charming and successful than before.

MARJORIE ALICE WHITE.

50TH ANNIVERSARY

1892 1942

THE first meeting of committee members of our Fiftieth Anniversary (1942) was held at a luncheon at the hospital on June 9th. We have started on our way. There was much enthusiasm shown by the members present, and many plans discussed for this important event. The next meeting will be held in the autumn when the chairmen of committees will have completed the list of their committee members. Those on the central committee and the chairmen of the sub-committees are as follows:

We feel that the class agents can help tremendously by sending ideas expressed by the classes they represent. Miss Lee would like pictures and information which should have a place in our history.

This anniversary belongs to us all, and we will welcome any ideas you would like to see carried out (if possible) so send them along.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATIONS

The Johns Hopkins Hospital School of Nursing
1889-1939

THE Johns Hopkins Hospital School of Nursing celebrated its fiftieth anniversary at the Graduation of the Class of 1939 on May 5th, the day following the exercises commemorating the founding of the Hospital. An interesting fact is that the Hospital was founded in May 1889 and the School was started in October of the same year.

"An Account of the Founding of the Hospital and its Achievements during the First Fifty Years of its Existence" was published in pamphlet form and distributed at the Hospital exercises. "Within the Gates" was another anniversary publication prepared by the Alumnae of the School of Nursing.

An historical play dealing with the early events in the founding of the Hospital, "The Flowering of an Idea," was presented one evening by The Johns Hopkins University Play Shop.

Four Presbyterian Alumnae went to Baltimore to attend the anniversary celebrations, Emily Clatworthy '98, Helen Young '12, Jane R. St. John '16, and Eleanor Lee '20.

Eleanor Lee, '20.

Boston Children's Hospital
1889-1939

The Boston Children's hospital celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the School of Nursing and the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the Hospital on June 8, 9 and 10. Our Alumnae Association sent a telegram of congratulations and best wishes and received in return an appreciative letter from the president of their Alumnae Association who wrote "We had two and one-half wonderful days of interesting meetings, social events and reunions of classmates. It was truly an occasion we shall all remember and it made us all appreciate the fine institution from which we have graduated even more than before."

ADDITIONS TO THE FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE COLLECTION

WE are very proud to report that our Nightingale letters now total ninety-five. The framed letters have been rehung to maintain the chronological order. To do this, the large steel engraving of Florence Nightingale at Scutari and many of the other pictures have been moved to the South Library and adjoining corridor. We feel that the present arrangement is even more attractive than formerly.

Our most recent gifts were accompanied by the following letter from Dr. Auchincloss.

171 East Seventieth Street.

"Dear Miss Young:

Here are three Nightingale items. They seem to me to be of considerable interest. How they got into my hands you should know.

(1) Florence Nightingale's portrait, enlarged from a photograph that Miss Nightingale particularly liked. Miss Eleanor Creighton, my good wife's aunt, found it as you already know and sent it here from England. It has been framed with funds from the gift Mr. Russell Leffingwell gave me for such purposes.

(2) A thermometer owned and used by Florence Nightingale in the Crimea.

(3) A miniature painting on ivory of Florence Nightingale.

(2) and (3) were bought by Judge Thacher's son, Tom Thacher at an auction in London and were also bought with funds provided by Mr. Leffingwell.

I hope they fascinate you as much as they do me.

Yours as always,

HUGH AUCHINCLOSS."

May 30, 1939.

The new picture of Florence Nightingale in later life is a most valuable addition to our collection. This picture was secured through the courtesy of "The Nursing Mirror" of London, by Miss Eleanor Creighton, an aunt of Mrs. Auchincloss, who lives in England. Mrs. Auchincloss had it beautifully framed in dull silver.

The following explanation is written in faded ink on a small piece of paper and folded inside the red leather case for the thermometer:

"This thermometer was the property of Florence Nightingale and was used by her whilst nursing the sick and wounded soldiers in the Crimean War. She was born in 1820 and died in 1910. Was trained at the Protestant Sisters of Mercy at Kaiserswerth. Frederic Langford."

The "miniature painting on ivory" of Florence Nightingale is beautifully mounted in a blue velvet case and stands on one of the shelves in the cabinet. This miniature adds great charm and distinction to the collection.

THE LEAGUE CONVENTION

THE National League of Nursing Education met in New Orleans, Louisiana, April 24-28, 1939, with four representatives from the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center: Elizabeth Allanach, Delphine Wilde, Ada Mutch and Margaret Conrad.

The registration reached the fine figure of 919, with guests bringing the attendance well over 1000.

The famous traditions of New Orleans hospitality were maintained from start to finish. The thoughtful suggestions of our hostesses sent us to the historic cathedral, the Cabildo, cemeteries and parks; to delightful tea rooms and restaurants; court yards and shops in the Vieux Carriere; to the French market; and even to the docks to see a banana boat unloaded. The weather was sunny and warm, except for rain the very first morning.

The banquet was as interesting and enjoyable an occasion as could well be imagined, with delectable special dishes, a "Tin Can Band," and "Café Brulot Diabolique." Memorable also was the Teachers College Dinner, where we heard about plans for the celebration next fall, of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Department of Nursing Education.

On Tuesday we had a luncheon of our own, assembling eight of the P.H. alumnae who were attending the Convention. Miss Isabel Stewart was unable to be our guest as we had hoped, but she joined us for a brief visit at the end.

Among the many topics for addresses and discussions, a few titles and speakers will indicate the scope of the problems and the type of expert opinion presented.

Accreditation was discussed by Dr. Earl McGrath of the American Council on Education, Miss Clara Quereau, and several principals of nursing schools who have experienced the experimental survey of the National League's Accreditation Committee.

Postgraduate Education, and clinical teaching in various fields, each had a session devoted to them, with excellent discussions of problems, and reports of plans in operation, given by a widely representative group of speakers. We were very proud of Augusta Patton, 20, who was chairman of the session on clinical teaching, and of Caroline Keller, '29, who read a paper on clinical teaching in surgical nursing.

The Extra-Professional Program in the School of Nursing occupied one entire session.

Dr. Ben Wood, Director of the Cooperative Test Service of The American Council on Education, reported with very interesting charts on "Recent Developments in the Measurement of Subject Matter Achievement at High School and College Levels," showing that educational institutions vary widely in their educational results; and that professional patterns may be outlined by constructing proper objective tests.

Miss Blanche Pfeffercorn and Mr. Charles A. Rovetta presented "Some Findings of the Nursing Service and Nursing Education Cost Study," with fascinating graphic tabulations showing the variations at different periods in the course and on different services, of student nurse service compared with graduate nurse service. This study is to be published in September and will be of great significance to every one interested in institutional nursing.

At the round table on Lay Participation, Grace Warman, '17, presided and many excellent suggestions were made as to the assets and functions of lay committees in relation to schools of nursing. A similar round table on vocational guidance outlined problems and proposals in this important field.

Evening sessions considered the relationship of nursing education to the public and to the National Health Program. Students were addressed at a special session by Miss Annie Goodrich and Miss Isabel Stewart, and seemed very appreciative of their good fortune in hearing both of these inspiring leaders in one morning.

We were once more impressed by the delightful presence of our National League President, Miss Nellie Hawkinson. Other leaders both in the older and the younger generations, seemed to us to explain quite clearly the high achievements of nursing as a profession, and to promise equally fine things for the future.

Isabel Waterhouse has accepted the position of college nurse at Hood College, Frederick, Maryland.

Helen Stoddard is the technician in charge of "The Blood Bank." The laboratory for this work has been lately established at the Medical Center. In the development of blood transfusions it has been found that blood may be kept in flasks for longer periods than had been supposed possible. Because of this, blood of unusual groupings has been made available in emergencies. This laboratory also represents a research department where methods of making this knowledge of general and practical use will be worked out.

"King and Roser's Anatomy and Physiology Laboratory Manual and Study Guide." Perhaps as this is read it is not known that Roser means Helen Maria Roser, who is the co-author of this book which is described on the cover page of the July issue of the American Journal of Nursing as follows: "Here is a New Book that teachers will warmly welcome. It is designed especially for nurses. Through its practical approach and arrangement it will definitely stimulate the student's thinking as well as interest, and enable her to summarize more effectively the knowledge gained from lectures, demonstrations, etc.

SCHOOL NEWS

THE Spring "Formal" Dance quite appropriately ushered in the new season at Maxwell Hall. Close on its heels came the spring concert, sponsored by the Glee Club. Many of us for the first time saw our new instrumental group in action. Among the instruments in use were a piano, two violins, a cello, a trumpet, and a clarinet.

Forum Club held an open meeting, presenting a very entertaining "Professor Quiz" hour. Our new group, in the International Club, introduced itself to the school at its first open meeting. Moving pictures of Siam were shown, the dialogue being supplied by Miss Park, a missionary daughter from Siam.

One of our students from Greece, Miss Papasaph, assisted at the opening of the Greek Pavilion at the World's Fair, serving tea at the Pavilion after the ceremonies. We had a very vivid first hand account of the colorful ceremony. The Student Prints Pin was awarded to Miss Allgrove for her excellent work as editor of the art department. Ten well pleased students found themselves with fifty dollar checks when the Alumnae Scholarship awards were made.

With the first hint of spring, picnic baskets appeared. Miss Phillips and Miss Rogers, free, by some miracle, on the same day, filled their cars with relief and night nurses, and enjoyed a whole day at the Cook Estate. This year they didn't have to come home through a snowstorm.

Miss Lee has been very busy re-arranging the Florence Nightingale Room. The South Library has taken a new lease on life, the colorful Nightingale pictures adding the fresh interest. And we have all lost our hearts to the delightful picture of Miss Nightingale as a very old lady.

Miss Elizabeth Olsen was awarded the 1920 Memorial Scholarship. This award is made to a good all-round student of the senior class, one whose work is equally good in the classroom, the ward, and Maxwell Hall activities.

The Freshman Senior Dance was held May 26th. Graduation week started off with all the usual excitement preceding the Pierre dinner and ran the full gamut to the colorful and lovely climax of Graduation Day. It was good this year to see Neurological Institute well represented in the line of march. Then Alumnae Day is always different from all other days: every stripe seems a brighter blue, there is the novelty of walking out through the grounds in uniform, and the fun of seeing the head nurses, with flower filled baskets on their arms, selling the little blue and white boutonnieres.

The Hobby Show this year was an event. A great deal of credit is due the committee. They did excellent work. Two new exhibits which came in for a good deal of favorable comment were the Music Table and the Sport Exhibit. On the Music Table there were books of operas, books of songs, of illuminated folk-lore. Miss Young's collection of librettos was there. Miss Hall of the class of 1919 displayed two scrap books containing programmes and autographed pictures of Toscanini and Kirsten Flagsted. The instruments of the school orchestra added the proper finishing touch.

On the Sport table was the equipment used by students at Maxwell Hall. There were tennis rackets, bathing caps, skiis, golf sticks, ping pong bats, boots and spurs, sun suits, walking shoes, a basket ball, a skipping rope, tap dancing clogs, picnicking equipment, popcorn roasters, a road guide. The only things missing were a pillow and an alarm clock.

A Beloved Teacher

Many Presbyterian Alumnae who remember with pleasure both the teacher and her classes will feel a sense of personal loss in the death of Lydia E. Anderson who died on April 11 in her 76th year. Those of us who were privileged to know her would pay tribute to her memory for we feel as do hundreds who have been her pupils:

> "We caught from the radiant personality of Miss Anderson that something emanating only from great characters which raised our ideals and gave us courage to pursue them in spite of hardships and difficulties."

Columbia Medical Faculty

Dr. Tracy J. Putnam, Professor of Neurology in the Harvard University Medical School and neurologist-in-chief of the Boston City Hospital, has been appointed Professor of Neurology and Neurosurgery in Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons. He will take his new post on October 1 and will serve also as director of services of neruology and neurosurgery at the Neurological Institute of the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. Dr. Putnam was graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1920. He has been associated with the Johns Hopkins Hospital, the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston. He joined the Harvard faculty in 1929 and became a full professor five years ago.

Dr. Vernon W. Lippard has been appointed assistant dean of the medical college. Dr. Lippard received the Bachelor of Science degree from Yale in 1926 and the M.D. cum laude from the same university three years later. He has taught in the Cornell University Medical College since 1932 as instructor and associate in pediatrics. He has served as resident in pediatrics in the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital and the New York Hospital, and is at present director of the Commission for Study of Crippled Children of the City of New York.

Dr. Charles A. Flood and Dr. Lawrence W. Sloan have resigned as assistant deans and are returning to private practice.

ARMY WIFE

DORA ANDERSON-HUTCHINS, '11.

Some may think that army life is all glamor. There is however, the usual amount of routine, disappointment and tragedy found in any walk of life.

In the army, one cannot plan ahead. Buy a new fur coat and orders arrive transferring you to the tropics. Perhaps you fall for some new electrical appliance to make your work easier and along come orders to a post where electric current is of continental voltage and all your appliances have to be stored in a warehouse. When tropical service is over and your clothing is all suited for hot weather, you are ordered to the Canadian border in the middle of the winter.

Schools are another big problem for the army family. Most army children are from one to two years behind civilian children due to frequent transfer, perhaps in the middle of the year. This however, is compensated for, in the fact that the child has made many contacts and has a practical knowledge of History and Geography that the average child does not get. The army also furnishes excellent facilities for sport and recreation which help to make a well rounded personality.

We have had two tours of service in the Philippines. The United States army transports take from six to seven weeks to make the trip from New York to Manila. The usual stops are Panama Canal Zone; San Pedro, California for oil; San Francisco; Honolulu; passing and sometimes stopping at Wake Island to leave supplies; Guam and Manila. On its return, it used to stop at Chingwangtoa, China and Nagasaki, Japan. These stops have been discontinued since the army troops have been withdrawn from China.

Service in Hawaii and the Philippines is very delightful. The native populations are friendly and Americanized to a large extent. The life is picturesque and in the Philippines has enough Spanish influence to be very colorful.

Army wives take part in many activities, other than social, as professional Americans have largely been withdrawn from the Philippines. Native doctors, nurses and teachers have gradually taken over most of these positions. However, some army women teach in schools for American children, others do newspaper work, some do Girl Scout work or teach riding and swimming. While there, I taught First Aid and was counsellor at the Girl Scout camp.

During the two tours of service, I went to China four times and to Japan once. On our last trip I tried to see Anne Kuttner, whom the members of the Presbyterian Unit will remember. Anne took a course in medicine at Johns Hopkins University after returning from France and is now on duty at Rockefeller Hospital at Peking, China. I was unable to get to Peking due to movements of Japanese troops so I did not see her. Army and Navy doctors, who had been stationed in China, were very enthusiastic about her work and her devotion to duty.

On the whole army life has its ups and downs, but every new assignment is a new venture. Old friends are sure to be met every where we go so when we make our final calls before leaving a post we never say "Good Bye" but "Until We Meet Again."

EXCERPTS FROM A LETTER FROM CHINA

Last week we had expected, by this time to have been on the steamer that was to take us to Europe. Yet, here we are, wondering whether or not we shall ever make that steamer or whether the forces of evil that prevented our leaving, are still at work bringing terror and distress to our people and making it impossible for us to leave.

The reason for the delay is that our beloved Chinese Christians are being imprisoned and tortured. The fear of those that have not yet been taken, is pitiful to see. In the last two days there has been a big exodus from our schools and Hospital. The two Chinese doctors there have left, leaving the care of the patients and responsibility on one doctor and a few women nurses. The male nurses, most of the cooks and other servants as well as orderlies have fled. Christians everywhere are seeking to hide and even our own personal servants are scared though they are still standing by.

The persecution started when a Chinese boy of one of our country churches was captured by the police and thrown into prison: The accusation was that he had some anti-Japanese characters on his body. (Later—the real truth seems to have been that he was in love with a girl who dropped him for one of the Chinese police in the employ of the Japanese. The boy did not know of this other affair and annoyed the couple by still coming to see the girl. They decided to "plant" this paper on him and then deliberately had him caught and turned over.) He was—it seems—severely tortured by having his mouth gagged and water pumped into him until he was dreadlly distended and later he was burned under the arms until there was no skin left—in order to make him name Christians that he knew.

Later one of the girls came to say that her brother and the son of one of our good Christians were being hunted. Two Chinese policemen and two plain-clothes men could not find the two young men and were furious. They got hold of the "bao chang"—man who had been responsible for a certain number of families in his district of the city—and who in turn tried to bully the two families into producing the boys for he knew he would be punished if they were not found. The father offered himself up in place of his son. One of the plain-clothes men drew out a roll of heavy cord and unwound it. He stepped up to the "bao chang" hit him hard several times in the chest and slapped him terribly on both cheeks. They then bound him, put a halter around his neck, and led him, the father, and the wife of the other boy away.

The next morning we found one boy. It was decided that the only thing to do would be for him to give himself up without delay in order to spare his father and in order that his own sentence might be lighter. He was so frightened that there was no strength left in him; but he finally consented to letting two of the missionaries take him to the courts. Later, the other boy also was found and he was told that he must go to save his wife. He went but his face was pitiful to see. The father was freed as soon as his son gave himself up but so far the wife is still in captivity tho she has a nursing baby at home.

Another night two of our beloved pastors, two elders, and the 18 year old son of one, and two servants were taken. The police came for the pastor at 1 A.M., and without giving him a chance to even put on shoes or stockings they led him away after searching the house and taking away the church membership roll. They went to the other places after that and treated the men in about the same way. The other pastor's church roll was also taken.

We heard about the affair early in the morning and held a meeting at 8:30 A.M. It was decided to go to the highest official in the city, the Japanese General in charge, to tell him that we knew these men to be good men and to ask him to look into the matter and to see if there was not some mistake, and also to ask him if there was anti-religious or anti-Christian feeling among those in authority since so many church leaders had been taken.

After two unsuccessful attempts to see the General, three members of the station were admitted into his presence. He was very polite. He said he did not know of the captures and expected a report from the police in a few days.

The next two or three days was a time of waiting and anxiety. Rumors were all around that the prisoners were being tortured by the water treatment, by beating, and by fire. Not hearing from the General, it was decided to send him a letter urging him to help us.

After this another pastor was taken. We heard in the evening that he also had been tortured. This heightened the terror greatly of those who had not been taken, and the next day the two doctors in the Men's Hospital left and most of the staff and male nurses. It seemed that the doctors left just in time as inquiries were already being made about them.

Our friends are still in captivity tho it is rumored that the torture is over at last. We heard that two of them succumbed to the torture and have gone to their Heavenly reward.

Certainly it does seem as tho the powers of darkness are in possession of this city. We are not sure of the reason for it all. We feel strongly that there is definite anti-foreign feeling and "they" may be getting at our dear friends since they dare not yet get at us. The Japanese are trying to spread the doctrine of Asia for the Asiatics, and it does not seem to be any secret that they want the missionaries out of the captured areas because they feel that we lend our moral support to the Chinese and help to create anti-Japanese feeling. One of the reasons spread abroad for the taking of these people is that there is an anti-Japanese party in the church and they are trying to root it out. If there is such a movement, we, the missionaries, have never heard about it. The latest idea seems to be to capture those with education, for the police are searching for others of our Christian leaders. One woman came to the clinic yesterday and said that her 24 year old son was killed by the Japanese because he could read.

CONVENT OF ST. ANNE
181 APPLETON STREET
ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, MASS.

Whitsunday, 1939.

Dear Miss Young:

The invitation to be with you all on the eighth of June has been received and I thank you—it makes me very happy. For, while I may not be there in person, I shall be thinking of you and remembering the "great days" of other years, when I was there. Seventy-seven! I've read every name and on graduation day will take them to the Altar and there, in His Presence, ask God to bless them—this class of nineteen hundred and thirty-nine.

My love to you dear Miss Young.

Ever faithfully yours,

ELEANOR, O.S.A.

[The above letter from Miss Nellie Crandall who is known to many alumnae who learned about the care of children under Miss Crandall on the Children's ward at the old hospital.]

CORRECTION

Since publishing the letter written by Delia M. Battles Lewis for the November issue it has been pointed out to us by Stella Moor Thayer, '99, that the first graduate of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing to go into the foreign mission field was Rose Hoffman Lobenstein, '99, who went to China after her graduation. While in China she met Mr. Lobenstein whom she later married.

——ANNUAL MEETING——

THE annual Meeting of the Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital was held on Friday, June 9, 1939 at 3 p. m. in the Anna C. Maxwell Hall. Mrs. Fordyce B. St. John, President, presided. In the absence of the recording secretary, Margaret Conrad was appointed secretary pro tem.

The following reports were presented:

Report of the Treasurer
Helen Young, '12

This report is printed in full on page 60.

Report of the Social Committee
Margaret Eliot, '21, Chairman

Every year the Social Committee tries to think of some way to entertain the Graduating Class which will please them more than dinner at Pierre's. But nothing seemed to loom more attractive and so, bolstered by your president and the Executive Committee, we again had the dinner. There were 73 of the class at the two big tables which were adorned with (besides the young faces) beautiful arrangements of blue and white flowers graciously given us by Mrs. Talmage. The lovely sweet peas on all the other tables were presented to us by the Garden Committee. There were 202 guests besides the class. Mrs. St. John greeted the guests with a very fine little speech, introducing "new neighbors" who graduated yesterday. Miss Young and Mr. Sage also spoke. Dancing followed the dinner as usual.

I take this opportunity to thank Miss Lee for her untiring efforts to make me keep the money straight. We had the usual meetings during the year, some with a program and some not, but always with refreshments!

Report of the Alumnae Distributing Fund
Margaret Conrad, '20, Chairman

The report for 1938 appeared in full in the March QUARTERLY MAGAZINE. A total of $2,492.98 was received from 375 donors.

The fund was distributed as follows:

Elaine Tuthill	(Sept.)	'41

1920 Memorial Scholarship
Elizabeth Olsen, '39

We had expected to send out a gay little song and picture to get the coin boxes in use again this spring, but several obstacles have arisen.

It now looks wiser to confine our appeal to the autumn alone, especially since we have already received this year a total of $878, including two gifts of $100 from friends.

The Committee for the coming year is Helen Roser, '28; Helen Scott, '27; Virginia Harrell, '19; Marjorie White, '34; and Anne Pyle, '38.

To Presbyterian Alumnae Association, check for	5,000.00
On hand June 1, 1939	$2,638.55

Sum total of fund to date, almost $28,000.

Report of the Alumnae Shops Committee
Rhoda Reddig, '28, Chairman

The shops have continued their process of money making this past year. Since the last Annual Meeting $1,500 has been transferred to the Endowment Fund. To date $19,216.41 has been transferred. Our inventory of April 30, 1939 is $3,791.25 and our cash on hand $3,513.63.

At present, the Shop Committee is considering redecorating the Harkness Shop. Charles F. Biele & Sons Co., have submitted plans and an estimate for changes which would make the set-up more practical for our needs and very attractive. The committee is refraining from any further transfer of money at this time from our ready cash until they decide about possible changes.

The committee voted to employ a part time worker beginning with the scheduled vacations this summer.

Report by Delegate to District No. 13 New York County Registered Nurses Association Annie M. Thomas, '05

There were nine regular meetings held and one special meeting.

A Public Health Section and a Male Nurses' Section were organized.

An Annual Institute was held. The lectures and conferences were attended by over 3000 nurses, and a great deal of credit is due the Program Committee.

A Nursing Service center for the members of District No. 13 in Westchester County has been formed. The headquarters are at White Plains.

A revision of the By-Laws were not ready on account of State and National rulings.

There are 6447 members in District No. 13.

The Historical Committee reported that their work had been completed and suggested that three copies be made and spaces left to be filled in if any information can be given by anyone.

Report of the Education Committee Eleanor Lee, '20, Chairman

Emma Baker Kennedy Scholarship Fund

Two Scholarships of $300.00 each were awarded this year to Dorothy Kohler, '32, and Eleanor A. Hall, '36, each of whom received a B.S. degree from Teachers College at the Columbia Commencement on June 7, 1939.

A meeting of the Scholarship Committee will be held early in July to consider the applications for next September. Three Alumnae made inquiries about the scholarships and five have completed their applications.

Head Nurses' Convention Fund

Two Head Nurses went as delegates to the New York State League of Nursing Education Convention in Albany in October: Sheila M. Dwyer, Head Nurse on the Urological Service and Margaret Wechter, Head Nurse in the Pediatric Clinic. In April Delphine M. Wilde, Head Nurse on the Fracture Service was the delegate to the National League of Nursing Education Convention in New Orleans. Reports were given by the delegates at the Head Nurses' meeting following each convention.

The prospects for the coming year are very bright. The proceeds of the sale on Alumnae Day of blue and white boutonnieres were $288.00. The balance on June 1st was $142.50, which gives a total of $430.50 in the Head Nurses Convention Fund for next year. We look forward to having every unit of the Centre represented at our State or National Conventions.

Report of Committee on Eight Hour Duty
Dorothy Rogers, '25, Chairman

The Committee on Eight Hours for Nurses held one meeting in the fall of 1938 to discuss the results of the questionnaire which had been sent to all the private duty nurses in District 13. Because of the very few nurses who responded and answered this questionnaire, no definite conclusions could be formulated. However, an analysis of the answers that did come in, was sent to the Directors of the Nursing Services in every hospital in the district.

At this meeting it was decided that the committee would become inactive for the present. It was felt that as much as possible has been done by general publicity and surveys and that any further developments would have to originate and come from the private duty nurses themselves.

I talked with Mrs. Grace Woods, the executive secretary of District 13, just a few days before this meeting. She tells me that the Brooklyn nurses have instituted an 8 hour day for the private duty nurses at $6 per day which started June 1st. She also said that the question of the $6-a-day fee was considered at the last meeting of the Private Duty Section of District 13, and it was voted not to try to establish it at the present time.

Our own group of private duty nurses are again considering this problem and have appointed a committee to meet with Miss Young and to thoroughly discuss the question again.

Report of Fiftieth Anniversary Committee
Emily Clatworthy, '98, Chairman

See this issue of Quarterly Magazine page 24.

Report of Legislative Committee
Emily Bauer, '09, Chairman

The New York Legislature adjourned Saturday, May 20th, 1939. There were 2298 bills introduced in the Senate and 2340 in the Assembly. The Governor has signed 700 bills and vetoed 83 (to date).

The Mahoney Bill A. Int. No. 1053 to amend the Nurse Practice Act creating another classification of nurses to be known as Child's Nurse, passed the Senate on May 10th, but was not reported out of Committee in the Assembly.

The Twomey Bill Sen. Int. 1828 to exempt from licensure under the Nurse Practice Act, members of religious communities; and the Kleinfeld Bill, Sen. Int. 1321 which would have changed the present Nurse Practice Act by substituting "certificate for license" and changed the title of Practical Nurse to Trained Attendant, were not acted on by the Senate Public Education Committee.

Other bills of interest to nurses which were defeated were:

The Crews Bill—providing for an eight consecutive hour day for hospital workers.

The Goldstein Bill—prohibiting voluntary hospitals from refusing any licensed physician the right to introduce and treat his patients.

The Garcia-Rivera Bill—prescribing minimum wages and maximum hours for employment, including charitable institutions.

The Goldstein Bill—providing for a state-wide system of public medicine with free medical and hospital care.

The Marasco Bill A. Int. 1904—to make it a misdemeanor for any employment agency to furnish employees to any employer who makes race or religion a condition of employment.

Report of Committee on Public Health
Elsie Timmis Van Zandt, '28, Chairman

A Public Health Section of District No. 13 was formed this year with officers as follows:

Miss Ann McCabe, chairman.
Mrs. Taylor, vice chairman.
Miss Mabel Madden, secretary.

There have already been two meetings of this group. Plans for the future will be announced at a later date.

Report of the Quarterly Magazine
Winifred Kaltenbach, '20, Chairman

For financial reasons only three copies of the QUARTERLY MAGAZINE were issued in the year 1939. Four copies will be issued in 1940 thus making the magazine again a true Quarterly.

I wish to thank the retiring members of the board for their help and cooperation during this last year. The board for 1939-1940 is as follows:

Margaret Eliot, '21
Elizabeth Allanach, '21
Cecile Covell, '26
Helen Goodale, '32
Maria Auchincloss Look, '32
Ruth Tuckey, '36
Ruth Page, '37
Dorca Tiemeyer, '37

Report of the Red Cross Committee
Marjorie Peto, '26, Chairman

The Junior class of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing with the aid of several members of the other classes collected $926.75 during the 1938 Red Cross drive.

During the past few months several graduates of the Presbyterian School of Nursing who belong to the Red Cross Nursing Service have had the opportunity to assist the Red Cross at the President's Ball held at the Waldorf Astoria. They also helped man the Red Cross First Aid Booth during the recent visit of the Atlantic fleet.

Report of Private Duty Nurses Committee
Marion L. Nelson, '26, Chairman

The year 1938-1939 has been rather uneventful for the private duty nurses' committee as there have been few major problems.

During the slack time in the spring there was a minimum of discontent.

Monthly meetings were held with Miss Young, except one or two months when neither Miss Young nor the committee had any urgent problems.

Miss Pearsall, '11, attended the Institute, held January 30th and 31st, and February 1st under the auspices of District No. 13 as our delegate and gave us a very interesting report.

Since we are a group entirely apart from the School and Teaching staff, we feel that this committee is of vital importance in helping us to know about the developments in the School and hospital and in keeping them in touch with our problems through Miss Young. She is always willing to give her attention to our difficulties and we deeply appreciate the great help she has given us.

We hope that the private duty nurses will always do their part in up-holding the standards of our school.

The committee has chosen Miss Mary Brundage, '33, to be chairman for the coming year.

Alumnae Representative on the Nursing Committee
Marie Byron, '17

As your representative on the Nursing Committee of the Hospital, it has been my privilege to attend the meetings and to hear the problems of the School and the nursing of the sick in the hospital, carefully handled and ironed out by this group.

I am sure you will be interested in the following information relative to the School of Nursing.

At the present time there are 220 students enrolled. The number of students registered in the Department of Nursing (University) is 143.

Second Year Students			63

In 1940 the first degrees will be conferred by Columbia University on the 13 students graduating from the School, who have already completed the course in the college graduates or the advanced time credit.

Analysis of applications for September, 1939, entrance (as of June 1st, 1939).

Degree Candidates		52
College Graduates	17
Two or more years College	35
Diploma Candidates		56
Some College	9
High School only	47

The year just past is the first in which we have had no entering class in February. This arrangement is an essential part of the University program, as one of the fundamental conditions of University approval was that the degree candidates (who had previously had satisfactory college preparation) should be separated in class work from the diploma candidates, (who had not). The freshman blocks of classes, therefore, must be given twice in the spring term, once for degree and once for diploma candidates, and the same thing is necessary with junior classes in the fall term.

The adjustment with the class program is less difficult than with the clinical assignments. The load for the head floor nurses and head nurses, when a large class of inexperienced students arrives at one time, is obviously greater than that resulting from two smaller classes arriving at different times. Miss Conrad states that the experience of the past year has indicated several points at which the situation may be improved next year.

The School announcement for 1939-1940 has been made a regular university bulletin, published May 13, 1939.

On February 1st, 1939, the affiliation in Neurological nursing at the Neurological Institute became a unit in the University program. This affiliation does not replace the experience in psychiatric nursing at the Westchester Division of New York Hospital but is an alternative to it. Beginning with the class of 1940 every three year student will have either the twelve week affiliation in psychiatric nursing or the eight week service in neurological nursing.

Miss Conrad and Miss Mutch attended the convention of the National League of Nursing in New Orleans, Miss Mutch being sent as a delegate from the College. On their return trip they visited six colleges, meeting groups of Faculty members and students who evinced as much interest in the course being given in the Department of Nursing of our School as Miss Conrad and Miss Mutch did in what they had to offer students enrolling for college.

Report of Membership Committee
Anne Penland, '12, Chairman

I have the honor to present the Class of 1939 for membership in the Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing.

The following statistics have been compiled as a result of the membership campaign. There were 416 non members. Because 45 of these were without addresses only 317 letters were sent. Of these 17 were returned "address unknown." Therefore we still have 62 lost graduates. Efforts are being continued to locate these potential alumnae.

Following the letters sent to lapsed members there were 32 renewals and three of these paid all dues in arrears. There were 10 subscriptions to the QUARTERLY MAGAZINE.

After the reading of the foregoing reports Mrs. DeForest Smith took the chair while Mrs. St. John read her report.

Report of the President to the Members of the Alumnae Association
Jane Rignel St. John, '13

Greetings to our "Order of Neighbors."

These interesting reports of the standing and special committees of our Alumnae Association have covered our activities for the past year.

I should like to stress the work done by some of our committee members. An important and outstanding piece of work has been done by Miss Penland, chairman of the Membership Committee. She composed a compelling appeal letter to members, whose dues were in arrears, to renew their memberships in the Alumnae Association. The response was gratifying, and much praise is due Miss Penland for her effort. Our active membership now totals about 73%—a record of which we are justly proud but we hope to reach 100% by 1942. It is our ambition to make our Alumnae Association the largest and most active in the nursing field. It is also our ambition to serve our members well, to keep them informed of nursing news and legislation and alumnae activities. You must make the effort to attend your quarterly meetings and keep yourselves informed of progress being made.

We are indebted to Miss Lee as chairman of the Scholarship Committee for her guidance of the graduates who wish to continue their education, to Miss Eliot for the time consuming task of drafting new by-laws which will better classify membership in our Alumnae Association, and to the editor and members of the board of the QUARTERLY MAGAZINE for giving us not only interesting articles and the latest news items but for the production of a good looking magazine of which we are very proud and to which we frequently refer. Great credit should be given to all class agents for their successful efforts with the distributing fund and for the interest they have created among their classmates in school and alumnae activities. Not the least of the benefits accruing from the work of this splendid group is the correction of the address list.

To all members of the Executive Committee who have served during the past year I wish to extend thanks for their genuine interest and cooperation. May I repeat a statement I have made on several occasions, that it is an honor to be invited to serve as President of this Association.

And now for a forward look: How can we all serve better in the coming year? As an Alumnae Association we should support our graduate members more and more. We should have more scholarships for those who wish to further their education. During the year to come I should like to be able to add at least one more scholarship. Praise and commendation is due the seven alumnae who received degrees at Columbia University this year (listed in Alumnae News).

We propose to have a number of honorary memberships and will probably accept some each year for the next three years until we have a group of possibly fifteen loyal friends who have been interested in the Alumnae Association. Mrs. Eliot Wardsworth, '13, has accepted the chairmanship of this committee.

A Budget Committee must be appointed. This committee will attend to all entertainments, expenses of our delegates, as well as the expenses to be incurred by the celebration of the 50th Anniversary. The committee will work with Miss Young.

We need larger representation in the District Meetings. I wish a scheme could be proposed and carried out, whereby twenty-five of us could voluntarily attend these meetings on a three month basis.

Today we welcome to our ranks this class of 1939 with 77 members. As a graduating class you have been exhorted and praised for your splendid work. After yesterday your parents must have felt repaid a thousandfold for any sacrifice they may have made for you during the three years so quickly passed. You will never forget yesterday. But tomorrow you face the world and problems have a way of bobbing up. I want to persuade you to fetch your problems to us—through Miss Young and Miss Conrad—to your own alumnae. Please don't register against this, and against that. Give all your work a fair trial. It is a satisfaction to see our hospital and our patients being served by our own nurses. When you feel discouraged, as you will, remember that it is the unwanted and disagreeable grain of sand so annoying to the oyster, that is finally developed into the priceless pearl.

You have heard something about the 50th Anniversary celebration in 1942. Let's make it a real one, everyone helping. Perhaps we can claim a modification of a much used expression, for God, for Country, for Presbyterian in 1942.

As a token of affection and in memory of those of our number who have fought the good fight and passed to their reward will you please rise while I read their names:

Elizabeth Fehrman	1896
Helen Sill	1896
Francis R. White	1897
Alice Kershaw Fowler	1902
Naomi Meiklejohn Patten	1912
Ethel Moon McKinnon	1913
Johanna Brandis	1914
Helen Gillespie Baldwin	1918
Grace Breadon	1921
Edwina Von Gal	1926
Marjorie Decker Owens	1934

The president of the Graduating Class, Geraldine Keefer, then presented the class gift, two beautiful silver pitchers. She requested that this gift be accepted immediately in order that Miss Eliot might use the pitchers for the refreshments which were to be served on the lawn immediately following the adjournment of the meeting. Mrs. St. John gratefully accepted the gift for the Alumnae.

Following this the secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for each of the following officers, who were elected to serve for the coming year.

Mrs. Fordyce B. St. John, '13.....President
Mrs. Martin De F. Smith, '20.....Vice-President
Phyllis M. Young, '27.....Corresponding Secretary
Louise Christman, '23.....Recording Secretary

A TRIBUTE TO "THE LADY OF INNIS ARDEN"

IT is with the deepest sorrow that we inform our Alumnae of the sudden death of Mrs. J. Kennedy Tod (Maria Potter) of Innis Arden, Old Greenwich, Connecticut. She passed quietly away early Saturday morning, September 23rd.

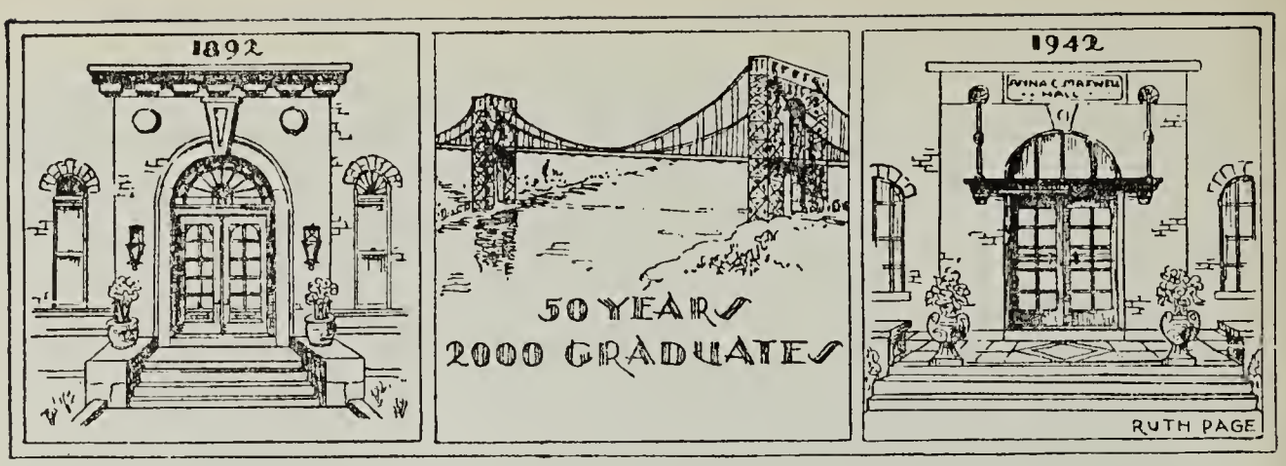

The interest of Mr. and Mrs. Tod of Sound Beach, as the village was then called, in the Alumnae of the School of Nursing dates back to 1906 when they so generously made available to Miss Maxwell, Innis Arden Cottage for the use of the nurses at the Hospital. The Cottage was well suited for convalescence as well as recreation throughout the year. Later when the Cottage was put to another use, the Camp was enlarged to accommodate six nurses and given to the Nursing Staff for week ends. After Mr. Tod's death, Mrs. Tod still continued to be the gracious hostess at the Camp each year for week ends from April to November. It is in these later years at the Camp that we all grew to feel a great affection for the "Lady at Innis Arden House." The thoughtful and generous preparations for our coming made us very conscious of her hospitality. Always were we treated as her guests when at the Camp not only by Mrs. Tod but by her entire household.

The following poem was written several years ago by Mrs. Tod. It was read at her funeral services held in the beautiful living room at Innis Arden and brought a note of comfort in its revelation of the calm faith with which Mrs. Tod came to the end of her "Course."

MY COURSE IS NEARLY RUN

My course is nearly run.
I cannot see the purpose, or the goal.
I only know,
I dare to meet the verdict or my soul,
Although there is so much I wish, undone!
My ship is nearing port.
After long battling with a stormy sea
Will come a time
To love the living, and in memory
To greet my dead. Before I was the sport
Of circumstance, I saw
Our children gathered 'round us, but a mist
Shut them from view—
And then I saw the unloved and unkissed
Children of all the world, and filled with awe,
I pledged my life to these—
But ever since, my ship has been at sea;
Long in the gale.
And now, I, pond'ring on the mystery,
Wait the solution when it may God please.

MARIA KENNEDY TOD

IT is true that 1942 is still a long distance in the future. It is true that conditions in the world of today are such that 50th Anniversaries, even of the founding of our School of Nursing seem of small importance. But it is also true that 1942 will arrive and busy people need time to formulate plans.

So we plan to write of 1942 in each Quarterly Magazine under the above heading. We can do this in only ten issues before June of 1942. Suggestions for plans made by Alumnae will be gratefully received and thoughtfully considered.

The spirit that founded our school in 1892 is still with us. Every graduate has at one time or another been inspired by that spirit. It is a part of us. It has taken us through many crises, through many changes. In fifty years it has grown and thrived, and is now the living center of a great medical institution.

We should know that institution—we should know one another—we should strengthen the bond that has held us together through these years.

Our Fiftieth Anniversary offers this opportunity. Plan to be a part of it by being present in June, 1942.

M. H. McClune.

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY

"LEADERSHIP in Nursing Education" was the theme of the Alumnae Celebration held October 13th and 14th to mark "The Fortieth Anniversary of Nursing Education in Teachers College, Columbia University". At the meetings on Friday, both in the morning and afternoon, the discussions dealt with educational concepts of the present day. That evening the Alumnae and friends met at the Men's Faculty Club for dinner in honor of Miss M. Adelaide Nutting. Miss Anna D. Wolf presided. Saturday morning the meeting consisted of short talks by members of the Faculty of Teachers College and an opportunity to attend classes then in session. In the afternoon Dr. Edward C. Lindeman, Professor of Social Philosophy, New York School of Social Work, delivered the Annie W. Goodrich lecture, his subject being "The Human Situation". This was followed by a reception at Dodge Hall.

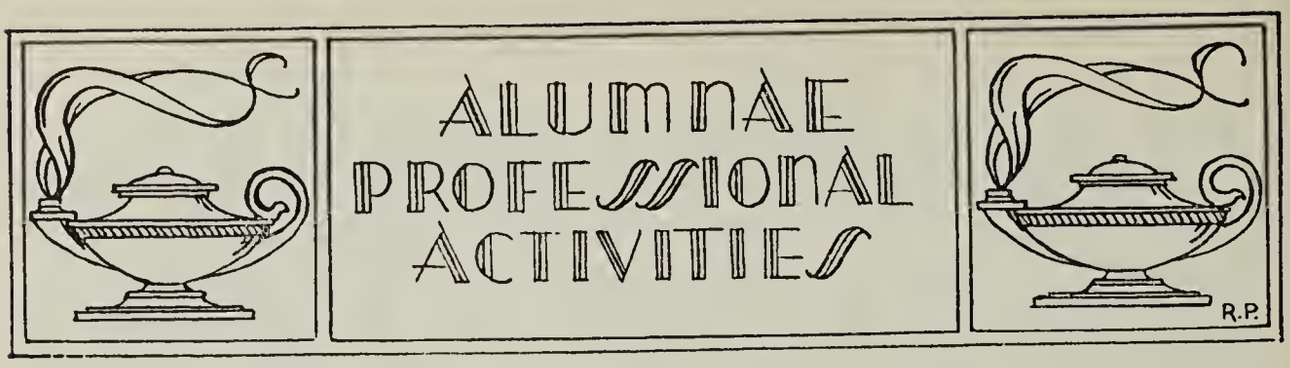

Besides meeting many old friends the Alumnae enjoyed two very stimulating days. Miss Isabel Stewart and her associates deserve great credit for such an outstanding celebration.

The results of a survey of 1500 graduates from the Nursing Education Department of Teachers College showed that one hundred and two degrees were awarded to Alumnae of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing.

THE NEW HARKNESS ALUMNAE SHOP

IT was difficult to realize that such a change could be made in our shop room in Harkness. The walls and Venetian blinds are now painted a light soft green. The outer trim of shelves and cupboards is in light oak. Many articles can be displayed in the show case, open shelves on the north wall, and the side wall cases which have sliding glass doors and reflector lights. It is pleasing to have a brighter and more roomy place and we hope that all who can will stop by to see the new setting. It is attractive after closing hours also, for through a folding gate you can see the lighted show case displaying many tempting articles. Our receipts have shown improvement since the change so our objective is being realized very early.

BLOOD BANKING

By Helen Garrow Stoddart, '28

ON August 9th an experimental blood bank was opened at the Presbyterian Hospital. It is operating on a small scale rather than as a full functioning hospital service. Its purpose is to check clinically certain laboratory observations which bear directly on the indications and contra-indications for the use of preserved blood, and to ascertain the safest method of preserving human whole blood for transfusion. Phlebotomies are done on Floor C of the Vanderbilt Clinic three nights a week. Blood is kept in a refrigerator on L floor, now called the "Blood Bank". Laboratory work is done on N floor in the College.

Transfusions of preserved citrated blood have become increasingly popular in recent years. In the Spanish Civil War it is estimated 10% of the casualties were saved by transfusion. The Russians in the Sino-Japanese War are reported to have dropped cans of blood from airplanes for use in the front lines. In the present European War, extensive plans for the giving of stored blood are being made.

Blood has long been recognized as beneficial in the treatment of disease. In the First Century people rushed to the arena to drink the blood of dying gladiators in the hope of obtaining strength and valor. During the Middle Ages the drinking of blood was recommended for rejuvenation and the cure of various diseases. In 1492 Pope Innocent VIII was transfused with the blood of three youths, probably by mouth. The Pope lived, but the three youths died. About 1500 the possibility was suggested of transfusing the blood directly from the blood vessels of one individual to the veins of another. In 1615 Libavius made his classical statement, "Let there be a young man, robust and full of spirituous blood, and also an old man, thin, emaciated, his strength exhausted, hardly able to retain his soul. Let the performer of the operation have two silver tubes fitting into each other. Let him open the artery of the young man and put into it one of the tubes, fastening it in. Let him, immediately after, open the artery of the old man, and put the female tube into it, and then the two tubes being joined together, the hot spirituous blood of the young man will pour into the old one, as it were from the fountain of life, and all of his weakness will be dispelled." It is doubtful if Andreas Libavius, who made this statement, with its accurate description of technique, 325 years ago, ever tried the experiment himself.

In 1616 Harvey demonstrated the circulation of the blood. In 1658 Sir Christopher Wren injected medicaments into the veins of dogs. The first transfusion was done on dogs in 1665 by the Englishman, Richard Lower. In 1667 a Frenchman, Jean Baptiste Denys, personal physician of Louis XIV, actually performed the first transfusion to a human. He described in detail the clinical picture he observed in the subject, a youth of fifteen who had been bled twenty times to reduce a fever of two months duration. Having decided that the boy was suffering from a lack of blood, he introduced into a vein blood from the carotid artery of a lamb. A rapid and spectacular recovery followed, in spite of the fact that the urine became black as soot.

Because of disasters in transfusion (numerous descriptions of hematuria and other sequelae of incompatibility were reported) they were banned in England and France for the next 150 years.

In 1818 James Blundell revived interest by using human blood for transfusion. Fatalities continued until Dr. Landsteiner in 1901 discovered isoagglutination and in 1907 Jansky reported the four groups.

In 1914 Agot, in Belgium, performed the first transfusion, using citrated blood. At about the same time Dr. Lewisohn of Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York City inaugurated in this country the use of sodium citrate for the preservation of blood. During the World War Dr. E. W. Robinson of the U. S. Army made use of citrated blood cells preserved in dextrose. Blood was obtained from healthy or recovered soldiers, and kept in refrigerators till it could be delivered to the front lines.

No further advances in transfusions were made until 1929 when the Russian, Yudin, following Shamov's experiments with dogs, began using preserved cadaver blood. Experimentally it was shown that the red blood cells of a dead body 10 to 11 hours after death still retain their full vitality and are able to function physiologically quite as well as the red blood cells of normal human blood.

In 1936 Belinkyi in Russia used placental blood for transfusions, and in the same year Dr. Goodall in Montreal started collecting and storing placental blood for transfusions. In 1937 Dr. Bernard Fantus in Cook County, Chicago, established the first living donor blood bank in the world. There are at present about 400 blood banks in the United States.

The term "blood bank" is not merely a figure of speech, for as one cannot draw from a bank without first depositing, so the blood preservation department cannot supply blood unless as much comes in as goes out. Patients needing transfusions obtain friends or relatives to give blood. If compatible they receive that blood. If not, blood of the correct group is administered and the blood intended for them is given to other patients of the right group.

Blood stored in a refrigerator at 4 to 6 degrees Centigrade may be kept for several weeks, when 3.5% solution of sodium citrate in a concentration of 0.35% is used as the anti-coagulent.

Physiologically, and according to clinical experience, preserved citrated blood is satisfactory for the restoration of blood volume and superior to saline or glucose in the treatment of severe shock or hemorrhage. It is well known that with length of storage certain essential properties are lost because of morphological and chemical changes. The platelets and leukocytes diminish rapidly, therefore in such diseases as thrombocytopenic purpura and other hemorrhagic dyscrasias and in a severe infection, where platelets and leukocytes are desired, fresh blood is desirable.

There are obvious advantages of preserved blood over fresh, such as the fact that it is always ready for use; large quantities can readily be transported; it can be organized on a large-scale basis; it can be given to a patient without psychic trauma.

Certain rules are essential to success in giving stored blood. They are as follows:

1. Fasting blood from carefully selected donors.
2. Avoidance, if possible, of the addition of thromboplastic substances to the blood by crude phlebotomies.
3. More attention to the psychic condition of the donor, for there apparently is thrown out into the blood stream of a markedly frightened person a substance which, when transmitted to another blood stream, is capable of causing reactions.
4. Accuracy of groupings and cross-groupings of bloods.
5. Prompt refrigeration of blood.
6. Blood not transferred from one container to another.
7. Use of equipment with the minimum number of parts.
8. Prompt and careful cleansing and autoclaving of all equipment.

There can be little doubt that "banked" blood loses some of its vital and therapeutic qualities with the imperfect methods of preservation now in use. The changes and the tendency towards disintegration which are definite disadvantages seem to be outweighed by advantages of accessibility, mass collection and transportation and with a few exceptions, clinical results comparable to those following transfusions with fresh whole blood.

Blood banks seem to have come to stay. The problem is to better preserve all of the qualities of the fresh blood for longer periods of time with less risk to the patient.

HYPERTHERMIA

By Natalie Booth Lass, '32

IN the past few years much research has been done in Hyperthermia and a considerable amount of knowledge gleaned as to its proper evaluation in the treatment of various diseases, methods used and the indications and contraindications for its use.

On October 2, 1936 the first hyperthermia treatment under the supervision of the Physical Therapy Department was given in Presbyterian Hospital. At that time the Fever Therapy Department consisted of one doctor and one nurse technician. We had one completely stocked station and one cabinet for the induction of fever. Molly Bull Bazemore, '30, joined us in May, 1938. In February, 1939, Alva Pritchard '32 became our third Fever nurse. Today we have three doctors, five available nurse technicians (two of whom are relief nurses from the Physical Therapy Staff), three machines and two stations. Our service is a busy one and the number of patients admitted for treatment shows a steady annual increase.

Artificial fever is produced by the external application of heat. The patient lies in a specially prepared cabinet, his head being outside allowing him to breath air at normal room temperatures. When the body is surrounded by an atmosphere at a humidity and temperature such that heat intake is great and heat output is impeded, the body temperature is necessarily elevated. In the presence of 100% humidity, evaporation from the skin is negligible and little of the induced heat is lost by radiation. Therefore, in proportion to temperatures of 140-160 degrees F. used in dry heat methods, cabinet temperatures of 116-120 degrees F. at 100% humidity cause the same febrile rise with less discomfort to the patient and little danger of skin burns.

Approximately ten to fifteen minutes is needed for a one degree rise. About one hour is necessary to bring a temperature to 105 degrees F.

After induction cabinet temperatures are lowered to 100-110 degrees F. The exact amount of heat necessary to maintain a fever at a desired level is governed by the weight of the individual patient, his physical condition and his cooperation.

An electric thermometer is used to indicate and record the rectal temperature throughout the treatment. To be sure of its accuracy this is checked with two mercury thermometers at intervals. Mouth temperatures are not to be relied upon. It is interesting to note that contrary to belief, oral temperatures will sometimes exceed the rectal readings by a whole degree. On the other hand mouth temperature recordings will sometimes lag as much as two to two and a half degrees. It is possible that mouth temperatures are an excellent indication of a rise or a fall and that oral readings generally precede the rectal.

At present we are not using short wave or diathermy in conjunction with our heat cabinets. We obtain the same result in the same interval without this added apparatae. When using the former the danger of burns is increased, and an electric thermometer can not be used for fever determination. When giving temperatures of 107 degrees F. we are running into the danger zone and feel that external heat is more easily regulated than a heat built up inside the tissues as in short wave and diathermy.

The hyperthermia (Hyperexia) induced by physical means is unlike that produced by foreign protien or malaria therapy. In malaria and foreign protien we have an interference with the mechanism which stabilizes body temperature, a chill produced, toxemia is present and in the case of malaria we have a secondary disease to cure.

With physically induced fever we have complete control of the fever at all times, and plateaus of fever can be maintained for any desired length of time.

The amount of fever given is ordered by the physician in charge. A doctor is at all times present or within call. All cases are admitted to the hospital for treatment and remain until discharged, which is usually the following morning. All patients undergo a rigid physical examination before being accepted by our doctor. To this we owe the fact that although Hyperthermia is a major procedure we have run into no serious difficulties and have lost no patients.

Fever is most effective in gonorrheal infections, as the thermal death time of the organism can be attained without destruction of body tissue. Temperatures of 107 degrees F. for from six to twenty hours given in one to four treatments at two to three day intervals is almost always successful. Since the introduction of sulphanilamide, however, only resistant cases are referred for fever and a combination of sulphanilamide plus a temperature of 105 degrees for twelve hours to twenty hours divided into two or three treatments is usually effective.

Primary and secondary syphilis respond well to induced fever. Most cases referred, however, are resistant cases, paresis or tabes dorsalis. Here the usual treatment consists of sixty hours of fever at 105 degrees, given once or twice weekly, combined with chemotherapy. In paresis the clinical improvement is spectacular, although improvement in serology occurs from one to six months following treatment. In tabes dorsalis the improvement is less marked but tabetic pain and crises are lessened.

In Sydenham's chorea the attack is appreciably shortened by fever. Usual treatment consists of 105-106 degrees for five hours twice weekly. Rheumatic carditis is not a contraindication.

Atrophic arthritis is definately helped by fever. Here short bouts of one to two hours at 105 degrees maximum twice or three times weekly is given.

Hyperthermia increases resistance (elevates the white count), aids elimination, speeds up metabolism and improves circulation. For these reasons we get improvement in various skin conditions, such as acne, psoriasis, allergic eczema, asthma, phlebitis, iritis, sinusitis and colds. Allergic conditions recur unless the substance to which the patient is sensative is removed. Two patients sent to Arizona have remained free of any manifestation.

Dr. William Benham Snow has worked for many years with Hyperthermia. Since there is no recognized school for the training and preparation of the Fever nurse technician, he has taught many nurses both at Presbyterian and other hospitals, the technique and essentials of this specialized work.

It is gratifying to watch the movements of a child with chorea become quiet and to see him talk and walk after six treatments. Our paretics after ten treatments come back to see us looking well and telling us how they have taken their places in the outside world again. Our patients with gonorrheal arthritis forget the long, hot tedious treatment when they find they can move their joints again.

The work is hard at times and requires great patience, but a few such cases make it most worthwhile and last but not least—we like it.

Contributors to "Alumnae Professional Activities"

Helen Garrow Stoddart, '28, A.B. Toronto University, has been the nurse in charge of the "Blood Bank" since the Spring of this year. After her graduation from the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, Miss Stoddart accepted a position as general duty nurse at the Toronto General Hospital. After this experience she returned to her own school and became known to many Alumnae as the head nurse of K Center, a position she held for a number of years.

Natalie Booth Lass, '32, has been with the department of Physiotherapy and in charge of the nursing care of the Fever Therapy patients since September 1936. Her experiences as a private duty nurse and in the doctors offices at the Presbyterian Hospital have all contributed to preparing her for success in her present field.

Dr. and Mrs. John Devereux Kernan (Charlotte Sherrill) have announced the marriage of their daughter Rosemary to Mr. Charles Christie Hill of Ottowa, Ontario, on October 14th, 1939.

1912

To Anne Penland we tender a vote of thanks for her excellent work and accomplishments as chairman of the Membership Committee for the past 18 years. Her letters to non-members have persuaded many Alumnae to rejoin and through her efforts we have been able to find the addresses of a number of "lost members."

Sympathy is extended to Miss Penland in the loss of her mother who died in October after a long illness.

Helen Latimore Bennett writes that she was a passenger on the "Wooltan" which was the last ship to get through the Mediterranean just before war was declared. Mrs. Bennett is now in Stamford, Connecticut, and has written a very interesting account of some of her travels which we have published in the "Mail Box" in this issue.

1915

Alice Orme Smith, graduate of the Smith College Graduate School of Architecture and Landscape Architecture, designed the general layout and planting plan for background and Spring bulbs in the "Garden of To-day" one of the Gardens on Parade at the World's Fair.

1918

Louise Clark Bingham wrote on May 2nd that they were just getting settled in a new bungalow after moving from Norwood to Badulla, India. She had already been called upon by the Red Cross Committee to start the teaching of Home Nursing.

Sympathy is extended to Moneta Osteen Schirmer in the loss of her brother Dr. Charles Porter Osteen and of her sister-in-law Mrs. Hubert Osteen.

1920

Dorothy Deming was the speaker who presented the general summary of the findings of the Congress on Obstetrics and Gynecology in relation to Nursing at the meetings that were held in Cleveland in September.

Eleanor Lee is again chairman of the Institute Committee of District No. 13 and we are all looking forward to another excellent program in November.

Marjorie Strong Smith has accepted a position on the Alumnae Shop Staff and will be in charge of the buying for the shop.

Marguerite Wales, '20, acted as chairman of a round table on "Complete Maternity Care" at the Congress on Obstetrics and Gynecology held in Cleveland in September.

1921

Sympathy is extended to Augusta Patton in the loss of her father the Reverend Dr. C. H. Patton, minister and author who died in August. An account of Dr. Patton which appeared in a Boston paper spoke of his collection of rosaries. "During his travels to all parts of the world Dr. Patton had gathered one of the finest collections of rosaries. It is the largest of its kind in the United States and was unusual because it showed graphically the evolution of the rosary."

1923

Sympathy is extended to Margaretta Allison in the loss of her father who died in September.

1924

Anne Ashe writes that she thoroughly enjoyed her fifth Summer at the Boys Camp in Tuxedo, N. C. One hundred and fifty campers and counsellors were under her care.

1925

Langdon Gill, '25, presented a paper on "Standards of Nursing Service for Postpartum Care" at the American Congress on Obstetrics and Gynecology in Cleveland in September.

1926

Karen Munch has been appointed Staff Supervising Nurse in the Washington Heights District with headquarters at the New Washington Heights Health Center located at the corner of Broadway and 168th Streets.

Sympathy is extended to Miss Munch in the loss of her father who died on August 8.

1931

Lucy Grier is back in America temporarily. She writes that her home and most of her possessions were destroyed by the Japanese when they entered Soochow. She is now planning to take a course in midwifery and return to her chosen field of missionary nursing with this added and much needed knowledge and skill.

Susan Andrews writes with enthusiasm that she is enjoying her work with the Newton District Nursing Association in Newton, Mass.

Sympathy is extended to Jeanne Ritter in the loss of her father who died suddenly in August.

1932

Sympathy is extended to Catherine Green in the loss of her mother who died in August.

1933

Ruth Kiel Egenhofer writes that they find Sante Fe a delightful place in which to live. She has become acquainted with Augustine Stoll, '16, Mildred Burgess Stoll, '16, and Anne Dorman Riley, '20. This makes for quite a P.H. representation in Santa Fe.

Betty Louise Figgins is operating room supervisor in the Gardner, Maine, General Hospital. This is a fifty-bed Hospital with an all graduate staff.

Lillian Davison received the Certificate of Public Health Nursing from the University of Michigan in August and started September 1st as a staff nurse with the Detroit Visiting Nursing Association. She will continue work toward her degree at Wayne University.

Wilma Stevens has accepted a teaching fellowship at the University of Washington in Seattle.

1934

Phyllis Cowell has accepted a position as Supervisor of the Clinical Experience of the preliminary class at Faxon Hospital in Utica, N. Y.

Janice E. Ayers has been with the Community Health Society of Central Delaware County since 1937.

1935

Martha Aiken has a position with the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society in Washington, D. C., and is taking courses in Public Health at the Catholic University.

Alice Burnett has been sent by Henry Street as an exchange nurse to Colorado. She will be located in Ft. Lupton with the State Department of Health and will be there for one year.

1936

Virginia Bankauf has a position as general duty nurse in the General Hospital at Saranac Lake.

Ivy Taylor is taking courses at New York University and is carrying sixteen points this semester.

Nancy Baumis has returned to Bermuda and is enjoying her experience there as a private duty nurse.

Sympathy is extended to Elsa Hellander Brokveson in the loss of her daughter on August 23.

1937

Sympathy is extended to Eunice Heath McCleery in the loss of her mother.

1938

Sympathy is extended to Margaret Benson Johnson in the loss of her new born son.

1939

Nancy Balis has a position at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital as a general duty nurse.

PUBLICATIONS

The editor would appreciate being notified about publications by Alumnae. We have hesitated starting such a record because it is difficult to have knowledge of all such publications and we do not wish to appear to be playing favorites. However, it seems well to have such a record of contributions made to the Nursing Profession by our Alumnae through their publications even if this, at first, is only a partial record. We therefore present the following which have lately come to our attention.

Delphine Wilde, '26, Supervisor of the fracture service at the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, has had an article entitled "Some Fracture Nursing Problems" published in the September number of the American Journal of Nursing.

Theodora Sharrocks, '29, who is a visiting nurse on the staff of Henry Street Visiting Nurses Association had an article entitled "The Visiting Nurse" published in the April issue of the magazine Better Times.

Annette Beals, '37, Superintendent of Nurses of the Willis F. Pierce School of Nursing, Manipay, Ceylon has an article in the American Journal of Nursing, September issue, entitled "An American Nurse in Ceylon."

RED CROSS MEMBERSHIP

The Executive Committee has requested that a notice be put in the Quarterly Magazine relative to membership in the Red Cross. It is desirable that all graduates who are eligible for membership in the Red Cross Nursing Service should either become members or renew a membership that has been allowed to lapse. For information relative to procedure necessary write to Miss Marjorie Peto, Chairman of our Alumnae Red Cross Committee. Address Miss Marjorie Peto 622 West 168th Street, New York City.

OUR EXPERIMENT WITH THE HENRY STREET VISITING NURSE SERVICE

ARRANGEMENTS have been made with the Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service, for two weeks of observation in public health nursing for the college graduates with advanced credit in our present senior class.

No attempt will be made to prepare the students to give nursing care in the field as is done for those who have the regular affiliation on the participating basis. The aim is rather to provide a brief personal experience with the problems and methods of public health nursing.

The plan is experimental, and it will be in effect from November 1st to December 15th, 1939. Funds for the experiment have been appropriated by the University.

Its success should be of interest both to visiting nurse associations and schools of nursing throughout the country. A serious problem is that of arranging for student experience in public health nursing without making unjustified demands either on the public health agencies (whose primary purpose is service, with education in a secondary role) or on the time of the student nurse (whose basic curriculum is already crowded).

Some such plan as ours may prove practical as a solution for a majority of students whose basic course has prepared them for intelligent observation. More time and supervision could thus be made available in the public health agencies, for giving courses to graduate nurses who wish definite preparation as public health nurses.

MAXWELL HALL

SENIOR students at Maxwell Hall fall heir to many privileges. One that we look forward to, eagerly, is the opportunity of being a "Big Sister". The Big Sister tradition is the outcome of a desire to have a closer social contact between the different classes. It also supplies the incoming student with someone to whom she can go with all the innumerable questions that naturally arise during her first six months at Maxwell Hall.

In August the names of the students coming in September are posted on the bulletin board. Each member of the senior class chooses a "Little Sister" from this group, and writes her a welcoming letter, meets her at the door when she arrives, and does all that one would wish to do for a real little sister.

This is quite often the beginning of a very real friendship. There is the fun of introducing the little sister to the magic of New York, there are the many little things, the cheering note at the desk, the extra letter in the mailbox, the sandwich and coffee the night before anatomy quizz, — things small in themselves, but oh! so comforting at the right moment.

And should anyone doubt the efficacy of the Big Sister Movement, she need only be present at a graduation luncheon, and watch a little sister, as, sitting opposite her big sister, she basks in that reflected glow that dims even the beauty of the candles and the flowers. It is a perfect end and beginning to three years of grand work.

Another unusual sight at Maxwell Hall these days is to see the students busily sewing on layettes of pink and blue and white. It is part of the Red Cross Disaster Work, and the students have taken it up with relish. The Juniors, as a Class Project, are making afghans from odds and ends of yarn. Each student makes a square. The class would welcome contributions of yarn, any length, any color.

Wednesday afternoon teas are in full swing again. We do hope the graduates will keep up their habit of dropping in for a chat and a cup of tea.

AILEEN HOGAN.

"LIFE ON A 45′ KETCH"

Helen F. Latimer Bennett, '13

My home for the last nine years has been on "Medea", a ketch rigged yacht built of teak and China pine forty-five feet long, fourteen feet beam, nine feet deep and draws seven feet, has a twenty horse power deisel engine, an electric light engine, tanks holding two tons of fresh water and oil for 250 hours. She has accomodations for five, one berth in the deck house, two in the salon, one in the forward cabin and one aft in the cabin off the sail locker.

At the foot of the companionway is the galley fully equipped with a pressure kerosene stove, sink, cupboard, plate and pan racks. Off this is the bath room with bath and accessories. The engine room is aft of the galley, the salon forward, and immediately forward of the salon, another cabin and the chain locker. She is really with her cupboard space, food box, etc. a compact little flat, which one can move along from one country to another, wind and currents favorable.

Medea was built in Swatow in China, and from there we sailed on to Hongkong and Malaca, where we spent about six months watching the life of the people and waiting for the typhoon season to pass over. While lying in the harbours of the New Territory in Hongkong we had the experience of riding out three typhoons, one of which blew at 144 miles per hour, no, not a very pleasant, really a very terrifying experience. The scenery and sea life was really lovely, and watching the life of the natives always interesting.

Macao one of the few Portugese colonies left, of a once great colonial empire, was like a little piece of Portugal transferred to the East with its gaily coloured houses, its park, cathedral, Governor's palace and as for its army and old fort, it was like a Gilbert and Sullivan opera. There were the Chinese gambling houses, first and second class. The river leading up to Canton with its native life was fascinating. We happened to be there for Christmas, lay alongside 900 Chinese pirate junks who had come in to celebrate their New Year. Every morning before starting the day's fun they primed and cleaned their little cannon some of which boasted of ten and more; the rest of the day was spent in revelry and marriage ceremonies, gambling and theatre going. The Portugese had a mat shed theatre built for them. It was a gay place. Some of them inquired of our Philipino crew if we were worth pirating but were informed that we were very poor and not worth wasting any powder on.

We had Christmas dinner on board the Sagres, a Portugese owned ship, the guest of the Goanese Captain, a dapper little chap, a most charming host, who when we asked him what his cargo was said, "Cocoanuts from Goa to Macao", but when we became better acquainted, with a twinkle in his eye, confided that it was tons of opium he carried, and I might mention that at this time the League of Nations was sitting, discussing that same question and thought they had it all controlled. The cargo from Macao to Goa was fire crackers and we learned later why such quantities were needed. Goa, the Portugese colony in India, which Christianized by the Portugese, have mixed up a little of the Hinduism religion with the Christian and so when the host is raised fire crackers are let off by the hundreds, outside the church door.

March 1st, 1931 we were sailing away when we were arrested by the Gilbert Sullivan police, they thinking we were leaving without clearance but on producing our papers, we were allowed to proceed.

Our next sight of land was St. Johns Island, where Saint Francis Xavier started his missionary work, then Hainan Island, next Touraine in French Indo China, where we spent a few delightful days, then across the Indian Ocean to Singapore. That first real voyage was thrilling, and we had confidence after that that Medea was a safe sea going craft. One of my watches was from 7—11 p.m., all alone on deck with the sea and the stars, you really feel so familiar with both and sometimes as I looked aft it would seem as if some of the waves reached the top of the Mizzen mast and with both hands on the tiller one gets quite a thrill, the same thrill as you feel on horse back, a sailing boat is really like a living thing.

We were quite excited when we sighted Singapore and knew we had made our first real sea voyage.

We spent two most enjoyable years around Malaya, up the East coast and the West coast, up some of her rivers, seeing and getting to know the country and the Malayan people, then over to the Dutch Indies. I wish I had space to go into detail on all of our delightful experiences. I get so excited when I start to write about them. The Dutch were lovely, charging us five gilders, approximately $2.50 harbour dues then inviting us to lunch and dinner, towing Medea to the jetty to fill up her tanks with fresh water and doing any and everything they could to make up for that five gilders harbour dues.

Once we were taken for a Japanese boat, spying on this land, by a Dutch oil boat. They had signalled us to stop and were about to fire across our bows when they discovered it was an English boat. Then they were full of apologies and couldn't do enough for us, filling up our oil tanks with Grade A fuel and every available space with Palembaug pineapples, the most luscious I have ever tasted. The Captain invited us to spend the night at his home.

We spent one night anchored on the equator, just for the novelty of it.

All along Sumatra five miles out to sea were fishing stakes, villages on stakes three miles out. We even went aground on mud there outside sight of land. After some delightful episodes we returned to Malaya lay alongside Changi a most lovely peaceful spot where later we saw the Singapore base take root and grow and were the guests of the General in Command for lunch one day after being shown around the great Naval Base by his Aide.

We visited Malaca with its red Dutch houses. There also were the ruins of an old Cathedral which had been the first resting place of Saint Francis Xavier's body, later transferred to its present place, one of the Cathedrals in old Goa. Port Dixon where we had dinner underneath the trees at the Club, not a mosquito, which not many years previous was a mosquito and malaria infested area, since cleaned up by the late Sir Ronald Ross. Port Swettenham where I looked forward to seeing crocodiles galore but saw none; the Government having offered about $1.00 for every crocodile egg brought to them; on to Pangkor, a beautiful tropical island with its native village where one is wakened by the calling of the Argus pheasant in the morning; then Lumut on the Dinding river where the monkeys call across the river to one another and on going ashore one can see the pugmarks of the tiger and the wild cat, but never did I see hide nor hair of any wild beast. I could tell you of many more delightful experiences but before I go do you realize the size of the Dutch Colonial Empire which is within sight of Singapore and extends to within sight of Australia, contains 1700 odd islands, is tremendously rich in oil, coffee, tea, rubber, tin, quinine, spices and fruit. Malaya as you likely know is rich in rubber and tin. The Chinese are the labourers, shopkeepers and fishermen in both the Dutch Indies and Malaya. The Malayans are the grand gentlemen, very lazy. It is above them to soil their hands but oh how they love a good fight. 11½° north of the Equator, the climate of British Malaya is not unpleasantly hot, south of the Equator extremely hot.

Finally November 5th, 1933, we left Malaya for India, stopping at Poli Wei in Sumatra, a lovely circular harbour, trees coming right down to the water's edge and the water containing a variety of most beautifully coloured fish. Between there and Colombo we encountered another typhoon, the first they had experienced in seventy years and it blew us about 300 miles off our course but by December 10th we were at Colombo lying alongside the "Pilgrim" an American yacht, also one from Los Angeles, and the "Johana" from Siam, on her way to England. We motored to Kandi saw the Buddha's tooth temple, the tea plantations, the cinnamon gardens, the trotting bullocks and the elephants bathing in the river. In Colombo one can buy many varieties of semi-precious stones, and tortoise shell and it is from there the desiccated cocoanut comes. We were the guests of Colonel Clemenshaw, the owner of an English yacht built in Calicut in India, for Christmas dinner. December 28th we set sail for Cochin, India. It was in Cochin we indulged in delicious fresh vegetables brought down from the hills 6,000 feet up, bananas 20c a bunch, and large fresh eggs at 5c per dozen. There we saw the ruins of Portugese forts, many churches built by the Portugese, also the making of hand sewn river boats, sewn with coir. It is in this part of India that coir matting, used in churches and public buildings, is made.

February 1st we arrived at St. Georges Island off Goa, which is, barring one island lying off India the only remaining Portugese colony in India and is about 300 miles south of Bombay. I could talk on indefinitely about Goa, where we spent a most delightful and interesting year up some of her rivers, but time and space do not permit, so we must hurry across to Aden across the Indian Ocean, up the Red Sea to Suez, through the Suez Canal to Port Said, then across to the enchanting island of Cyprus, to Alexandretta in Syria on to Adalia in Turkey and on to Malta.

THIS FORTUNE-TELLER WAS RIGHT!

HELEN C. GOODALE, '32

And then the fortune-teller said, "You are going on an ocean trip to a strange country". I smiled, a little amusedly I must confess, and laid that remark and all her other predictions to the usual line of clairvoyants. Imagine my surprise, then, when one day a few months later I found myself seated in a travel bureau, booking passage to a place called Aruba.

Aruba is an island belonging to the Netherlands West Indies group, situated about twenty miles off the coast of Venezuela. It is surrounded entirely by the azure blue waters of the Caribbean. Composed mostly of fascinating rock formation, there are a few areas of vegetation which are positively breath-taking. Aruba possesses all the charm and interest of any number of small islands, (at least the books I've read say they are interesting), but in addition it has a distinctly different asset, a colony of American and English who work for the Lago Oil and Transport Company, a branch of the Standard Oil. Why did the Standard Oil build a plant at such a great distance from the United States? The reason is legitimate, be assured. In the Maracaibo Lake Basin in Venezuela is a tremendous quantity of crude oil. This supply belongs to the Standard Oil, and since it is such a richly productive area a stable place to build a refinery was a necessity. The Dutch are a peace-loving people, have few governmental difficulties, and honor highly the property of individuals. Therefore a Dutch possession seemed the ideal place for the establishment of a refinery. Since Aruba could be easily approached by boat, and a good harbor developed, it was selected. The Dutch Government has leased an area of land to the Standard Oil Company until the year 2,000.

The stories of the first "settlers" in this two-mile area called Lago Colony sound like the real pioneering days of any community. Now, however, it is a well-established colony possessing many interesting features, and to many it is "Home". The houses are bungalow style, the exteriors being stuccoed in various colors. The houses are all raised off the ground and set in oil-cups to discourage the many varieties of insects that might try to get into the houses. The ventilation system is unique. There are no windows such as we know them, but louvres, or shutters, so arranged that there is a brisk breeze blowing through the houses most of the time. The pride of every family is its garden, begotten from many hours of hard labor and untold patience. There is the problem of the lizards who eat any fresh growing thing that appeals to them. There is the very poor soil to be doctored up and made rich enough to nourish the plants. With all these things, and more, the gardeners have to deal. All the natural resources of the island such as goat-turd and leaf-mold are used for fertilizer and sometimes Peter Henderson is called upon to send down nourishment for the plants. Gardenias and hibiscus of all variety grow here very well.

Practically all the supplies for the Colony are imported from the United States and brought down by the Standard Oil tankers which make frequent journeys between the countries. Even the drinking water is brought by means of these tankers. Frosted foods are a great favorite. It is difficult to get fresh vegetables in Aruba otherwise. There are some very attractive-looking Chinese gardens out on the island, but the Americans are wary of eating anything which is not to be cooked first since dysentery is very prevalent there. Fresh milk is at a premium and even the babies are fed on a synthetic product.

For amusement these colonists have a variety from which to choose. There are badminton enthusiasts, tennis fans, devotees to golf, ardent fishermen, and sail-boat skippers, and of course swimming in all its glory. There are dances at the Clubhouse every week, and motion-pictures three nights a week. There are special clubs for men and women. Easy to find are many ideal picnic spots with sandy beaches, waving palm-trees, and lapping waters; or there are rugged cliffs and hidden caves for those who prefer their settings a little out of the ordinary. There are old gold-mine ruins to be explored, old crystal mines where one may find beautifully colored and exquisitely-formed pieces of crystal. Innumerable varieties of cacti often make weird etchings against the horizon. Nearly all the colonists have cars and these places are readily accessible to them since the entire island is only fourteen miles long.

Sunrise viewed from a boat anchored off the reef of the island is a sight never to be forgotten. The many gases rising in the air above the plant make the sunsets unbelievably brilliant and varied. As the curtain of night falls down and the lights begin to twinkle in the various parts of the plant and on the stills one is reminded of how much the scene resembles a miniature Coney Island. Twenty-four hours a day the plant runs with the employees working on three different shifts. The lake steamers ply back and forth constantly with what seems to be a never-ending supply of crude oil.

There is a hospital ideally situated on the top of a hill overlooking the sea. It is owned and managed by the Standard Oil Company. There one finds real glass windows. This is an eighty-five bed hospital just completed this last year and very modern and up-to-date. There are both registered nurses and native help to care for the patients. The problems of the hospital are many, but the most serious one seems to be fighting corrosion from the constant dampness. The clinics are very busy as an intensive campaign is constantly being waged against dysentery. The maids working in the colony are required to report for monthly examinations.

There are many more interesting things yet unmentioned, such as the lovely parrakeets, the delicious fish, the luscious tropical fruits, but why not leave you a little curious?

I hope that the next time a trip is prophesied for me it will be to as interesting a spot as Aruba was. And you skeptics take heart, maybe there is an adventure around the corner for you.

"LET THERE BE ICE!"

Said Albert to John—but none can agree
Who was the first to conceive the idee—
"Let's stop this bathing of patients, thus easing
"The drain on the water: we can start it afreezing
"Down on the court." The Executive Vice President bawled, "Have Watson make ice!"
Watson, so prompt to the call of his chief,
Muffled in reefer but colder than Lief
Erickson captained the hose and its crew
And flooded the court for a skating review.

Inside and out they whirl on their blades,
Two-somes and lonesomes without any aids;
On one foot, on two, forward and back,
They race with the wind or breast it and tack.
Green, yellow, red, vie in the lights,
But no little gored skirt flirts with its tights.
Green as a sapling, with the greatest of ease
A probe does the split to ninety degrees.
Nonchalant blonde and determined gray hair
Raise their blood count by a twist in the air.

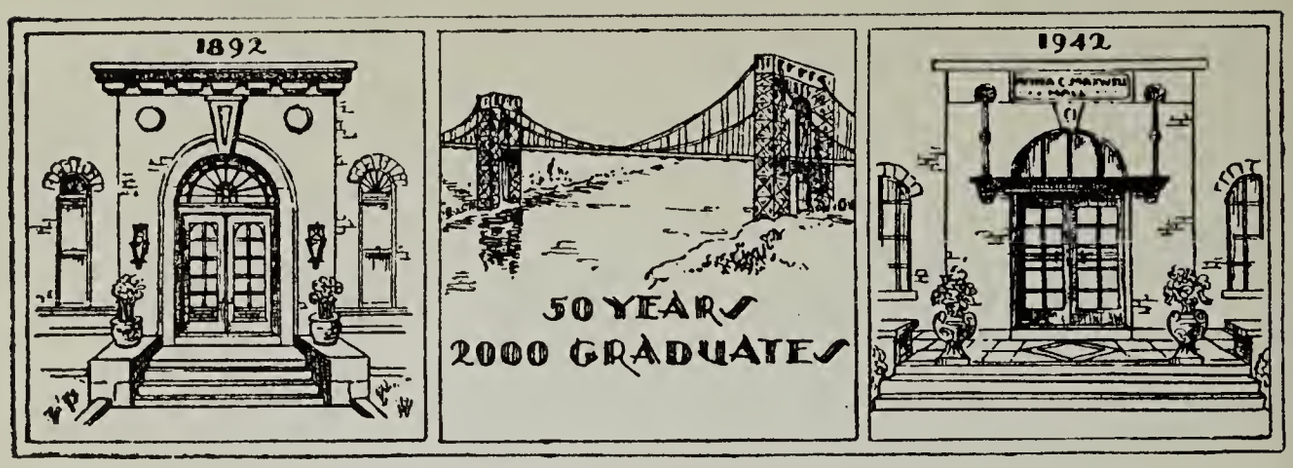

He who has sponsored the ice has as yet
To summon the moon for the night's pirouette:
"Contrary, eh? Well, I'll give them a watt
"And light up the rink with my own counterplot."
Cagle's victrola would certainly please
The psychopath Pa of that young Viennese,
As the Center is caught in the sway of his waltz,
And the traffic on Broadway listening halts.

Miss Penland is cutting figures of eight
And blowing the ether out of her pate.
An amateur, daring each morning's fresh glaze,
Miss Wells is improving her unbalanced ways.
Kenny, a miniature Scot, isn't any More than a McIntosh aping Miss Henie.
Albert, Ah me! None will forget
The Lamb in his woolens as he capers a fret.

The old and the young, the busy and idle
Float with the ease of foam on a seidel.
There are some with a halt, but none are yet maimed;
Some secretly bear their bruises ashamed
Or afraid of Miss Young warming the sill
And fearful of fractures each time there's a spill.
The Big Kind Wolf who ordered the rink
Looks on from his den with a smile and a wink.

To you who are all far, far away
In cold or in heat, at war or at play,
Imagine this fete: a high cockalorum
Heel and toe spinning (of course with decorum)
With the high and the lowly castes within castes,
More abandoned becoming the longer it lasts.
Join in the gamboling spirit of man,
Woman, and child at the hub of your clan!
Doctor and Mister, yes, even Miss,
Somehow don't fit a ditty like this—
Not even I, with the will and the can,
Would ever dare speak of Helen and Anne—
So pardon me, All, if I have offended
By jiggling your poise; no affront was intended.

This poem was written by an alumna of the class of 1916 in celebration of one of the happiest events at the Medical Center. On the 4th of January, 1940, the tennis courts were flooded. The weather favored this innovation and an unusual and prolonged cold spell insured a long period of good skating for the young and the "older," the skilled and the unskilled from among the professional and non-professional groups connected with the hospitals at the Center.

HISTORY OF THE SCHOOL

HAVE you any interesting items about the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital?

The History Committee will compile a history of the school's first fifty years. This will be in booklet form and may be purchased at the time of the anniversary in June 1942. To make this booklet a success we shall need the cooperation of all the graduates of the school. Many alumnae have recollections of events of historical interest connected with the fifty years of our school. Please send any information of such incidents to Miss Eleanor Lee, chairman of the History Committee, 179 Fort Washington Avenue, N. Y. City.

INCIDENT OF HISTORICAL INTEREST

Mrs. William Kinnicutt Draper has told us recently her own story of Miss Maxwell and the Red Cross Society for Maintenance of Trained Nurses, Auxiliary No. 3 during the Spanish American War.

On July 15, 1898, a special committee, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mrs. Winthrop Cowdin and Mr. Henry Townsend went to Washington to confer with President McKinley. In the afternoon another conference at the White House was arranged by the President with the Secretary of War and the Surgeon General of the Army. At this conference the Red Cross Committee was assured the cooperation of the government in allowing trained women nurses in camp hospitals. General Sternberg came to New York the next day to meet the ladies again and make definite arrangements. Miss Maxwell had written many personal appeals to the Surgeon General to allow nurses to enter the camp hospitals.

The work of recruiting nurses for Auxiliary No. 3 had the immense satisfaction of supplying trained nurses for the first time to field hospitals. This marked an epoch in the history of nursing as well as in the history of our own school.

The good nursing under Miss Maxwell completely altered the Army Officers' point of view and Dr. Hoff said to her: "I wondered when you came what we would do with you. Now I do not know what we would have done without you."

DR. BREWER

DR. GEORGE EMERSON BREWER died on Sunday, December 24, 1939 in Harkness Pavilion. At his death many of our alumnae lost a most valued friend and leader. Dr. Brewer came here in the height of his career having already become a noted surgeon and teacher and was appointed chief of the Surgical Service of Presbyterian Hospital. The nurses who had the privilege of knowing Dr. Brewer the best were those who went to the World War with the unit which he organized and of which he was commander-in-chief. His ability as an outstanding leader was apparent not only to those directly under him but to all with whom he came in contact both among the American as well as the British Forces. Dr. Brewer gained many great distinctions both at home and abroad and occupied many important positions. In an editorial in the New York Herald Tribune on December 26 it was said of him: "These different posts suggest the respect which his colleagues and associates had of him. This was due not alone to his rare skill and his high intelligence but to qualities of character which inspired confidence and affection on the part of all who knew him. Quiet, alert, gentle, he had the strength that comes from self-confidence backed by profound skill and long experience".

Dr. Brewer was at all times a friend of nurses and of nursing and his charming personality was a constant joy to all who worked with him. Quite characteristic was the remark he made to one of his patients when he was planning for his operation: "Don't worry", he said, "I'll get you a C-J (cracker-jack) nurse from Presbyterian". One of our pleasant memories of Dr. Brewer is the evening he entertained us at an Alumnae meeting with some of his interesting work in Anthropology which he studied for several years after his retirement from professional life.

IMPROVEMENTS AT THE CENTER

Cecile Covell, '26

THOSE of us who remember the Neurological Institute at its auspicious opening ten years ago have been watching with interest the new developments in the building and administrative programs. The aim very definitely has been to maintain the attractive settings, the high standards and techniques which have always been associated with the Institute, and yet increase the facilities of the building to meet the ever extending demands of modern neurology.

The amalgamation with the Presbyterian Hospital has made necessary a great many changes in the various departments. The record room has been combined with that at Presbyterian. The main cashier's office handles all accounts, the communication with Neurological being a vacuum tube system which dispatches bills and accounts back and forth in the best department store manner.

The nursing offices are now on the second floor overlooking the river. The increased space, which includes a small waiting alcove, is a decided improvement over the cramped offices recently vacated on the first floor. The classroom, reading room, conference room and instructor's offices are now located on the eleventh floor formerly the nurses' lounge and living quarters. This unit with complete facilities for teaching is for the exclusive use of the nursing group and solves many problems previously caused by the necessity of sharing the one available lecture room used by all departments at the Institute.

There are only thirteen members of the nursing staff living in the building. Their rooms with an attractive lounge are in the East wing on the main floor. With fifty-five nurses now enjoying living out privileges, locker spaces had to be enlarged and improved. Designed after those at Presbyterian, they offer adequate dressing and resting facilities.

The offices of Dr. Putnam and Dr. Loeb are at the top of the building on the fourteenth floor. Between their two offices a large room with a fire-place has been reclaimed for an extensive Neurological library and reading room. A librarian is to be in charge of this attractive unit and the nursing department has been given the privilege of using the room at any time.

The x-ray department has been greatly enlarged, now occupying the East wing of both the tenth and eleventh floors. The many metal-layered chamber in which electroencephalograms are taken has been weeks in construction. This recently developed technique for the location of brain lesions, without air injection is being studied with great interest and success.

The therapy department seems to be the only one which still finds itself in its original location, but it has also had its share of renovation. A new Hubbard bath is being installed where patients may have the advantage of ample room for exercises in water. The latest model of the Emerson-Snow Fever Cabinet has been in active operation for over a month. This new machine embodies a high atmospheric humidity and a minimum of temperature. Emphasis has been given in its design to provide better facilities for nursing the patient.

Offices for the interne staff have been made on almost all the floors but it has been noticed that the nurses' stations still seem to be the most attractive spots for doctors to read charts and write their case histories.

From an artistic point of view the new or re-upholstered furniture, the freshly painted walls and the beautiful draperies are giving a great amount of pleasure. The Institute is now welcoming visitors and a very cordial invitation is extended to those who are interested in seeing this latest unit to join the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center.

THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL RED CROSS GROUP OF TORONTO

THIS group originated through a suggestion, voiced by Mrs. W. Harland Steel, shortly after the outbreak of this war, that graduates of the Presbyterian Hospital, now resident in Toronto, might be interested in forming a local group for the purpose of doing some sort of war work, such as the making of surgical supplies or voluntary assistance in local Base Hospitals.

All P.H. graduates in Toronto who could be located through the Quarterly Magazine were notified and it was found that approximately eighteen were free and willing to undertake this work. Feeling that this was enough for organization, an interview was held with Mrs. Wallace Campbell (Chairman of Voluntary Service for Red Cross) at which Mrs. Steel and her very able assistants, Mrs. Graham Evans and Mrs. Alexander McIlwraith, were present. Mrs. Campbell expressed her willingness to have us make surgical dressings; all material, patterns, etc., to be supplied by the Red Cross.

A meeting was then held at the residence of Mrs. George L. Thompson, 147 Warren Road, on Friday afternoon, November 17th. This was an informal meeting. Miss Jean Gunn kindly consented to take the chair. After a discussion regarding a suitable name for our organization, the following committees were duly nominated and approved:

Chairman:
Jean I. Gunn, '05, O.B.E., L.L.D.

Advisory Committee:
Helen Locke, '09
Harriet Meiklejohn, 06

Active Committee:
Laureda McAndrew Evans, '19
Marjorie Allen Urquhart, '21
Isabel Levan Malone, '24
Muriel Thompson Steel, '27
Kay Tait McIlwraith, '27

Treasurer:
Ida Northey Shaw, '21

Secretary:
Gladys Lumbers Mara, '17

In addition to the officers mentioned above, those present were:

Helen E. Laidlaw Martin, '01
Alice Upper Lash, '08
Pauline Ivey Robertson, '14
Gladys Stark, '17
Greta Goodearle, '19
Agnes Campbell, '19
Dorothy Taylor Langley, '23
Eve King Smyth, '24
Mabel Fensome Grant, '25
Isabel Saunders Knowlson, '28
Marion Sellers Johnson, '29
Ethel P. Kinnear, '37

Mrs. Steel was instrumental in getting bright, well-equipped working quarters for us at the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church.

We have only had three active group meetings, as work was suspended during the holiday season. To date we have made 2,772 dressings.

At the last meeting before the holidays, Miss Gunn, Miss Locke and Miss Helen Kelley, '05, brought Miss Mary Swallen, '30, of the Neurological Institute at the Presbyterian Medical Center to luncheon. It was a jolly affair, and we put on a bit of swank for this "onslaught of Presbyterians" to quote Miss Gunn. Ordinarily each person brings a box luncheon, with which we have the most unfailingly delicious coffee made by Ida Shaw, but on this particular occasion we used plates and forks and had extra goodies, such as a luscious chocolate cake.

GLADYS MARA, '17, Corresponding Secretary.

EDITORS NOTE: On very good authority we have heard that The Presbyterian Hospital Red Cross Group of Toronto has been highly commended by the Red Cross for their splendid workmanship.

PROFESSOR EMERITUS

DR. J. BENTLEY SQUIER, founder and director of the Squier Urological Clinic and professor of urology in Columbia University, retired from active service on June 30, 1939, with the title of Professor Emeritus.

Dr. Squier received his degree of Doctor of Medicine from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University in 1894 and served his surgical interneship at St. Luke's Hospital in New York, at which institution he is still a consulting surgeon. His chief interest, however, is urology and more especially surgery of the prostate. In this latter field his contributions to methods of surgery have made him internationally known and one of the outstanding experts in this country in suprapubic prostatectomy. In 1909 he was appointed professor and director of genito-urinary surgery in the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital and in 1917, professor of urology and genito-urinary surgery in Columbia University. In 1938 he became president of the Medical Board of Presbyterian Hospital.

It is fitting that a man of Dr. Squier's abilities and experience should be honored by the medical societies. He has served as president of the American Urological Association, treasurer of the New York Physicians Mutual Aid Association, president of the Medical Society of the County of New York and president of the American Association of Genito-Urinary Surgeons of which he is a Fellow, founder, governor, and a member of the board of Regents. He was elected president of the College in 1932.

Dr. Squier has been associated with Presbyterian Hospital since 1917. In the old hospital the urological service consisted of four beds in each of the general surgical wards and an out-patient department. When the new Medical Center was built Dr. Squier formed the Squier Urological Clinic of seventy-six beds. The money to build and endow this clinic was contributed by many friends who were interested in seeing him carry on his work. Dr. Squier's interest in the Clinic is intense, and he has worked constantly to improve the teaching facilities and the service for patients.

We deeply regret that Dr. Squier's decision to relinquish some of his burdens had to be accepted but it is a great comfort to know that he will continue as Professor Emeritus and that the Squier Urological Clinic will continue to reap the benefit of his experience, his kindliness, and above all his humanity.

COBBLE COURT INC.
AUXILIARY TO NURSES HOUSE

THE annual meeting of the Advisory Council of Cobble Court Inc., Auxiliary to Nurse's House, was held in the Red Cross Chapter Auditorium on January 18th. At this meeting it was announced that Cobble Court Inc. has become an auxiliary committee of Nurse's House, it's immediate aim at the present time being to assist in raising funds for the much needed new wing at Nurse's House. It is proposed to have bed-rooms on the first floor of this wing to enable the guests who are not able to walk upstairs to enjoy the pleasures and comforts of Nurse's House also. I am sure that no one has ever been there without having been impressed by the cordial homelike atmosphere which is a part of that lovely old country house in Babylon, Long Island. All this is due to the committee of Nurse's House, of which Mrs. August Belmont is chairman and to the very hospitable welcome which is given by Miss DeGraw and Miss Staples.

The amount remaining from the $50,000 to be raised for this project is between $15,000 to $20,000 and Cobble Court Inc. is planning to help obtain this sum.

MARGARET ELIOT, '21, President,
Cobble Court Inc. Auxiliary to Nurses House.

DAWN

A breathless stillness—
A waiting world.
Suddenly the sky is rent
With a brilliant stab of gold.
Slowly into view
Comes a ball of red,
It rises—softens into a rosy glow—
Then disperses itself into Multitudinous pink clouds.
The sky is alive—
The world responds—
And born is another day

SUNSET

The loveliest union of all nature—
The moment when dusk's violet arms
Answer the entreaty of a tired world,
And encircle it in peace.

THE BUFFALO CONVENTION

THE First Biennial Meeting and Thirty-eighth Convention of the New York State Nurses Association and The Thirtieth Annual Meeting of the New York League of Nursing Education was held in Buffalo, New York, October 16th through 20th, 1939.

The Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, as well as our Alumnae Association was well represented.

Helen Young '12 and Margaret Conrad '20 attended as representatives of the School of Nursing; and Mrs. Fordyce B. St. John (Jane Rignel '13), as President of the Alumnae Association.

Delegates from the Head Nurse Group at the Center included Emily Simonson '31, Jean Biddle '32 from Presbyterian and Haigan Tashjian from Neurological Institute.

Eileen Smith '40 was the Student Delegate. The Special Duty Nurses sent Elspeth Gould '09 to represent their group, while Elizabeth Wilcox '27 attended as the Alumnae Delegate.

Grace Warman '17, as President of the New York State League of Nursing Education, presided at all the league meetings.

The Convention was one of unusual interest and inspiration. All who attended were unanimous in their praise of the efficiency of the placing Committees, the hospitable charm of the hostesses (the President of District I and her Committee), the stimulating character of the programs, and the high quality of the lighter entertainment provided as a balance for four days of intellectual stimulation plus a fairly heavy load of business to be transacted.

The Theme of the Convention, "The Nurse of To-Morrow" was presented from almost every conceivable point of view by distinguished members of the fields of Medicine, Education, Religion and Nursing.

Other P.H. graduates seen at Buffalo were: Helen Gibbard '23, Marie Elizabeth West '32, Margaret Wolcott '27, Ruth Wood '11, and Thelma Mildred Flint '38.

ELIZABETH WILCOX, '27

A THANKSGIVING DANCE

DECIDING that it was high time to celebrate an old holiday in a new manner, the graduate nurses of The Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center staged a superb Thanksgiving party on November 29th last. Miss Young and her assistants in the Nursing Office took the initiative expressing the belief that there should be and could be social occasions, just for the enjoyment of the graduate nurses, without enormous expenditures of money. The only way to prove the demand for such occasions was to put it to the test. Miss Eliot, always successful in social affairs, willingly put her hand to this. So loud rejoicings were not only seasonal but arose because of the obvious success of the party and the surprising fact that it even paid for itself!

Miss Young and the supervisors from all the units in the Medical Center played charming hostesses and greeted the many guests on arrival. The gala throngs reaped a rich Thanksgiving harvest of pleasure from the efforts of the Committees on Posters, Tickets, Decorations and Refreshments. The whole affair reflected the perfect cooperation and good fellowship of those who had done their work unseen for the enjoyment of all. The scarecrows and pilgrims winked from their perches on the gymnasium walls in impartial approval of informal dress or the sheen of silken evening gowns, and white ties and tails. Lanny Ross's orchestra encouraged the dancers to sway and dip among the corn stalks; other couples strolled in the corridors enjoying the full moon and the Manhattan skyline which resembled strings of iridescent gems; still others enjoyed refreshments and conversation in the game room or the cider barrel in the hall.

As the gay multitude slowly dissolved in the wee small hours, they voiced unanimous approval of a perfect evening and the hope that the Graduate Nurses of the Medical Center would not wait till next Thanksgiving before offering another party.

GUDRUN CHRISTIANSEN, '38.

INTRODUCING NEW YORK CITY

MOST of us think we have not the time nor the energy for "sight seeing" unless we are traveling in foreign lands. With many foreign lands temporarily unavailable we may well profit by discovering some of our own treasures of art, history and science. We are grateful to Maria Auchincloss Look for supplying us with the following data which she received from Miss Katharine Wilkinson, History instructor at the Chapin School.

OLD HOUSES

Poe Cottage—Kingsbridge Road and Grand Concourse. Just as Edgar Allen Poe left it.

Dyckman House—Broadway and 204th Street. The only farm house left on Manhattan Island. Dutch.

Jumel Mansion—Edgecombe Avenue West 161st Street. Washington Headquarters 1776. The home of Madame Jumel who married Aaron Burr in 1835.

Hamilton Grange—Convent Avenue West 141st Street. Hamilton's house in the country.

Gracie Mansion—Carl Schurz Park, East End Avenue and 88th Street. Country house of a well-to-do New Yorker.

Roosevelt House—26 East 20th Street, Town house of Theodore Roosevelt's parents.

Tredwell House—29 East 4th Street, Town house of a well-to-do New Yorker—occupied by the same family 1830's to 1930's.

BROOKLYN

Brooklyn Museum—Eastern Parkway. Paintings, treasures of all kinds. Interesting display of old dresses.

Children's Museum—Brooklyn Avenue, Park Place.

STATEN ISLAND

Garibaldi House—Bachman's. Take South Beach train. The house Garibaldi occupied while he was in exile here. A little brown clay boarded house under an enormous roof with columns on all four sides built by the Italians of New York to protect it.

HISTORICAL POINTS

City Hall—Broadway—City Hall Park. An exquisite building—1812, full of portraits and other objects of interest particularly the Governor's room.

The Sub-Treasury Building—Broad and Wall Streets. The site of Federal Hall where Washington took the oath of office 1789.

Fraunces' Tavern—Broad and Pearl Streets. Where Washington bade farewell to his officers after the Revolution. A collection of Revolutionary mementos is to be seen here.

Bowling Green—Foot of Broadway. The railing had originally the head of George III on the chief posts. These were knocked off at the beginning of the Revolution and the jagged ends remain.

OLD CHURCHES

St. Marks in the Bowerie—Second Avenue and 11th Street. Oldest building in continuous service as a church on the Island. A trip around the church and the churchyard is conducted every Sunday after the 11 o'clock service and is most interesting.

St. Paul's—Broadway and Vesey Street, where Washington worshipped as president. His pew is shown and also that of Governor George Clinton.

Trinity—Broadway at the head of Wall Street. The church is not the original but is rich in treasures. The churchyard is full of historical interest. Hamilton, Jay, and Fulton as well as others are buried here.

MUSEUMS

The Cloisters—Ft. Washington Avenue West 190th Street.

Hispanic Museum—Broadway West 156th Street. Pictures and other treasures connected with Spain.

Numismatic Museum—is on the same terrace.

Museum of the American Indian—Broadway West 155th Street.

Museum of the City of New York—Fifth Avenue and 103rd Street. Full of interest in connection with the growth of the city.

New York Historical Society—Central Park West 77th Street.

Frick Gallery—Fifth Avenue and 70th Street. In the Frick house the pictures hang as they did when the house was occupied.

Bache Collection—814 Fifth Avenue. Small precious collection of old masters in the house of a modern well-to-do New Yorker.

Museum of Modern Art—11 West 53rd Street What the name implies, with the addition of a showing of old movies at certain hours. The priceless painting loaned by the Italian government to the San Francisco Fair will be shown beginning January 26th.

Museum of Science and Industry—30 Rockefeller Plaza.

New York Public Library—Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street. A collection of old paintings on the top floor.

Whitney Museum—10 West 8th Street. Modern American paintings and Sculpture with numerous exhibits of water colors, cartoons and different phases of art.

Aquarium—The Battery. Fish—but especially the penguins.

THE MILLER-ABBOTT METHOD OF SMALL INTESTINAL INTUBATION

PAULLYNN H. STINES, '35
PHYLLIS M. YOUNG, '27

ACUTE small intestinal obstruction has always been one of the most serious conditions known to surgery. Untreated and unrelieved, patients suffering from it become rapidly worse and die. In the not very distant past such patients, even with treatment, had only a fighting chance to live. Presbyterian Hospital statistics show a mortality rate for this of 66.6% in the years 1916 to 1919. By the years 1932 to 1935 the figure dropped to 27.6%. The most recent report, which is based on a series of fifty-eight selected cases, shows a mortality of only 7.3%. This marked improvement is due to more than one factor but one factor is of paramount interest in the study of the last mentioned fifty-eight cases which are "selected" in that they were all subjected to small intestinal intubation by the Miller-Abbott method before surgery was attempted.

A twofold problem is presented in the patient suffering from small intestinal obstruction. Intestinal contents which are normally propelled toward the colon are still kept in motion by the peristaltic contractions of the gut wall but since obstruction prevents their passage in the normal direction, it is only a matter of time until pressure increases sufficiently to cause a backward flow, and distention above the point of obstruction. Increasing distention stretches the muscles in the intestinal wall until they can no longer contract and finally compromises the blood supply and the viability of the wall itself. The other serious aspect of the situation is that a patient whose digestive system is in such disorder cannot avail himself even of water taken by mouth and must be supported by fluid and nourishment administered in other ways. The progressive improvement in handling such cases reflects improvement in tackling both of these problems.

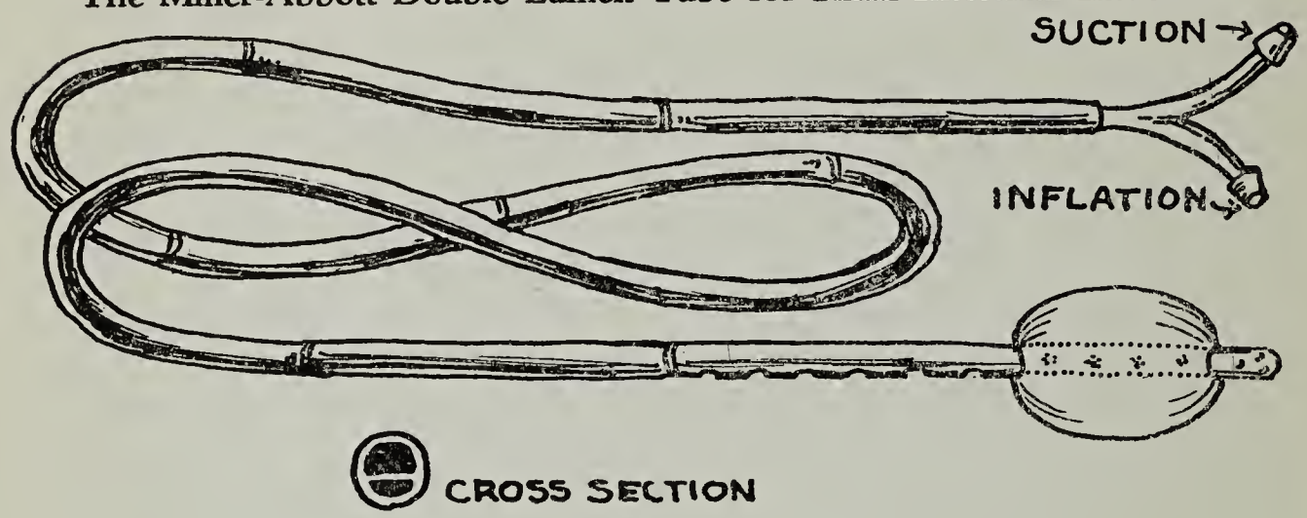

Immediate operation to provide an outlet for intestinal contents by introducing a tube through the intestinal wall used to be the rule. Even when surgery was limited to this emergency enterostomy the procedure was difficult and dangerous when performed upon a very distended intestine. Later, operation was deferred until the patient could be deflated as much as possible by gastric lavage. Then, by continuous gastric suction, it was found great relief could be obtained. These measures took advantage of the backflow of intestinal contents in the presence of obstruction. The delaying of operation not only contributed to rendering the surgical procedure less hazardous, it also gave time for improving the patient's general condition by the administration of fluids intravenously and subcutaneously.

Inflation of the small intestine by a tube introduced into the gastro-intestinal tract through the patient's nose or mouth and going down into the intestine itself and draining it so satisfactorily as to obviate the necessity for a purely palliative enterostomy was a logical next step. The trick was to persuade the sort of tip that can be coaxed through the pylorus of the stomach to move down the small intestine dragging a long tube behind it. Such a tip is too small to be gripped by the peristaltic contractions of the intestinal muscles and the inertia of such a tube is not to be overcome by the mere motion of fluids surrounding it. Not until Dr. W. Osler Abbott of Dr. Miller's clinic in Philadelphia devised the ingenious Miller-Abbott tube was the feat accomplished.

The Miller-Abbott tube is a double lumen rubber tube, size 16 French, ten feet long. It has a metal tip about the size of a duodenal bucket. At the end is a small thin rubber balloon which surrounds the tube and which can be inflated or deflated with air introduced or withdrawn through the smaller of the two passages which run the length of the tube. These two passages do not communicate with each other at any point. The larger one has several openings through the outer wall just back of the balloon but none into the balloon. The smaller passage is used solely for controlling the balloon, the larger for introducing into or withdrawing fluids or gas from the gastro-intestinal tract. When the balloon is in the small intestine if it is inflated with 20 cc to 40 cc of air it is engaged by the peristalsis of the wall and propelled onward in spite of the tube dragging behind it until it reaches the point at which the intestine is obstructed, and if no obstruction exists it is passed by rectum. The other end of the double tube is connected to a metal tube also of double lumen which splits to form a Y with separate arms that can be labelled "Balloon" and "Drainage."

The Miller-Abbott Double Lumen Tube for Small Intestinal Intubation

Preparation for and the initiation of treatment with this tube is essentially the same as for the procedure of a gastric lavage by a nasal lavage tube. Once the tube is swallowed continuous gentle suction can be applied to the stomach by attaching the tube marked "Drainage" to Wangensteen suction bottles. As the stomach is deflated it's normal tone returns and its normal muscular action carries the tip of the tube into the duodenum providing the tube is neither too taut to permit it nor so slack as to be doubled back in the stomach. The tubes are marked at 45 cm. the normal distance to the stomach, at 60 cm. the distance to the pylorus and at 75 cm. the distance to the bile ducts. When the tube is believed to have entered the duodenum the point can be proved by fluoroscope.

Beyond the 75 cm. point the tube is marked in feet to indicate how far it has progressed beyond the stomach. The balloon is inflated after the tip of the tube is well along in the duodenum. From this point on the patient can usually swallow about 5 or 6 inches per hour. The tube is never forced but is freed at regular intervals and the patient asked to swallow as much as he can easily. It is necessary to irrigate and aspirate the tube about once an hour to keep it patent. The length of time of intubation varies but ordinarily is from five to seven days.

While the tube is in the stomach the patient may drink clear fluids ad lib., and so derive genuine satisfaction although most of what he drinks is immediately sucked back from the stomach into a drainage bottle. When the tube passes into the small intestine the diet may become more solid but must be strictly low residue. An accurate record of intake and output must be kept, so that a proper fluid balance may be maintained by hypodermoclyses and infusions.

The Miller-Abbott tube offers a means of relieving distention in the stomach and intestine not by draining the whole distended area through a tube introduced at a fixed point into the gastro-intestinal tract, which is what a surgical enterostomy accomplishes; but by draining through a tube that moves, a tube that, inch by inch, noses its way through the whole length of distended bowel sucking as it goes.

The Miller-Abbott tube by relieving distention quickens the return of normal tone in the stomach and intestine. It also aids in determining the location and the nature of the lesion causing obstruction. When the tube appears to have reached the point of obstruction a small quantity of barium can be injected through it and a "spot" x-ray film of that specific area obtained. This is valuable particularly as barium in sufficient quantity for a complete gastro-intestinal series of x-rays cannot be given to an obstructed patient.

Small intestinal intubation by means of the Miller-Abbott tube has proved such a valuable aid in the treatment and diagnosis of small intestinal obstructions that in the Presbyterian Hospital it has become a routine procedure in the surgical management of all cases except those suspected of gangrene of the bowel. When gangrene is suspected immediate surgery is undertaken, and the mortality rate in such cases is extremely high. The exclusion of this group must be taken into consideration in appraising the low mortality rate reported in the series of cases treated by the Miller-Abbott method.

The nurse who cares for one of these patients is very busy. There is much nursing to do, much measuring, much recording, much manipulating of tubes and bottles, and usually a continuous infusion to watch. All this takes time and must be accurately done, but the work of the nurse is well done only in the measure in which she meets all of her patient's needs. At a time when to swallow anything is punishment, the patient swallows the Miller-Abbott tube because he has confidence in his doctor and because his need is great, but his first wish is to know how soon the tube will be withdrawn. He must be encouraged until such time as the work of the tube proves its benefit. Relief from vomiting and retching is more persuasive than words so it is not long before he himself appreciates the agent of relief.

Even then, however, he is not reconciled to the idea of the tube; he doesn't like it. The longer he has it the more it irritates his throat. When he is well again he will remember those who attended him in his illness as much for their understanding of his suffering as for their understanding of physics and chemistry of suction machines and fluid balances.

NURSING IN A LIBRARY

Beatrice Urban Elliott, '35

It was a surprise to me to learn that the New York Public Library at Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street desired to add a nurse to its staff. Interested in the possibility of a new field in nursing I called upon the director for an interview. Impressed with the plan of the Library I accepted their offer and have now been with them for more than a year. My initial program was simple, and required only the application of first aid to minor injuries of employees but it has grown to include phases of public health nursing and a limited amount of social work.

The primary duty is, of course, to render first aid to employees who are injured while at work. There are a greater number of first aid cases than one might expect. This is because a large group of employees is engaged in mechanical work such as printing, bookbinding, shipping, building maintenance. There is a well equipped first aid room on the main floor where treatment is given, in addition to which, there are cabinets of supplies located in strategic points throughout the building. If an injury is serious and requires the service of a doctor the patient is sent to the Grand Central Emergency Hospital which is two blocks away. The Library employees come under Workman's Compensation and injuries must be reported to the New York State Department of Labor.

The Library maintains a cafeteria for the staff. Arrangements must be made for all cafeteria employees to have a complete physical examination when they are accepted. Thereafter they are given periodic Wassermans.

Other duties to the staff include giving advice regarding general health, and giving treatment for minor injuries incurred outside of the Library. At this time of year colds and sore throats are a frequent complaint. Foreign particles in eyes are another.

Thousands of people use the facilities of the Library every day and there are frequent cases of injury and illness among these visitors. In such cases we assist in every way possible and when necessary call for an ambulance or the injured person's doctor. However, the Library does not attempt to offer direct medical treatment because it must avoid any legal responsibility.

This is another example of how the field of nursing has a definite place in a private organization, in this case a library. Employers have come to recognize that the health of their staff is of direct concern to them. The employee appreciates this service granted by his employer. It often gives him the opportunity to inquire about some sign or symptom that he might otherwise neglect. The nurse can do much to foster the understanding of illness and the ever growing interest in health and the prevention of disease.

1905

Dr. and Mrs. John D. Kernan again announce a marriage in their family. On October 21st John D. Kernan, Jr., was married to Ona Greene of County Dublin, Ireland.

1911

Meta Butler who served with Base Hospital No. 2 in France during the first world war was buried in the Arlington National Cemetery. Anne Jane Culgin, '02, Annie Thomas, '05, Violette Mercer Marberry, '13, and Janet Fish, '22 were present at the services. A wreath was sent from the Alumnae Association.

1913

Helen Latimer Bennett was heard over the W.A.B.C. Radio station on Miss Hawley's Women's Breakfast hour. Mrs. Bennett spoke very entertainingly of her life on Board the "MEDIA" an account of which was published in the October issue of the Quarterly Magazine.

1914

Sympathy is extended to Jane M. Durham in the loss of her brother Raymond E. Durham who died on April 2, 1939.

1916

Margaret Ashmun's picture appeared in the Newark Evening News on the occasion of the breaking of ground for the building of a new wing at the Orange Memorial Hospital of which she is the Director of Nursing.

1919

Margaret D. Blakeslee had a very interesting account in the "Long Islander" newspaper of the rescue of the survivors from the torpedoed freighter "Kafiristan" which she witnessed when she crossed the ocean on the "American Farmer", U. S. Lines in September.

1920

Eleanor Lee who again served as chairman of the League Institute in New York City is to be congratulated upon the success of the Institute, which had a record attendance of 3600 nurses.

Agusta Patton has been appointed to assist the National League of Nursing Education Committee on Accrediting, with field work.

1923

Mary D'Olyly writes from London that she is attending gas lectures and hopes soon to be of service in one of the hospitals.

1925

"The First Woman Coroner". These are the words heading a picture and an article about Mrs. George R. Shaw (Helen Kingsley). This article appeared in the Newark Evening News on December 8. Mrs. Shaw was named by Governor Moore of New Jersey to fill an unexpired term in Essex County. We hope that Mrs. Shaw will write us about her responsibilities in this new occupation for nurses.

1926

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. George T. Mortimer (Mary Louise Cleveland) in the loss of her mother who died on the 2nd of January.

1927

Alice F. Brackett has been appointed associate consultant in public health nursing Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor. From March to October of the past year Miss Brackett has been assistant director of the Commission for Study of Crippled Children in New York City.

Norma Zabriskie is majoring in Public Health Nursing in the School of Education at the University of Michigan.

Nancy Balis has a position in general duty nursing at the Pratt Diagnostic Hospital in Boston.

ALUMNAE MEETING

Alumnae and friends of Alumnae who were present at the quarterly meeting on November 16th shared a happy experience in hearing Mrs. Florence Peto, mother of Marjorie Peto, '26, talk about patchwork quilts. For many years Mrs. Peto's interest in quilts has led her deeper and deeper in study and search, through books and garrets, museums and farm houses until now she is a person of recognized authority on the subject, author of "Historical Quilts" recently published by the American Historical Society and an experienced and able lecturer.

Sturges Hall was gay with quilts brought in by Mrs. Peto and others. Many of these were excellent examples both of patchwork and of quilting. Some were invaluable pieces of Colonial hand-work. Others were of intimate interest because they had been made by mothers or grandmothers of persons present.

This bit of collaboration together with Mrs. Peto's kinship gave to the meeting the instant warmth which characterizes home talent affairs. And then she wasn't an amateur!

THE ALUMNAE SHOP DISPLAY

The Alumnae Shop Committee wishes to thank all the Alumnae and their friends for the interest and helpfulness they have shown in the Shop Christmas Display. This two day Display has been held annually in the Garden Room for six years. It should be interesting for you to see the results of the sales.

ALUMNAE DISTRIBUTING FUND

The total amount of the Distributing Fund for 1939 is less than it has been for the past three years, undoubtedly because no special appeal was made. Under these circumstances we are gratified to find that gifts have become a habit with so many of our graduates (290). The receipts include several generous gifts from friends, as well as the proceeds from the Quick Reference Book. This year's receipts bring the grand total for the Fund since it was established in 1934, to $10,719.00.

The personal campaigns of some of the class agents have brought an excellent response. The class of 1913 retires this year from the list of active classes with agents, and is to be congratulated upon its record.

The banners seem to belong to the following classes:

1904 for the largest per cent of donors.

1920 for the largest number of donors and the largest gift.

1922 for the largest average gift.

No new policies have been set up for distribution of the Fund, as indicated in the assignment.

The Committee entertained the class agents at dinner on November 16th, preceding the quarterly meeting of the Alumnae Association. Several interesting suggestions for the coming year were made on this occasion, and the committee is considering various plans of which more will be heard in the near future.

SCHOOL NEWS

MAXWELL HALL

All fall and winter Maxwell Hall has echoed and re-echoed to the strains of lovely music. The Glee Club has been very busy producing an operetta, — "Romance in Kashmir". It was a colorful and lovely thing. There are some outstandingly beautiful voices in the Glee Club, and there are some very graceful dancers. Four of the "ladies-in-waiting" did a swirling barefoot dance, the "bells on their fingers, and bells on their toes" making the music. The scenes were laid in India. Our orchestra, turbaned and pantalooned to match the scenery, made up a very important part of the play. The orchestra consisted of three violins, a cello, a trumpet, a clarinet, and Miss Phillips at the piano.

A new note was introduced into the singing of the Christmas Carols before the Christmas play. Miss Phillips had the Carols presented in the Medieval manner, — the singing unaccompanied except by string instruments, — three voices, a first violin, a second violin, and a cello. It was quite effective, new, and very lovely.

Among the music lovers at Maxwell Hall there has grown up a rather valuable collection of symphonies and operas, recorded by the master artists of our time. A series of musical evenings are being planned to be held in Sturges, where the records can be played to the best advantage.

We have been exceptionally fortunate this year in having so many opportunities to participate in outside activities. Mrs. Talmage gave us a box for six of the Philharmonic Concerts. The School of Nursing Committee has placed at our disposal two season tickets for the Columbia Institute of Arts and Science. These provide lectures and concerts every night except on University holidays.

Students at Maxwell Hall are always eager and quite charmed to use extra tickets, be they concert, lecture, opera, theatre. Right up to the "opening hour" someone can always be found, dressed and ready to dash out. In fact they wouldn't even mind being a little late.

For the first time in its history Maxwell Hall has its own Christmas tree growing outside the door. Last winter Miss Young, after a drive up through Westchester, mentioned that it would be very nice if we too had a Christmas tree on our front lawn. No sooner said than done. A tree was brought down from the Cooke estate and planted. This Christmas it stood resplendant at our door, atwinkle with lights and all frosted over with newly fallen snow.

The Class of '40 is having its Class Dinner in Sturges Hall, January 10th. This is now a tradition of three years standing. The Senior class is responsible for the program, the members of the Faculty are invited, there are good speeches and good food. The class gift is announced. Student Print Pins, the insignia of good and faithful work on the school paper, are presented. The class Will and Prophecy is read. It is a pleasant and memorable evening.

This December and January the first of the class of '40 finishes. These are the College graduates who have advanced credit. They make up that small but impressive group which will be the first to graduate under the banner of Columbia University. They will receive their degrees at the Columbia Commencement this summer.

The two center tennis Courts have been flooded, and both patients and staff are having a great deal of fun trying to recognize the skaters, especially the ones that bounce to a sitting position.

——OTHER NEWS——

ON November 1, 1939 Dr. George F. Cahill was appointed Professor of Urology, Director and Attending Surgeon of the Squier Clinic, and Attending Urologist to Babies Hospital to succeed Dr. J. Bentley Squier who recently resigned and was appointed Professor Emeritus.

Dr. Arnold Knapp, Professor of Ophthalmology at Columbia University from 1904 to 1928, and now Professor Emeritus, has closed his well-known hospital on Fifty-seventh street to combine his service with that of the Institute of Ophthalmology at the Presbyterian Hospital.

He is not only to act as consultant at the Institute, but is to carry on research work in the Department of Ophthalmology of Columbia University, made possible by the assets of the Knapp Hospital. This fund is to be set up as a memorial to his father, Dr. Herman Knapp, Professor of Ophthalmology from 1888 to 1902, for post-graduate work in ophthalmology.

Many of the members of the staffs of the various hospitals at the Center were privileged to meet Dr. Knapp and extend to him a hearty welcome at a tea given in his honor at the Institute of Ophthalmology on Wednesday January 10th.

The Nursing Profession has reason to be very grateful to Miss Sheila Dwyer for her efforts in presenting them with the recent publication "Modern Urology for Nurses", by Sheila M. Dwyer and Dr. George Fish with a Foreword by Miss Helen Young. The information which Miss Dwyer presents in this book fills a long felt need in Urological Nursing.

Dr. Dwight Fishwick was chosen this year by Dodd Mead and Co. to write their annual career book for older boys. The name of his book is "White Coats" which was favorably reviewed in the Sunday Tribune January 14th.

FINLAND

[Translated from a letter sent to Elna Saamanen, '30, from a friend in Ohja, Finland].

Present events are making this one of the most trying yet momentous periods in the history of our nation. We are praying continuously for divine guidance, since so often before God has helped us in our times of need!

I hope you have received the telegram notifying you of our escape from the bombardments of Helsinki; this will tell you of it in a little more detail.

When the first alarm rang, I ordered Meri, Anneli, Hilja, and our maid to come immediately to the living room, that being the easiest way to the street. But no sooner had the alarm sounded than a bomb dropped directly before me; the living room mirror fell upon me, and plaster from the ceiling and walls filled our noses, eyes, and mouths. The pressure was so great that breathing was practically impossible, and in addition the gas main had broken, filling the rooms with gas. We hurriedly ran to leave through the front doorway but were turned back by sheets of flame. We then went to the kitchen stairs with fire all about us and in some miraculous way got through. By the time we had reached the back yard, fire had completely enveloped the whole house. I was then thoroughly exhausted, falling to the ground and begging the others to leave me and save themselves. This they would not do, but dragged me with much difficulty across the street to an air-raid shelter in another house. We stayed there in that cold damp place for two hours.

When the "all-clear" signal was rung, we ran to Brieta's house. She was so kind, fixing for us hot food and drinks. It was fortunate we had remained calm, thereby being able to save ourselves. The only injury was one black and blue mark which the maid had received on her forehead. We had had no time to reach for our handbags in which we kept all your addresses. Also, all my jewelry which had been put in them for safe keeping, in case we would ever be forced to leave in a hurry, was left behind. As far as I can see, nothing of our property or money remains — but we don't worry over that!

If only our country and its brave men and women can be saved —that is the main thing! We can all start again right at the beginning as our forefathers have had to so frequently do during the last centuries!

It broke my heart when I went back after the bombing to see what was left; to find one of our neighbors searching for her sixteen year old boy among the ruins. The poor boy had become lost in the house and had burned to death.

We don't know what has happened to all our relatives. Esther is alone in a six floor apartment house — one of those many women making up the air-raid patrols who watch for enemy planes and sound the alarms.

Finally we located a private car in Helsinki, by means of which we were able to travel to Ohja, arriving there at four in the morning. We found the house already crowded with refugees from Helsinki.

We plan to stay here indefinitely, keeping busy with knitting and sewing for the soldiers. We hope all will turn out well; the Lord will not desert us in our great trouble.

Don't worry too much about us but care for yourselves; one cannot begin to tell how many responsibilities you all may have when the war is ended.

Will you write to us as soon as possible? With best regards to all.

A PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE IN FT. LUPTON, COLORADO

FLORENCE BURNETT, '35

[Excerpts from a letter to Miss Young.]

I have been here for almost two months now and am enjoying every minute of this valuable experience. I am located in Ft. Lupton, Colorado, a small town of 1500 people. A majority of the inhabitants here are either Japanese or Mexicans and though not very intelligent they are most interesting to work with. They don't know much about health or cleanliness but are eager to do what the nurse suggests if only to please her. Our unit here is a demonstration unit and is the only one in Weld County that carries on a delivery program. Believe me it is a bit frightening to be called at 3 A.M. by a doctor who gives you directions such as these — "10 miles west—21.2 miles east and it is the brown shack on the south side of the road." It is very different from New York to say the least. We have on an average of 15 to 20 deliveries a month which is a very good average since this service has only been in existence here since April. We have no bedside nursing program except for our first day post-partum. I miss this part of nursing very much but the educational work we do is most interesting. We carry on a school nursing program and I have thirteen schools that I am responsible for. I talked to the 7th and 8th grade girls yesterday on personal cleanliness and have a class of adults to whom I am teaching the Red Cross course in "Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick." All this is so different from what Henry Street does that I shall always be in debt to them for appointing me to this year's experience.

The scenery is magnificent and the mountains are such beauties. They all have their winter caps of snow on now and below timberline their dresses are in gorgeous shades of yellows, gold and rust. I have never seen anything so beautiful and breath-taking. We have taken several trips into the mountains but soon the roads will be closed because of snow. The weather here is wonderful, ranging from 40 degrees at night to 70 degrees during the day.

I am out here alone and there are many times when I wish some member of my family were here with me. However everyone has been very friendly and I am taking a WPA course in wood carving at Greeley. This is very interesting as interesting as the town in which the class is held. It is named after Horace Greeley and his home is still standing there. The state college is there and perhaps in the Spring I shall continue to work for my B.S. as I have only about 40 more credits to get.

I attended the second Public Health Convention at Colorado Springs last week and heard many excellent speakers. This was the first convention I have ever attended but hope my name will be on the list for many more. Public Health is in its pioneer stage having been in practice here for only two years. There is a lot to be done and I feel it a privilege to be an assistant to its progress no matter how small my contribution may be.

I must stop now for I have to memorize a poem that I am to give at our annual Red Cross Roll Call luncheon next Saturday at Greeley. If I disliked talking to groups before I came out here, I certainly won't mind it when I get back though I still get very nervous before I start.

The only reason why I would like to be in New York for next summer is for my first reunion. I had so looked forward to that but they shall here from me and much of my love will come with that message.

YACHT "L'INSOUMISE" VISITS RIO

ANNA TOWNSEND PYLE, '38

The Yacht "L'Insoumise" (translated "unconquerable") of Noroton, Conn. U. S. A., left Poole, England, on July 10th bound for New York via Tangiers, Madeira, and Bermuda. Owing to unforeseen difficulties and the hurricane season, the route was changed to include Dakar, French West Africa, and Rio. On leaving England the crew included:

Gordon Pyle, Owner and Captain—New York City
Zene Pyle, 1st Mate—New York City
Raymond Montgomery, Quartermaster—New York City
John McMahon, Quartermaster—New York City
Martino Hanigan, Commissary—New York City
A. Maxwell, R.N., Chief Medical Officer—London, England
Anne Pyle, R.N., 2nd Medical Officer—Far Hills, N.J., U.S.A.
Z. A. Pyle, Apprentice—New York City
Two seamen and one chef.

The boat is an old Belgian Pilot ship, which has spent many years off the Belgian coast, but has never cruised to the American waters before.

The trip on the whole was very calm. Owing to sickness, several of the crew were changed. A Spanish sailor was picked up in Vigo, Spain, and an Arab Chef in Tangiers: consequently there were three languages (besides English) on board. The captain acted as interpreter, engineer, electrician and navigator. At Madeira, Zene Pyle, A. Maxwell, and Z. A. Pyle took the steamer to Rio.

The long hop of the trip started from Dakar, which port the ship had entered the night that war was declared. It was rather exciting in the port as there was much commotion going on — troops leaving, boats waiting for convoys, and blackouts every night.

The boat left Dakar on September 13th for the 54-day jaunt. The doldrums stood up to their name and there was hardly a breath of air. Then the southwest monsoon proved to be a dream, and it was not until the tenth of October that the trade winds started to blow the ship on her way. By this time there had been a rationing of water for necessities only, and a careful rationing of the food. However, there was a surplus of both thanks to the first mate. No boats were viewed for forty-three days, and there was great excitement on October thirty-first when one came into view.

The boat being 72 feet long and 21 feet wide, the activities were slightly limited. However, the crew managed to keep themselves busy. Exercises were held in the afternoons, and usually a card game in the evenings. Books were read — the type that one always meant to "read" if one had the time. The captain played the accordion in spare moments — which were few and far between. As for major catastrophes there were none — dynamos not working, sails ripping, and pumps being temperamental being the chief difficulties. One of the most crushing blows was to come into the "delightful" Rio fog. After fifty-two days, one was rather anxious to see "Terra Firme".

There is no question of being scared on such a small boat. We would all trust the boat and the captain anywhere, and no ocean liner can compete with the charm of sailing throughout moonlit nights and balmy blue days.

EDWARD STEPHEN HARKNESS

In Memoriam

EDWARD STEPHEN HARKNESS

Manager 1910-1940

Died January 29, 1940

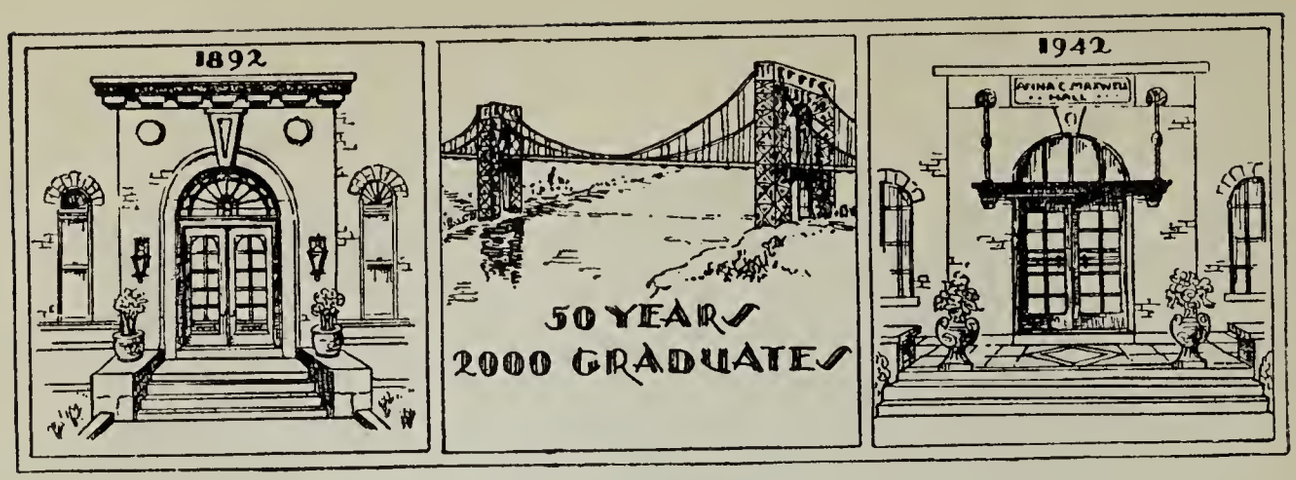

THE death of Edward Stephen Harkness has removed from this Board a man of genuineness, simplicity and greatness of soul,—a source of inspiraton and sound judgment, a guiding hand that led ever toward the heights, despite obstacle and hardship.

More than twenty years ago when the Presbyterian Hospital was still located on Park Avenue and the affiliation with Columbia but begun he sensed the Medical Center as it stands today and more,—as it will grow to be in usefulness and strength. More than other men was he gifted to grasp the future. Each forward step that we have made is impressed with his vision and fortified with his material support. Together they represent a completion essentially his own.

It would be presumptuous to enumerate his many and great contributions to the institutions allied at the Medical Center. His innate modesty shrank before worldly considerations. His concern was with spiritual values. His accomplishments stand eloquently enshrined in the multitude of lives made possible, made better, made happier by his foresight and generosity.

Edward Stephen Harkness, leader, benefactor, friend, we, your associates, bid you good-bye. Your presence is gone. The inspiration of your life remains.

THE AMERICAN SCANDINAVIAN FIELD HOSPITAL

IT is but a little more than two decades ago that doctors and nurses organized companies for overseas services during the Great War. Now once again a Volunteer Unit has sailed to aid war-stricken areas in Europe. This Unit is called the American Scandinavian Field Hospital, and was made possible by the Swedish nobility in residence in New York and by the donations of other interested individuals through the Finnish Relief Fund. Among the thirty volunteers are Dr. Dwight Fishwick, Director, Delphine Wilde, Head Nurse of the Unit, Theodora Westcott and Vivian Olsen, all Presbyterian Hospital graduates, and Dr. Thomas Dixon, a former interne in surgery at Presbyterian Hospital. In addition, there are three doctors, fourteen nurses, one X-ray technician, six ambulance drivers, a secretary and a cook.

The American Scandinavian Field Hospital was organized and the volunteers selected before peace came to Finland. However, its purpose is not changed, for reconstruction work will be done among the many thousands of injured soldiers, civilians and refugees in Finland. In the event of further hostilities in any Scandinavian country, the Unit is fully equipped to become a Field Hospital. They have taken with them beds, X-ray machines, generators and all available modern equipment for emergency surgery and treatment of the newly injured. Indeed, several dozen beautiful red candles were included, in preparedness for possible difficulty with the generator!

The Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company donated a six months' supply of food for the Unit (and patients, if necessary) complete with menus. The menus were arranged by the A. & P. magazine, "Woman's Day", and offer a daily change rotating every two weeks.

As well as medical equipment and food, the Unit provided each member with a steamer trunk and duffle bag, into which must be packed summer and winter underclothes, uniforms, butcher aprons, socks, mittens, raincoats, sweaters, boots and many other articles. Nothing is forgotten, not even a toothbrush! One suitcase was allowed each member for personal belongings. Most of these suitcases were only slightly smaller than the trunks!

So, ready, willing and able to assume their new responsibilities and resplendently dressed in their well-tailored gray gaberdine uniforms, overseas caps and trench coats, the entire unit met at the pier of the Swedish American Line, to sail on the S. S. Drottingholm on March 26th, 1940. Although the boat's destination is Sweden and the Unit's Finland, they will disembark at Bergen, Norway. The necessity for this change is due to the fact that the United States Government refused to issue passports to Sweden, as the Unit would have had to sail through known mined areas. Hence, they will travel from Bergen to Stockholm by rail (they're hoping to do it by daylight) and secure transportation across the Gulf of Bothnia. Where they will be stationed in Finland will not be known until their arrival.

Many friends and faces that were once familiar at Presbyterian Hospital were there to see them off and to wish them the luck so fine a company deserves. Great excitement prevailed until after nine P. M., and then the crowd of well-wishers began to diminish, as the boat was already five hours past scheduled sailing time. She was still being loaded with the remainder of the Unit's equipment.

Nevertheless, some stayed on, and for all our being tired and hungry, it was much better staying there those last few hours with the friends we so admire, than to eat and rest. It must have been midnight when the Drottingholm finally started down the Hudson River. I'm sure I don't know, for here we were, two members of the party that had rushed to be at the dock before four P. M., sitting and talking as the ship began her voyage!

A passenger came into the lounge and exclaimed, most fortunately in a loud voice, about the beauty of the New York skyline as we sailed by it at night. In retrospect, I feel that to my weary mind this message came by freight, but I don't think it took me five seconds to reach deck and join the passengers in their admiration of the spectacle created by the lights of the great city. Then I created a dreadful commotion, such was my urge to get off the boat before I was put in chains! I looked over the rail and for a moment contemplated the cold, bleak waters and the distance to the shore. The Empire State Building never seemed so far away! Happily, a lone tug was returning to its berth for the night and responded to our call. This saved us a long trip to Ambrose Lightship and return with the pilot. As the tug drew along side, we bid a hasty farewell to our friends and crawled over the tarpaulin covered cargo on the forward deck. I looked down what seemed a sheer expanse comparable only to the Grand Canyon, but in a moment a rope was tied around me and "over I went", groping for a ladder and finally the deck of the tug. I was followed directly by my fellow stowaway.

Perhaps it was best to give them this unintentionally exciting farewell. All I know is that it was a great deal pleasanter to ride the length of the boat and back again with flashlights playing on the passengers leaning over the rails and to call out our goodbyes across the water, than to stand at the end of the dock waving a drooping handkerchief as the boat sailed down the bay. I rather imagine that as we sailed off with our feet on the gunwales of the tug, we must have looked not unlike Napoleon's voyage to St. Helena.

And so our first American Unit has gone, filled with the courage and ambition to do a great work. New duties and adjustments will keep them busy, but not so busy that they will not think fondly and frequently of Presbyterian Hospital.

In conclusion, may I add the address at which they may be reached, so that you may send them bits of news and cheer, which will be most welcome?

The following news of the Unit appeared in the Evening Sun on Saturday April 13, 1940. The American Scandinavian Field Hospital unit which arrived in Stockholm on April 7 and was to have done six months' duty in Finland, will leave Stockholm, Sweden, within forty-eight hours for an undisclosed point in Norway. The decision to go to Norway instead of to Finland, Mr. Maverick, representative of the Finnish Relief Fund in Helsinki, informed Mr. Hoover, whose organization was one of the unit's sponsors, was made "because of the lack of medical and surgical personnel in Norway." The Finnish government has released the unit from its moral obligation to assist Finland and the Swedish military authorities are co-operating with the Norwegian government in conveying the unit across the frontier.

By telephone to New York Times from Stockholm, Sweden, April 20:—

"Unit still waiting in Saerna, Sweden. Advised by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, the American Minister to Norway, against crossing the border at that point."

NURSES IN FINLAND

[Excerpts from a letter from Kyllikki Pohjala, an internationally known Finnish Nurse who is editor of the Finnish Nurses Journal and is also a member of Parliament. The letter is dated February 10.]

All our nurses here fulfill a really hard day's work. Many of us have already fallen as well in the frontier ambulances as victims of air-raids in the regular war hospitals. During the last fortnight the enemy has thrown bombs particularly against hospitals provided with Red Cross marks. Many of the nurses have also lost all of their belongings through the bombing. I received a tragic letter yesterday from a nurse who had been at work for 30 years and intended settling down in a small hut, that she had bought with the savings of these years of toil. Now this also was destroyed during the air-raids and the one concerned was left even without her clothes. Besides this, her sister became mentally ill. This is only one of the letters that I receive every day.

Without fear, nevertheless all our nurses stand at their posts. Not one has left her place.

We all of us in Finland fight for the highest values of our existence. In case we are not allowed to live in a free country, our lives would not be worth living.

THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL RED CROSS GROUP OF TORONTO

AT our meetings we average between thirteen and sixteen persons; meet every Tuesday; and are conscientious about staying full time—10 A.M. to 4 P.M. We work in very pleasant surroundings, the Primary Room of the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church which we are allowed to use, being a delightfully bright and cheerful room. We have had great praise for both the quality and quantity of our work. And since we are now delivering our dressings directly to the Toronto General Hospital, where Miss Gunn is having them packed, sterilized and boxed for shipping, and since we have been asked to speed up our production as the need for dressings has increased, we are beginning to realize what an important group we are. During the month of March our small group made 12,400 dressings, using 80 bolts of gauze (100 yds. in a bolt); 84 lbs. of absorbent cotton; 43 lbs. of non-absorbent cotton.

At our February 27th meeting we stopped work at 3 P.M. and went to the Toronto General Hospital, at Miss Gunn's invitation, to observe the method of packing for sterilization and for shipping overseas of the dressings which we are supplying. We were received by Miss Gunn and Miss Locke, and were taken directly to the sterilizing room, where we saw dressings sterilized and waiting to be put into their drums, drums soldered, and drums put into wooden boxes for shipping overseas. Then we went on to see the bags being packed with dressings, (bags perfect in every detail, designed by Miss Gunn) after which they are done up in squares of factory cotton for sterilizing. Miss Gunn and Miss Locke then took us to the Nurses' Home, where we had a sumptuous tea before a lovely fire in a charming room. Miss Gunn and Miss Locke wore their P.H. pins in our honour; and of course you know that as a group we all wear our pins.

In conclusion, ours is a very happy group, we work together congenially, and every day someone mentions the fact that although we all work with other organizations, the Tuesdays with P.H. are happiest of all, and we have come to the conclusion that it's something we got at P.H. that is deep in the hearts of us all.

GLADYS LUMBERS MARA, '17.

[The editor has asked Gladys Lumbers Mara, '17, secretary of the Toronto group, to send reports of their activities. In one of her letters Mrs. Mara said "We expect to carry on indefinitely as a useful group of the Alumnae Association of the School of Nursing of the Presbyterian Hospital, something Miss Maxwell suggested many times and it has taken two wars to put into effect."]

Are there not enough alumnae in other cities to form "P.H." groups?

WAR — 1939

Leslie Bell, '23

RECENTLY I visited the wife of a former Montrealer now living here. She is in charge of a Women's Voluntary Transport Corps the members of which drive their own cars and pay for their own petrol while giving their services. She introduced me to the 'orderly room' where her staff were on call for any conceivable sort of transport duty not allotted elsewhere. This includes taking A.R.P. (Air Raid Precautions) observers to their posts every four hours — quite pleasant I thought as I watched them driving off in the noon sunshine; not so pleasant at four A.M. in pitch blackness on a wet night! The fine work they did during evacuation was described to me by the very pretty young woman in charge of a house (formerly a boy's school) where some fifty evacuated women were billetted. "After seeing off the last of the boys I had gone to the shops to buy a picnic meal for my friend and myself when someone came running to ask if I could return at once and prepare billets for fifty evacuated women! Outside the house a string of cars and lorries were drawn up and about thirty young women waiting to be received. We did it, thanks to the wonderful work of the Transport Corps. How they worked, moving furniture, fetching people from the station, making beds and even cooking. And finally we had a meal and a bed for every one. Next morning at six more arrived until this house held fifty-five expectant mothers. Every single thing has been on a voluntary basis, doctor, nurse, assistants—all" she finished proudly, leading the way to the very latest arrival a few hours old lying in an immaculate bassinnette in a primrose coloured room!

A much grimmer aspect of the present situation confronted me at the First-Aid Post set up in a former Alms House which I visited. Within the narrow entrance — a mere slit between two thick walls of protecting sand-bags — lights were heavily screened and in the low, cement-floored rooms complete preparations had been made for Air Raid casualties. Racks of anti-gas clothing; steel helmets; de-contamination material; surgical supplies — they were all there just as described to us at A.R.P. lectures last June when we still said "IF WAR should come!"

In one room there was complete preparation for operating should the patient's condition be such that immediate removal to hospital could not be carried out. Further along was a section for uninjured, gas-contaminated cases, which must be treated separately from those not contaminated. The removal of clothing from the contaminated person is a highly specialized maneuver much like hospital surgical 'technique' in keeping the field sterile during an operation. The little student nurse with a huge Red Cross on her apron bib explained to me that she knew little of the inside working of a Post as her duty would be in the ambulance bringing in the casualties.

The shop windows are full of warm clothing. They remind me of the Hudson's Bay stores in Edmonton and The Pas—most unlike the 'tweedie' autumnal look of smart London shops in peace time. Domestic air raid shelters cannot well be heated because of the danger of explosion and the need to conserve oxygen. Hence the 'Siren Suit' advertised by one firm, complete with zipper fastening and a becoming 'cowl' hood—like the kind of thing we put the pre-school children into for romping in the snow. A number of women have taken to slacks.

The darkness of the streets at night is something terrific. Curbs, trees, gate posts are coming out in zebra stripes and one enterprising man has invented some little brooch-like gadgets whereby pedestrians in the streets may be better distinguished thru the blackness. The device can be pinned on the lapel or on the hat and consists of a light zinc plate rendered luminous and also waterproof. In the day time it shows white but in pitch blackness it emits a blue glow which can be seen from a distance. The pillar boxes and hydrants are breaking out into lemon green —a specially prepared paint which develops red spots if gas has been dropped in the vicinity.

The unfailing English sense of humour comes out in such jokes as these which appeared in a big daily. An R.A.F. pilot returning from a "Pamphlet" raid was asked how he got back so soon. "Did you drop all the pamphlets?" inquired his superior officer. "Yes, sir". "You untied the string round the bundles before you threw them?" "No—sir. I just put them over the side as they were". "But you might have killed someone!" from the horrified O.C.

Up in the Midlands the Trappist monks have had to shave their beards in order to fit their gas-masks properly. Many of them have had to leave their chosen life in the monastery to take up parish work, relieving the many chaplains who have gone to the front. In ordinary life many inconveniences are uncomplainingly born. The Radium Commission and other holders have caused their radium to be deposited in places of safety in view of the great danger which would exist if radium were dispersed by high explosives. This means that cancer patients will be deprived of radium treatment—a grissly development of war adjustments.

Last Sunday I attended a Children's Church Service where many evacuated children were present. The speaker was speaking of cheerfulness—"What do we wear on our faces? he inquired, expecting someone would say "A smile". "A gas-mask" came the prompt reply.

There is ample time for reflection in the inky blackness of the trains, where no lights are allowed inside. Next me coming down from London the other evening sat a shabbily-dressed, elderly man. We spoke about the war, "I don't see how we are going to pay for it" he said anxiously; "we've not finished paying for the last one". There is an utter conviction in the heart of all Englishmen that one must keep one's word and pay one's debts. The spirit in which the British face the catastrophe which has overtaken them was dramatically expressed over the wireless a few evenings ago when one of the crew of a terribly damaged submarine told us of his experiences.

In a quiet, unemotional voice he described how with periscope blown away, wireless smashed and engines disabled "Our lieutenant told us he had decided to get to the surface if we could, and fight to the death. So we made our preparations."

[This article was sent to the editor by one of our Canadian alumna Sara Leslie Bell, '23 who is now in London doing "oddments of work, chiefly journalistic."]

"FIRST DEGREES"

ON March 5th, 1940, at 4:30 P.M., in the Faculty Room in the School of Medicine, Dean Rappleye met the first graduates of our University course in nursing, to present them with their Columbia University diplomas. Ten of the thirteen graduates were present, escorted by Miss Young and Miss Conrad. The Dean commented briefly and informally upon the significance of the occasion.

All of the students with advanced time credit in our first class (1940) completed the course before February 28, 1940, so their B.S. degrees bear that date.

Present were:

Jean W. Bennett
Regina A. Driscoll
Ann R. Falconer
Mabel Foster
Virginia H. Maxwell
Elvira Mayo
Elizabeth D. Nace
Pearl Phillips
Martha L. Reis
Marion C. Weimer

Absent were:

Isabelle M. Betz (now Mrs. Brex, on her honeymoon)
Frances Martin (in California)
Helen J. Walker (in Florida)

These graduates will attend the Columbia University Commencement Exercises on June 4, 1940, as well as our own Graduation in the Presbyterian Hospital Garden on June 6th, when the Hospital diplomas will be presented.

We extend our sincere congratulations and good wishes to these young graduates.

NURSES' HOUSE, BABYLON

On April 2nd, a perfect Spring day, a notable event took place at Nurses' House, Babylon, Long Island—the "Breaking of Ground" for the new wing which is to be called the Eleanor R. Belmont wing. About sixty people participated in this ceremony, including members of the Nurses' House Committee, members of Cobble Court Inc. and invited guests. Miss Alta Dines, Director of Nurses' House and others spoke, songs were sung and a delicious luncheon was served. Now we are looking forward anxiously to July 15th when the new wing is to be completed.

Since January Cobble Court Inc., Auxiliary to Nurses' House has sponsored several benefits to help raise the $50,000 needed to build the new wing. A very successful benefit performance of an "Historical Pageant of the Red Cross" was presented by the student nurses in the Class of 1941 at Anna C. Maxwell Hall on February 20, 1940. The proceeds were $500.

The pageant was prepared by the students in the Class of 1941 as a class project during their History of Nursing Course in January. A brief outline of the scenes is published in this issue but space does not permit including the narrative script or the details of the production.

"America the Beautiful" sung by the audience.

The 1940 Biennial The 1940 Biennial Convention of the three National Nursing Organizations will be held in historic Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 12-18. Some of the attractions of the city and its lovely countryside for convention-goers are Independence Hall with its famous Liberty Bell, Congress Hall where the first Congress of the United States was held, the Betsy Ross House, the Edgar Allen Poe House, beautiful Valley Forge, and a handsome Municipal Auditorium.

The Auditorium, incidentally, seats over 13,000 persons comfortably in its main hall and has fifty-two additional rooms for smaller meetings. Special buses will ply between the Auditorium and the hotels, and taxicabs will serve conventionites at reduced rates.

The Headquarters hotel for the A.N.A. and N.L.N.E. will be the Benjamin Franklin; for the N.O.P.H.N. the Bellevue-Stratford. A most interesting and stimulating program has been planned.

"P.H." will be well represented, both among the delegates and the speakers on the program. Miss Young would like to hear from all "P.H." graduates who expect to attend the convention, giving convention address, to be sure of 100% attendance at the "P.H." luncheon which is planned for Thursday, May 16th. Miss Young will be staying at the Hotel Benjamin Franklin.

Scholarship and Loan Funds As an Alumnae Association we are bending every effort toward increasing the Emma Baker Kennedy Scholarship Fund. It now supplies scholarships covering tuition for full-time study to two of our graduates each year. While we realize how fortunate we are to have this amount, it is by no means adequate to meet the legitimate requests from our alumnae.

In mentioning other funds available for graduate study, we should like to call attention to the Harmon Foundation definition of the two types of financial aid:

"Scholarship—a beneficial grant to a student meeting certain stipulations but being thereby under no monetary repayment obligation."

"Student Loan—a grant of money to a student, to be returned within a specified time or at the option of the borrower, with or without a fixed rate of interest."[1]

Isabel Hampton Robb Scholarships

Seven scholarships of $300 each, are offered to graduate nurses wishing to prepare for educational or administrative work in schools of nursing or in public health.

[1] New York State Nurse, April, 1940, page 49.

To be eligible, candidates must meet college entrance requirements; have been active members of the American Nurses' Association for one year previous to making application; and have had one year of experience as instructor or administrator in the hospital or public health field.

Scholarships are not given for summer courses.

Application for the scholarships should be made as soon as possible, and must be made by April 20th. For information, or application blanks, write to Mrs. Mary C. Eden, Secretary-Treasurer, The Fairfax, 43rd and Locust Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

M.I.T. Scholarship [2]

A scholarship in health education, amounting to $600 (which covers the cost of tuition for one year's work, September to June) is offered by the Massachusetts Institute Technology, Cambridge, Mass., to Public Health Nurses who hold their B.S. degrees.

Anne L. Hansen Loan Fund—Any registered nurse who has been a member of the New York State Nurses' Association for one year may apply to this fund for aid in furthering her education. Individual loans may not exceed $250. The blanks for applying may be secured from Miss Emily J. Hicks, 152 Washington Street, Albany, N. Y.

Lydia E. Anderson Instructors' Loan Fund—Instructors in schools of nursing in New York State may apply for assistance from this fund with their graduate study programs. The fund is administered by the New York State League of Nursing Education, through a committee of which the chairman is Miss Isabel Stewart, Teachers College, Columbia University.

Placement Agency For Public Health Nurses Approved By N.O.P.H.N.

N.O.P.H.N.'s Advisory Committee on Vocational counseling gave its official approval to the public health nursing placement service of the Nursing Bureau of Manhattan and Bronx, on December 28, 1939. Public health nurses seeking positions, therefore, and public health nursing administrators seeking members for their staffs, now have two approved placement agencies to turn to for help: Nurse Placement Service, 8 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago, and the Nursing Bureau of Manhattan and Bronx, 205 East 42nd Street, New York City.

[2] This scholarship was awarded to Pauline Christie, '36, for the 1938-39 college year.

THIS NATIONAL JOB

DOROTHY DEMING, '20, General Director of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing

IT is 8:45 on Monday morning. The staff of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing is assembling for work on the eighth floor of Rockefeller Center — just across the corridors from the American Nurses' Association and the National League of Nursing Education. Ten executives, seven of us public health nurses, and twenty clerks — only not all ten of us are here today. One nurse is out in Illinois visiting the University of Chicago where a new program of study in public health nursing is under way, one is attending a state meeting in Rhode Island, but the rest of us are in the New York office.

The work of our organization is carried on through field visits, office interviews, correspondence and committee work and consists in answering all sorts of questions about public health nursing, setting standards for service and administration and promoting them, making studies and in general representing and interpreting public health nursing to everyone all over the United States.

That sounds pretty vague I'm sure, so let's look at the mail-box since my own usual schedule is to answer mail for an hour or so before the appointments for the day start.

Here is a letter from a public health nurse in Kentucky who wants to know what records she should keep in the preschool conference she has just started, another asks for salary scales of public health nurses in cities of 75,000 (this is referred to our Statistical Service where yearly studies are made of salaries), a school nurse asks for help in securing outlines for health subjects for a group of high school girls, here is a letter from a health officer asking what stand we would advise taking with regard to bedside nursing care being included in a health department program.

Here are three letters asking for reading material, one requesting our loan folder of annual reports, two for advice in selecting jobs, and one from a president of a visiting nurse association in Massachusetts asking for our charges in making a study of their nurses' work. I do not answer many of these—in fact, may not even see them until they are answered—as they are routed directly to the staff members for reply. Problems, national developments, Board matters, and everything relating to money raising (aside from memberships) come directly to me.

By ten o'clock my letters (we answer in all about 600 a month) are done and my first appointment due. It is today a lady from a Day Nursery who wants to find out how to arrange for public health nursing service for daily inspection of the children in the nursery and consultant service to workers and parents. At eleven I have a committee meeting to plan for the program of the Biennial Convention, at noon a luncheon appointment with a nurse from the West Coast who is studying at Teachers College this winter and wants help in planning a statewide program for lay people to interest them in citizens' committees for county health services. The secretary of the lay members' section of the NOPHN joins in this luncheon. At two o'clock a young man comes in to present a radio skit in which he wants help. He wants a "district nurse" in it. He is referred to the editor of our magazine, PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING. From three to four we have a staff conference to plan the field trips for the next six months and at four I go over the accumulated letters—incoming and unsigned outgoing. Among these I find several new problems—one from an industrial nurse, one from a rural Negro nurse in Alabama, and an invitation to present a paper at the National Social Work Conference. All these can wait until tomorrow. Then a brief conference with the business manager on the cost of a new typewriter and off for home by five o'clock.

Just an ordinary day—no trips to Washington to see the Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service, though we do that once in a while, no airplane flight to Chicago as a first hop to the West Coast, no tears from a discouraged nurse who can't find a position in public health because she is not qualified, no emergency information called for which might turn the office upside down. Just an ordinary day trying to carry out the "NOPHN's" purposes in life which are:

"To foster, develop and promote public health nursing activities throughout the country.

To serve in an advisory capacity to all those engaged or interested in public health nursing.

To serve as a standard-making body in policies and practices of public health nursing.

To secure adequate preparation and educational opportunity for the public health nurse—for her job and in her job.

To promote understanding of the service of public health nursing among federal departments, national, state and local health and social agencies and the general public."

Interesting? Fascinating if one had only time to realize it. Difficult? Of course; otherwise it would not be interesting. Challenging? Well, what do you think with 23,000 public health nurses expecting us to help them!

DIRECTOR OF THE NORFOLK CITY UNION OF THE KING'S DAUGHTERS, INC.

It is with great pleasure that we hear of the appointment of Elizabeth Mackenzie as director of the Norfolk City Union of The King's Daughters, Inc. Elizabeth Mackenzie, a graduate of the University of Toronto entered the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing in the class of 1920. Advanced work in public health was completed at Teachers College, Columbia University followed by field work in Talledega County, Alabama. There, she later served as assistant director to Jennie Marriner, director of the Bureau of Nursing with the Alabama State Department of Health. During 1925 and 1926 Miss Mackenzie was on the staff of the Philadelphia Visiting Nurse Service and in 1927 became associate director of the Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service. In 1936-1937 she assumed the acting directorship and in 1938 due to her wide experience in many parts of the country became vocational advisor of the Nurse Placement Service in Chicago when that group was extended to cover the public health personnel.

The Norfolk City Union of The King's Daughters, Inc. is one of the oldest and strongest community health agencies in the South. This service, begun forty-four years ago under the able leadership of Miss Edith Nason, when the need for community nursing was first recognized, has advanced rapidly from a small venture to a large and active organization whose program is varied and fourfold in nature. It consists of a visiting nurse service, a large children's clinic, a Maternity Center and in cooperation with the Health Department it maintains fourteen health stations.

Miss Mackenzie is to follow and carry on the work of Blanche Webb, an intelligent and vigorous leader who, during her eighteen years of service increased and expanded the work of the group. In the appointment of Miss Mackenzie to carry on this service, we feel that it is an honor for her and for our Alumnae and we wish her every success in her new venture.

"ALONE AT LAST"

EMMA TALLMAN OLSON, '28

For the entertainment of the alumnae who did not see the March issue of the magazine "Baby Talk" we have reprinted a portion of the article in which Mrs. Olson describes, with perhaps some poetic license, her first 40 hours at home with her young daughter.

By permission of Baby Talk Magazine

WITH a firm step I entered the nursery to find my baby sleeping peacefully. It was really an effort on my part to disturb her now that she was quiet at last. Courageously I bore her to the bathroom and began the disrobing. This took so long for some reason that by the time she was in a state to be dunked the water was too cold. Clutching her with one hand and arm I endeavored to right the situation with the other. At last I was satisfied with the temperature and fearfully I lowered my now screaming infant upon the gadget meant to keep babies from drowning while inexperienced mothers use both hands and feet to bathe them.

First wash her face, I told myself, reaching for the washcloth. But how bathe a face which seemed to be made up entirely of a mouth widely opened. I'll probably drip water into her mouth, I thought to myself, and choke her but at least while she is choking she can't cry and so maybe it is all for the best. Strange to say, as soon as I began to wash where I suspected her eyes might be, the noise stopped and looking down I found my child contentedly sucking on a corner of the washcloth. The thought of "germs" flashed through my mind and was gone. Far be it from me to create another outburst if a clean, wet cloth would amuse her. So leaving it as a stopper, I cautiously reached behind me and snatched another cloth from the towel rack. Too late, I discovered that the shirt I had carefully placed there was now dripping wet. No matter, it would do. I carefully explored the anatomy of her ears with a view to cleaning them. Nobody can say that I didn't try. Attempting to wash her neck when as far as I could see she had none, was easy compared with her hands. I caught glimpses now and then of strange material in both her palms but to save my life with only two hands I could not keep her fingers open, her head out of water and at the same time wash out her tightly grasped treasures. I found this same problem confronting me when I attempted her toes. It was too much for me. Perhaps I could ask someone to sneak up on her while she was eating and deprive her of her prized possessions. My immediate problem was how to lift her, dripping, from the water and place her on top of the "bath table." "So easy" the clerk had said, "Just hold the baby in both hands and push down on this pedal with your foot." Simple, was it! I'd just like to see him hold a slippery baby and take a running jump into an already crowded bathtub and come down squarely on an unseen gadget. With an angry snort I clasped my dripping child to the front of my best loved negligee with one hand and quickly slammed down the top with the other.

There she was, safe and sound, no bones broken and not yet drowned but still sucking at the dripping washcloth. Slowly I removed it from her mouth and just as I had feared, she screamed with rage. By this time my head was aching and my knees were quivering with fatigue and nervousness but I dauntlessly started to dry her, trying to hurry and yet thoroughly dry each crease and wrinkle. I found memories of the mountain ranges I used to draw in geography class flitting through my mind. "Cheer up" I said out loud to myself, when at last I was working at her toes, "You are all but finished." Just then an increase in volume and tempo caused me to look at her upper extremity in time to see what was evidently one of a series of drops from the shower overhead plop down on her middle. It was the last straw for both of us. Hurriedly wrapping the screaming morsel in a blanket I returned her to the comparative safety of her bed.

Now, what comes next—oh yes, oil 'em in cool weather and powder 'em when it is hot. I had been dripping with perspiration for what seemed hours but my child had a slightly bluish tinge whether from cold or rage I had no way of knowing but I took a chance on the oil. At last I had found my stride. It can't hurt her I thought as I gleefully poured half a handful of oil into my palm and proceeded to work. It will just run into all of the cracks and save time, I thought. I have never made a graver mistake. Time was what it positively did not save. A wet baby is slippery but an oiled baby is beyond anything I had ever imagined. How I ever managed to clothe her squirming body is still a mystery. Vaguely I remember countless trips to and from the bathroom to return with all of the clothing I had so carefully assembled there. The intermittent ringing of the dumb-waiter and telephone merely added to the nightmare.

Utterly exhausted I sat down with a sigh to feed her and looked at the clock. Just on time, I thought at first glance and then gave a gasp of despair. It was eleven o'clock. It had taken me just one hour and twenty minutes to give my baby a bath.

ALUMNAE MEETING

At our quarterly meeting the business of the evening was followed by an informal illustrated lecture on "How to Attract Birds to Home and Garden". Mr. Roger T. Peterson of the Staff of the National Organization of Audubon Societies was the speaker who gave many interesting facts about bird life even in a city like New York. He urged those of us who have feeding stations, or are accustomed to throwing crumbs to the birds in winter, not to abandon the practice when north winds rage, for the birds come to depend on this and many starve to death when such food is withheld.

The usual delicious refreshments and delightful social time followed.

NEWS BY CLASSES

1904

Catherine M. Forrest was appointed assistant general secretary of the Ohio State Association on February 1, 1940.

1905

The Alumnae Association of "Old Internationals" of Bedford College, London, England has had the privilege of conferring honorary membership on Miss Jean I. Gunn. Miss Gunn has been in close touch with the International course at Bedford College since its beginning in 1920. This honorary membership is in recognition of her unstinted support. She is the first Canadian nurse to be honored in this way.

1909

Sympathy is extended to Bertha Bentley Cook whose mother died early in the year.

1919

Dr. Blakeslee, husband of Margaret Bridges is chairman of the department of Plant Genetics of the Carnegie Institution in Washington. He won the A. Cressy Morrison Prize of the New York Academy of Sciences in '36 and has recently demonstrated a way to double the size of fruits and vegetables by the use of colchicine. Dr. Blakeslee has been chosen as president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

1920

Margaret Conrad attended a session of one Educational Section of the Connecticut State Nurses' Association in Bridgeport on March 29th, to discuss "Faculty Participation in Educational Policies."

1921

Sympathy is extended to Margaret Vickery in the loss of her father who died on February 22, in his 83rd year. Dr. Vickery was chief of the Medical Service at the Massachusetts General Hospital until his retirement in 1920.

1923

The Nursing Journal writes as follows of Leslie Bell: "A Canadian nurse who graduated from the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing in New York, is one of those people who get around and see the world. In 1927 she described for us her experience at a Red Cross Outpost hospital in Canada and in 1934 she wrote about a hospital on the Burma-Chinese border. Now she says, "I cancelled my return passage to Canada when war seemed imminent. England is a sad but very wonderful place to be, in these days."

1924

Minnie Healy is assistant director of the Brooklyn Nursing Division of the Y.W.C.A. She will teach Anatomy and Physiology, in addition to her other responsibilities.

1928

Sympathy is extended to Margaret Arnstein in the loss of her sister Dr. Elizabeth Arnstein who died in February after a short illness. Dr. Arnstein had many friends at the Medical Center where she had been a popular intern in medicine after her graduation from Physicians and Surgeons College.

The following announcement appeared in the American Journal of Nursing. "Rhoda F. Reddig (Presbyterian, New York City; M.A., Teachers College, Columbia University) succeeds Marian Durell as director of nursing at the University Hospital School of Nursing, Ann Arbor, Mich. Miss Reddig has held various administrative positions at Presbyterian Hospital and most recently has been an instructor in the Department of Nursing, College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, New York City."

Theodore Sharrocks is spending this year studying at Teachers College, Columbia University.

1931

Edna Mills has a position at Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital.

1932

Alice Catherine MacKinnon has a position with the Community Health Association in Boston.

Dorothy Bennett wrote on April 1st. "I have just started as Industrial Nurse with W. P. Chrysler Building Corporation. The work is very varied and intensely interesting. I not only have emergency cases of minor injuries but quite a bit of insurance work. Also my commercial training is proving invaluable."

1933

Marie V. A. Brundage is Director of Nursing of the North Hudson Hospital, Weehawken, N. J. This is a 180 bed hospital with a small School of Nursing.

1934

Marjorie A. White is assistant anaesthetist in the House of Mercy Hospital in Pittsfield, Massachusetts.

1936

Elsa Helander is charge nurse on the private floor division of the Research Hospital, Kansas City, Missouri.

Waltra Willis Carroll and Mary Faure Harrison are both instructors in Red Cross Home Hygiene Courses in Erie, Penna. They are also assisting in the Toxoid clinics of the Visiting Nurses Associations.

Pauline Clay Christie who was awarded the Public Health Scholarship at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology writes that she has found the work extremely interesting. She is gaining much useful experience as Research Assistant in Health Education. She finds that her course in nursing is proving a very useful background for this type of work.

1937

Sympathy is extended to Dr. and Mrs. Howard G.. Bruenn (Dorothy Conner) in the loss of their eight months old son.

1938

Helen McNicol Pierce is a visiting nurse with the Judson Health Center in New York City.

Anne Breen is a general duty night nurse at the 5th Avenue Hospital.

Emily Cummings is in charge of the Men's Division at the Mary Imogene Bassett Hospital, Cooperstown, New York.

May Goheen is on her way to India to work in a hospital under the Presbyterian Mission.

Gertrude VanPeursen is a visiting nurse with the New Brunswick, New Jersey Visiting Nurse Association.

ATTENTION ALUMNAE ! !

The government is not the only question asker to-day. Please note on the alumnae dues bills two questions. "Present position?" and "Are you a member of the Red Cross?" Apparently these questions are not noted for they are not being answered. Please answer and help the alumnae census taker with her statistics.

MISS MAXWELL'S BIRTHDAY

It is the privilege of the Alumnae to honor the memory of Miss Maxwell on her birthday, March 14th. In accordance with an annual custom wreaths were placed on her grave in Arlington. Janet Fish, '22 wrote that she and Nancy Whitman Wadsworth, '13 drove out to Arlington and placed upon Miss Maxwell's grave a beautiful spray of Easter Lilies from the Alumnae, a wreath of myrtle from Miss Maxwell's sister and a Victory wreath tied with the school colors from Mary M. Brown, '97.

"A. C. M."

Beauty, regal splendor;
Brave, not too brave to fear;
Proud, not too proud to stoop;
Calm, not too calm for rage;
Gay, not too gay to weep;
Stern, not as stern as kind;
Vain, not as vain as sane;
Keen, by wisdom honed;
Virtues by failings mellowed;
She was a rounded soul too human for her kind.

GRADUATION AND REUNION

The first Thursday in June is again rapidly approaching. For some it spells future; for some it spells past. For all it means a happy time. As always the Alumnae Association will have the graduating class as their guests at dinner the evening before the graduation exercises. This year the dinner is to be held at The Plaza Hotel. Mark the date: Wednesday, June 5th.

On Thursday June 6th the graduation exercises will be held in the garden. Senator James Wadsworth will give the address. Immediately following the exercises there will be a reception in Maxwell Hall.

SCHOOL NEWS

MAXWELL HALL

COMES Spring and with it a new cycle of events, and so to make way for the new we complete and compile the old.

The non-degree group of the class of 1941 is still glowing about the success of their History of Nursing class project. On January 12th they presented a pageant depicting the Spirit of the Red Cross. Sturges was filled with students, graduates, faculty and guests of note from various organizations connected with nursing and the Red Cross. After the presentation, praise and appreciation were evident; so much so, in fact, that the group was asked by many of the outside guests to re-present the pageant for their respective organizations. It was given once again on January 23rd for the benefit of Nurses' House in Babylon, Long Island. By this means we were able to contribute five hundred dollars toward the construction of the wing of single rooms.

Even in the morning hours now, Chopin, Bach and Beethoven reign in the recreation room. Their music ascends from our new baby grand piano, purchased with money from the Delano Fund. It is a Francis Bacon model, of mahogany, and lends an air of grace not there before.

April 2nd marks the innovation of talking pictures in Maxwell Hall. The picture "Louis Pasteur" was shown, and following the movie, the lobby buzzed as that of any true movie house might. The presentation was a gift of Mrs. E. T. H. Talmage, Jr. Parents, friends and members of the Medical Center population were present.

Wisps of veil and velvet,
And Flowers in her hair Fulfill a ladies' springtime madness and give her such an air!

Such are the creations of Lily Daché and us. And to match the hat, we have a dress—a gay silk, a pastel challis or a flowered print. This bobbin madness tones down a bit to a conservative woolen suit, then flares up again and produces, in abandon, the evening dress that dominates our wardrobe. All this by virtue of the new Singer Sewing Machine — Queen Ann Model — which makes the ninth floor sitting room a common meeting ground for the seamstresses and Culbertson friends.

Miss Anna D. Wolf, Director of the Nursing School and Director of the Nursing Service of the New York Hospital will succeed Miss Elsie M. Lawler as Superintendent of Nurses and Principal of the School of Nursing at Johns Hopkins Hospital this fall. Miss Lawler has for many years been an outstanding and much beloved leader in nursing as well as a wise teacher and administrator. That Miss Wolf should take her place seems eminently fitting, not only because Miss Wolf, herself, is a distinguished "Hopkins Nurse" but because she has had much valuable experience and has done important work in nursing education both here, in China and in Chicago. Those of us who have been associated with Miss Wolf in professional organizations and in committee work of various kinds feel that New York is losing a valuable counselor and friend.

On July first of this year after nearly half a century of professional service Dr. Haven Emerson is retiring from the Directorship of the DeLamar Institute of Public Health of Columbia University. Dr. Emerson was graduated from Harvard College in 1896 and has been a member of the Columbia University Faculty for the past nineteen years. Some of the important posts which Dr. Emerson has ably filled are President of the Board of Health and Health Commissioner of New York, Director of Health and Hospital surveys in many American cities as well as in Athens, Greece, and President of the American Public Health Association. Dr. Emerson has at all times been a friend of nursing and we have been very fortunate in having him as one of the lecturers for our senior students. Dr. Emerson's talks on Public Health are an inspiration and every nurse appreciates the authority with which he speaks.

Dr. Harry Stoll Mustard, previously a member of the faculty of Johns Hopkins University and at present a Professor of Preventative Medicine at New York University, has been appointed to succeed Dr. Emerson. Dr. Mustard comes originally from Charleston, South Carolina, and is a graduate of the College of South Carolina in the Class of 1911. He is a leader in fields of public health administration and epidemiology. Dr. Mustard is a member of the Executive Board of the American Public Health Association and also of the Public Health Committee of the Commonwealth Fund.

On the twenty-second of February the Washington Heights section of New York City paid tribute to the memory of the first president of the United States. Washington, by proxy, was driven across the Washington Bridge. Parade and pageantry marked the day. On this same day our new twenty by thirty foot American flag was flown from the highest point of the Medical Center. The pole was left by the R.C.A. after they had finished with certain experiments to ascertain the reason for interference in radio reception at the Center. The hospital converted this pole into a flag pole. The star spangled banner unfurled in the breeze at the top of the Medical Center is an impressive sight on a clear day.

Mr. E. C. Bingham's many friends and associates both at the Center and in many sections of the country had great pleasure in congratulating him and wishing him many happy returns of the day on the tenth of April when he celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday.

BLETCHINGLEY, SURREY, ENGLAND

[Excerpts from a letter from Louise Ayers Rowan, '20, to Miss Young. Letter was written on Oct. 31, 1939.]

How nice to find a tiny note from you on the second receipt for the Quarterly Magazine! This shows the way my mind is functioning these days and if I am not sent over as a patient to the Neurological Department of the Presbyterian Hospital, I shall be greatly surprised! For days I have sat patiently waiting to be bombed, but am thankful to say I am still sitting. Due to the most extreme petrol rationing as well as the drastic blackout, almost all social life for us while in the country, is at a standstill. A friend of ours who had dined with us last week said. "I won't come over again this moon, but will telephone you next moon and make a date—" I now understand the Chinese reckoning.

We have sent our three boys to America. Hamilton aged 18 is at the Hill School and Stephen and David who are 16 and 13 are at St. Marks. It was a hideous moment when they left us and their little English home where we have all been so happy to say nothing of their school and their friends but we had many sound reasons for taking this decision which had to be made very suddenly at the end. I trust and hope it is all for the best. I still don't know just how long I can stand the separation and am torn like many others in wanting to be near my husband as well as my children. Should London be attacked his office would be moved out here and only I can help him run this show. For this reason I have not had to take any evacuees thank goodness. Fortunately the boys have met with such kindness and sympathy that they all seem quite happy in their new lives — this is a great comfort to us. I hope to be able to do something worthy of the best Presbyterian Hospital tradition some day, but as I must run this house I doubt if there will be much local nursing in this district. At the moment I am living through the same deadly sort of work I was doing in the last war before I came to the Presbyterian making Red Cross Supplies. I only hope I can offer my services and do some real work and try to make use of what you struggled to teach me for three years!

THE BABY AT HOOD COLLEGE

[From a letter written by Marion Whitfield in answer to a request for information about the course in Child Care at Hood College.]

Hood College, one of the first women's colleges to give its students practical experience in child care has "adopted" a baby each college year for the last ten years. The baby keeps its own first name but uses Strawn for its last name. The present baby is Frances Strawn. She was "adopted" last spring at the age of three months, when she had gained only about two ounces over her birth weight. By the end of the summer the baby began gaining and developing properly. It has been a source of great satisfaction to watch this scrawny bit of an infant change to the present robustly healthy child.

Strawn Cottage is the name given to the home management house which is a three story brick colonial building belonging to the home economics department. It is in this cottage that the baby lives. Each semester twelve or fourteen seniors live here, prepare their own meals and plan for the baby. These students work out a careful schedule by which each student has an opportunity to supervise the baby's routine. The "mother" for six days is responsible for preparing the baby's food, and for feeding, bathing, and weighing the baby. She also makes a schedule for the girls who will take care of the baby while she is in the classroom. A record is kept of the child's physical, mental, and social development and periodically it is given simple performance tests.

In preparation for the course at Strawn Cottage, the students must be majoring in home economics and have taken the child development course. Besides enjoying the work at the Cottage the girls gain excellent experience and practical knowledge which can and does prove valuable to them later.

It is my privilege as assistant school nurse to watch the baby's health. I pay her a regular weekly visit, and am on call to see her at any time. Her physician is the school physician.

SOUTH RODESIA, AFRICA

EDITH AITKEN-CADE

[Excerpts from a letter to Miss Helen Young.]

The year has completed its cycle and we are again at the beginning of a new season. The lands have been ploughed, the small hillocks in their orderly rows are waiting, the seed beds with their tobacco seedlings in various stages of growth lie under the hot sun, each 80 foot bed covered with its white cloth tent to protect the young plants beneath. When the rains come the transplanting process will begin. The last crop was a complete disappointment. The rains came with a vengeance and from the middle of December until the end of February we had less than a week of sunshine so the crops were either washed away or just failed to develop. Having seen all the work and time spent on planting and cultivating, it was heartbreaking to see the harvest. All over the colony the tale was the same: double the normal rainfall, farms isolated for weeks on account of impassable roads, rivers over their banks, bridges either swept away or completely invisible. Farm implements and often livestock were swept miles. One farmer advertised in the paper for his scotch cart (two wheeled heavy cart) which had disappeared. It was found high and dry in a tree top seventeen miles down the river! There were many similar cases. It was the worst rainy season for fifteen years. It resulted in special hardship to the natives who lost all their crops and famine threatened. The Government sent grain to the needy areas, so that there was not the distress of former famine years.

My medical work has kept up although the amount has varied according to the season. Infected eyes, scabies, coughs, various digestive troubles, minor injuries and malaria form the bulk of the cases, but there were several boys with hookworm infection, one baby of two who had been badly scalded on both legs and hips, another very young baby with pneumonia and complications who by all rights should have died but her natural resistance pulled her through, one little girl with a deep abscess in her thigh, a few boils which I had to open with a razor blade for want of a surgical knife, and a sprained back which one of the men got when gathering wood on a kopye. He yanked at the dead trunk, it gave way and he went over the rock edge falling on his back twenty feet below. Fortunately I had a sample roll of elastaplast which was sufficient to strap his back and in due course he recovered. I even had a maternity case. A Nyasaland woman whose husband was working here. I had just returned from the hospital with Shirley, the woman came at night and it did not seem wise to go down to the compound in her smoky, small hut probably to spend several hours. Too much danger of picking up something myself or bringing back something to Shirley. We have no dispensary room so the baby was born on our kitchen floor. It is cement and easy to disinfect. The woman speaks Chinyanja of which I've learned only a few words but by means of signs and those words, we managed well and the baby girl was born soon after midnight. After resting two hours, she picked up the baby and walked to her hut in the compound. She returned a month later and handed me a sixpence which her husband explained. It seems that according to their custom, the one who delivers the baby must cut off the hair present at birth. If she is not there, the mother cuts it off and gives the other woman sixpence otherwise the baby will have bad luck the rest of its life! Her whole case was most interesting to me because her customs are so different from those of the Ndau women with which I am familiar.

When I returned from Salisbury with Shirley, the women came from the compound to see her and thank me for having her. (That is always done.) One of the women had a small baby with lots of hair on its head, so I remarked, "Your baby has much more hair than mine." They all laughed and one of the older women, mother of seven, said patronizingly, "Your baby has no hair because you ate eggs before she was born. If you will eat eggs you must expect a bald baby." So now we know why Shirley was born hairless However, it is growing now and is a lovely reddish gold.

And so life goes on in our little corner, quietly but not at all monotonously. We took ten days' holiday in order to take Shirley to Silinda to be baptised and to show her off. We had a delightful time and Shirley should have been thoroughly spoiled but she is too good tempered. She smiled benignly upon everyone, went cheerfully to both black and white, and was the center of an admiring audience. The natives all said, "Tino bonga mwana (we thank you for the baby)". They think I've accomplished far more having her than in all the years I was nursing them! In other words, a career is all right but a family is much more important. So many of the women whose babies I had delivered came to see Shirley and ask me how it felt to be a mother. I went to the Mothers' meeting, taking her, and had a fine time. As a mother my position is very much higher than that of nurse.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE

1855—1899

68. Scutari Hospital
10 February 1855

Florence Nightingale declares herself ready to answer Mr. Milton any question concerning the Purveying Department of the Hospitals and permits him to make notes on her answers and statistics but she refuses to make any formal statement in writing . . . "the facts will speak for themselves. . . ."

Gift of Dr. John C. McCoy, January 1938.

69. (copied in full) Barrack Hospital
Scutari
November 25, 1855

"Dear Madam:

I received your note of enquiry about your late son, Mr. Ellis Jackson just as I was leaving Balaclava for Scutari.

The first time I saw your son was on going round the wards in the General Hospital Balaclava. He had been brought in, in the morning and was then lying in one of the wards. We had him removed into the Officers Ward, which contains six compartments nicely partitioned off by curtains. In one of these he was placed and lay till he died. He was always conscious and remained so till the very last. He prayed aloud so beautifully that as the nurse in charge said, 'It was like a Sermon to hear him.'

He expressed himself to me as entirely resigned to die. He knew me and asked to see Miss Nightingale. He pressed my hand when he could not speak. The last words he said were, 'Turn me on my right side' and we turned him. He died in the night. He had milk every hour, arrow root when he could take it and port wine put between his lips every quarter of an hour. He required constant changing and I took care that he should have a continual supply of dry sheets, sometimes many times a day.

He expressed no complaint or murmur—saw the Chaplain with pleasure—once spoke of dying so young, but said that he was ready and mentioned his age. He was decently interred in a burial ground we have about a mile from Balaclava, not at the time that the bodies of those who have died in the night who are buried all together—but in the afternoon with a funeral to himself. One of my own 'Sisters' lies in the same ground, to whom I have erected a monument. Should you wish anything similar to be done over the grave of your lost son I will endeavor to gratify you if you will inform me of your wishes.

With true sympathy for your loss, I remain dear Madam

Yours sincerely

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE"

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss.

General Hospital
Balaclava
June 18, 1856

"My dear Sir

I have sent up some ice to your icehouse in the castle, exclusively for sick purposes. Please do not let it be drawn by any but yourself and myself. There is not enough for after dinner purposes.

I remain—my dear Sir—yours faithfully

F. NIGHTINGALE"

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, 1938.

71.

Balaclava
June 30, 1856

My dear Sir

Regarding a monument sent to her from England and asking her correspondent to ascertain its proper destination.

". . .I have not the least idea what it is. Whether it is a mistake for Major Gordon's Cross, or whether it is really some other monument, possibly for Scutari, as I have ordered several for that place. . . . "

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, 1938.

72.

Hampstead NW
August 15, 1863

To Lady Monteagle

enclosing a copy of her paper on the "India Army Sanitary Report," and suggesting that Lord Monteagle order the two folio Blue Books of the India Army Sanitary Commission.

Hoping for support from Lord Monteagle she asks him to induce other Members of Parliament to get the complete report which would strengthen her cause, the sanitary work in India.

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss.

73. 27, Norfolk Street
Park Lane W.
March 8, 1865

an eight page letter marked "Private" to "My dear Sir" (no name) concerning the work of the "Barrack and Hospital Improvement Commission."

Gift of Miss Florence Harvey.

74. 27 Norfolk Street
Park Lane W.
March 20, 1865

"Miss Nightingale presents her compliments to Mr. Leffs, and begs to know whether there is any chance of the arrival of the book ordered on February 25 and finally promised last week—from Paris,—Chinese poetry.
—Translated by M. d'Herve."

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, January 1939.

The following four letters were written to Messrs. Henry Graves between 1873-1878:

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, October, 1938.

75. 35, South Street
Park Lane W.
December 11, 1873

To Messrs. Graves
asking for proofs of three religious pictures for the Edinburgh Infirmary, mentioning that the one of them "Christ carrying a Lantern" is a favourite religious print among the poor.

76. 35, South Street
Park Lane W.
January 22, 1877

To Henry Graves Esq.

"I am extremely indebted to you for your great kindness in sending the three beautiful 'Christ the Light of the World'; 'The Good Shepherd' and the 'Shepherd at Jerusalem', framed; for the Edinburgh Infirmary. . . . "

"With regard to the last four lines of the hospital hymn to be done in illuminated scrolls, I am much obliged to you for the offer of writing them on a card 14 x 6 and would gladly give 66/- for having them done in the prettiest style, did I think it would answer the purpose. But hospital people complain that they cannot read a thing of that size, except by going quite close. What they want appears to be an illuminated scroll of very large size to catch the eye, like a text, across a large room or ward. . . . "

77. 35, South Street
Park Lane W.
January 29, 1877.

Henry Graves Esq.
ordering a print of the Hospital hymn describing in detail how she wants it to be done. "The beautiful engravings gave the most affective impression and immense pleasure at the Edinburgh Infirmary."

78. 35, South Street
Park Lane W.
January 31, 1878

Messrs. Henry Graves explaining that the account which she owed to them remained unpaid so long time "because it has not been sent before."

79. (copied in full) September 7, 1877
To C. B. N. Dunn Esq.
"My dear Sir

I am afraid that Rose Wren (silly girl) will never keep on the cold water bandage (or think it does her any good),—unless you send the water in a bottle with "The Hydro-Fresco Lotion to be applied with caution," on it.

Would you like it to be put on as a compress with oiled silk and bandage over it?

Yours sincerely
F. NIGHTINGALE"

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, October 1938.

80. Lea Hurst
Cromford Derby
August 16, 1878

To the Rev'd W. Acraman

"Four of our trained nurses have been wrecked on their way home from Canada where they had been nursing for us at the Montreal General Hospital. . . . .

"Would you allow me to return thanks for our four nurses in your Church next Sunday? . . . .

"Florence Nightingale desires to return most humble and hearty thanks to Almighty God for four trained nurses returning home (on duty) from Canada who were wrecked on July 21, were saved three times from a watery grave and after severe sufferings for a week from exposure and hardship were rescued on the 28th by a vessel, bound for Glasgow and safely landed on August 9 thro' a merciful Providence." . . . .

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, October 1939.

81. Lea Hurst
Cromford Derby
October 25, 1880

To Miss Mochler telling her about Widow Gregory's accident and other news of the neighborhood. The letter was unfinished and mailed later with this postscript.

"Dear Miss Mochler
This is a scrap written to you long ago
You see the date
I send it now.
December 26, 1880 F. N."

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, March 1939.

82. Lea Hurst
November 26, 1881

To Rev'd W. Acraman
enclosing a contribution of £ 3.3 "for any of your works that require it most. . . . . "I trust that your fight in favour of Temperance will be crowned with success." . . . .

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, October 1939.

83. 10 South Street
Park Lane W.
November 20, 1883

To Wm. Stewart Falls Esq. M.D.
concerning "An Invalid, my maid" who is to be transferred to Bournemouth to a sanitorium. A most interesting letter giving the symptoms and medical history of the patient which are "indicative of incipient phthisis."

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss.

84. (copied in full) 10 South St. Park Lane W.
July 5, 1886

"Dear Sir Neville Chamberlain:

How good of you to call! I should be so sorry not to see you before you leave London. Might I hope to see you Wednesday at 5 or at 6? or, if not then, to-day (Monday) at 6:30 or at 3?

Very sincerely yours,
FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE"

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, January 1939.

85.
To Ernest Morgan Esq. (envelope)
Secretary
34 Craven Street Miss Nightingale
Charing Cross 18.4.87

A series of five letters written to Surgeon Colonel Hamilton of the British Army between November 10-December 9, 1893 concerning conditions in army hospitals and the need of reform.

These were given to Dr. Auchincloss for the collection by Miss Florence Harvey, a member of the Social Service Department of the Presbyterian Hospital.

86. November 10, 1893
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

Sir,

acknowledging his note to her, and also his letter in the "Times" and suggests to him politely to make a "clear concise statement showing what is wanted, stating the danger of the present system, the need and necessity of reform etc." . . . "may the highest success attend your exertions in remedying so great an evil in our machinery for war."

87. November 15, 1893
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

Sir,

expressing her grief "at the difficulty in the way," and arranges for a talk with him at her home . . . "if you do not mind seeing a great invalid entirely prisoner to her room but who still sees people on pressing business."

88. November 18, 1893
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

My dear Sir,

returning his papers and asking for a typewritten copy and urges him "to write an article to be published in 'The XIX Century', or the 'Fortnightly' giving a sting of the above paper."

89. November 30, 1893
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

My dear Sir,

declaring that she has not been idle about his admirable "suggestions" and discusses the problem of drawing public attention to the matter. "There seems however no opportunity of getting a day for it in the House of Commons this session." . . .

90. December 9, 1893
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

My dear Sir,

"I am glad to hear that you are making progress. You truly say that we shall in the end get all we want but that it will be a long and uphill fight." She gives the address of Sir Douglas Gatton who is on the Army Sanitary Commission and first Military Sanitary Engineer of the time, and politely suggests that Dr. Hamilton should make his acquaintance.

91. May 14, 1896
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

To Lord Monteagle

A short note acknowledging his letter concerning Workhouse Nursing in Ireland, a subject which is of great interest to Florence Nightingale.

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss.

92. April 3, 1897
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

To Lady Monteagle (in pencil)

Hoping to see her any afternoon about five—"there are interests so dear between you and me."

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss.

93. April 20, 1897
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

To Lady Monteagle (in pencil)

Enclosing a letter from Miss Pringle and asking "Do you and Lord Monteagle think that there is hope of the Guardians supplying what she wants most, in the material way: viz, accommodations for Probationers and I suppose hot water and linen, etc. for the Hospital? The training for the nuns she supplies herself,—lay nurses and probationers for 'reliable assistants' to the nuns she now fully acknowledges as necessary. Where are the probationers to come from?"

"Gerald Balfour's Bill was to find funds as well as 'dissolve' the Workhouse was it not?"

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss.

94. May 14, 1897
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

To Sister Franklin
(at the Plague Hospital in India)

acknowledging a letter from Sister Franklin upon her arrival in India. . . . "I shall be anxious to hear when you have begun your duties in the Plague Camp." . . . "I have no home news you would care to hear." . . . "We have still this dreadful war between Greece and Turkey going on but we shall keep out of an European War." . . . "And now I must stop and remembering that you are never far from our thoughts wish you not goodbye but what that word means: God be with you—as He is" . . .

Given to Dr. Auchincloss by Miss Florence Harvey Christmas 1939,—"this letter was sent to me by the same old lady who sent the photograph of Florence Nightingale."

Presented to the collection by Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, January 1940.

95. May 19, 1899
10 South Street
Park Lane W.

To Lady Monteagle (in pencil)

A short note saying she will be glad to see Lady Monteagle "if you will excuse me for receiving you in bed where I am kept by illness and stupidity. Stupidity is not catching."

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss.

96. (no date)

To Bernard Mallet Esq.

Part of a letter (two pages) apologizing for her long delay in answering his letter, asking for a recommendation of an applicant. She has been "very ill and full of work both British and Indian."

Gift of Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, January 1939.

Three letters concerning Florence Nightingale.

97. Embley
Tuesday

To Colonel Jebb

from Florence Nightingale's mother, describing first hand her daughter's work at the Crimea.

. . . "An officer writes word that he heard a soldier in the trenches giving a long account of all the care and comfort he had experienced in Scutari Hospital concluding as follows: 'You need not mind being sick or wounded if you can get there to be nursed by Miss N and the nurses. Strong as she is in the affections of the good and the wise I care little for the attacks which are made upon her. It is the penalty which all must pay who brave the beaten path!" . . .

Gift of Dr. John C. McCoy, 1938.

98. Manchester
12th March 1864

To Mrs. E. Ashworth from Robert Rawlinson.
enclosing a note from Florence Nightingale relating "to a proposed commencement of sanitary works in India under that great and good man Sir John Lawrence. You see it is marked 'Private'" . . .

"To do good to the uttermost and not to let the world know is the dominant feeling of earnest pure minded Florence Nightingale. She fears that publicity would weaken her power as it certainly would encumber her with correspondence" . . .

99. Uxbridge Road
September 17, 1883

To Mr. Scott
from Charles Reade

thanking him for his letter and short epics on current events. "Men are too prone to think that Poetry belongs to the past, but I cannot think so. If men would do as you have done and cultivate the poetic eye soon they would find that the greater the age the more numerous the true poetic pearls. A Crimean soldier sore and wounded begged Miss Nightingale to stand in the moonlight at the window and let her shadow fall upon his bed since she could not visit all the poor fellows. I have read the Iliad in former days but I know nothing in it so poetical as that."

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

DEAN RAPPLEYE

MR. President, Fellow Members of the Class of 1940 and Friends of the School of Nursing: In these days when a large part of the world is tormented by the destruction of human liberty, educational standards and even national morality, it is peculiarly fitting and, indeed, it is refreshing that we gather in the shadow of a great humanitarian institution to dedicate anew our confidence in those aspirations of education and public service to which the universities, the medical and nursing professions and the hospitals are devoted. It is vital to the future of this country and, indeed, of the world that our confidence in the standards of education and professional performance be and remain unshaken. We are for the moment again the only country in the world that can preserve and hold the advances in these fields, which have been attained only after many years of constant effort. In a real sense of the word, we are the trustees of the accumulated knowledge and skills of the past. We will not fail the future.

The occasion today is one of special significance to the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, and marks another milestone in the cooperation between the Presbyterian Hospital and Columbia University. The class graduating today is the first to complete its training under the direction of the Faculty of Medicine. Some of these members have received the Bachelor of Science Degree from Columbia University at the Commencement on Tuesday. We, on the joint medical and nursing staff, are proud of the splendid progress that has been made in this common educational plan that is daily proving its effectiveness and its soundness. We cannot too often express our gratitude to Mr. Sage, to Miss Young and to Miss Conrad for their leadership in establishing this program.

To you, who go forth today, we wish all manner of success and happiness, and commend to you loyalty to the duties of your profession, sometimes arduous but always richly satisfying, and to the educational standards and professional ideals which have quite deservedly given to nursing the designation of the noble profession.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

Honorable James W. Wadsworth

INTRODUCTION BY MR. SAGE

It is particularly gratifying to me to have the privilege of introducing the Speaker of the day. I have known him for over forty years and never regretted it. First I looked down upon him from the self-imposed but nevertheless high estate of an upper classman at Yale; later I looked up to him as Senator, statesman and leader. Today we reach comparative equality in that we speak from the same platform—Honorable James W. Wadsworth.

MR. President, Mr. Rappleye, the Graduating Class, the Faculty, Ladies and Gentlemen: The managers of this ceremony have paid me a very, very high compliment in asking me to come here today to say a few words. I must confess to you that I am illy prepared to speak with knowledge to a graduating class of the School of Nursing. I am a layman, very much of a layman; as matter of fact, if you won't let it go any further, my business is farming, which has not brought me into very close contact with the medical profession.

I am delighted to find myself on this platform with Mr. Dean Sage. It is true he and I were in College together, but he understates it; it was 43 years ago. He and I have been intimate friends for years. I have seen much too little of him in recent years. I was a little nervous as he took his place here to introduce me, fearful that he would tell all he knows about me; but he has not, I am grateful to say. But I am glad for more serious reasons to find myself on this platform with him because upon many, many occasions in the past, many of our mutual friends have told me of the work of Mr. Sage in connection with this great hospital. It is a great public service that he has rendered, a service that cannot be excelled as to its value. It is a labor of love that he has performed, years and years of sacrifice of his time and efforts and perhaps of his profession. I know you all join with me in the hope that he will continue here for many years to come and go on making this one of the great institutions for the serving of mankind.

I indicated at the outset that I feel myself little equipped to speak appropriately upon this occasion. I cross my fingers as I say it, but I have yet to have personal hospital experience. Some of the members of my family have, however, and if you don't mind I am going to utter a little complaint about one of the tactics that good nurses always indulge in. After an operation has been completed, the nervous father or husband, as I have been upon more than one occasion, calls up the hospital to find out how the patient is getting on and the reply always is: "Why, just fine, Mr. Wadsworth, just fine". Then I go around the next morning and find the patient suffering tortures. It makes me mad. Three or four days afterwards comes a realization of the fact that the nurse told the truth. Medically, the patient was doing well, although a little bit uncomfortable, as you are apt to express it. So my confidence in the reliability of the profession has increased as the years have passed, and I owe it a debt of gratitude for the care given to people who are dear to me.

I have reached the age, along with Mr. Sage, at which I am tempted to be reminiscent; and again reminding you that I am a layman and asking your pardon for any errors that I may make in the utterance of these reminiscences, I shall embark upon one of them. It has to do with the astonishing advance of the medical profession during my lifetime. I served in the Spanish-American War. I didn't win that war, not single handed. I was a private, and incidentally, for your confidential information, let me say that I am today the proud possessor of a very, very high distinction; I am the only member of the Congress of the United States who entered the United States Army as a private and came out as such.

I remember so well that back in 1898 no one ever suggested that our kitchens be screened. That was never thought of. In those days, if my memory is correct, the medical profession had very little, if any, conception of the fact that typhoid fever was carried upon the feet of flies. Innumerable feet of innumerable flies roosted on my food in those days. The medical profession at that time, in 1898, had no conception of the fact—a thing well worked out since then—that yellow fever was carried by a certain type of mosquito and that malaria was transmitted by the bite of another type of mosquito. Typhoid fever and yellow fever and malaria were the curses of armies, and the medical profession had not yet solved those mysteries. Today, men are made immune to typhoid fever, and as the result of the inspiration of Walter Reed and the heroism of his group of enlisted men of the Army Medical Corps the mystery of yellow fever as well as the mystery of malaria is solved.

Things have changed enormously since I was a youngster. Being a layman, I can't keep up with their progress, but you of the Nurses School and you of the Graduating Class who are so closely associated with the medical profession, must at once be astonished and fascinated by the progress that has been made in the last generation or two in medical science and in the preservation of public health. We cannot be too grateful to those who have accomplished these wonders.

From a practical standpoint, if we look back upon it and stop to think a moment, the solving of the mystery of yellow fever resulted in the building of the Panama Canal. Without that discovery, it is doubtful that great piece of engineering could have been completed. The French tried it and lost thousands and thousands of people, but when Walter Reed solved the mystery, General Gorgas went down there, cleaned up the isthmus, and the great work was done. So I, as a layman, look at the progress of medicine and try to understand it. More and more am I an admirer of the medical and nursing professions for the progress they have made; more and more am I, an individual, grateful for what they have done.

And I think I can tell you of a little incident, again reminiscing, which will indicate to you the respect in which the nursing profession is held by the soldier. Back in 1922, it fell to my lot to be chairman of a joint committee of Congress charged with the duty of revising the pay schedules of the army, the navy and the marine corps officers and enlisted men. The pay schedules at that time, which dated back to 1908, were pitifully low, and those officers and men were having a fearful time getting on; and in order to learn the truth of those conditions we summoned before us men of the army, from General Pershing down to sergeants, men of the navy from the Admiral down to ordinary seamen, and questioned them as to their living expenses, their families and their household budgets. One day we had upon the stand a sergeant of the regular army. He had had twenty-four years of service; he had two wound stripes on his sleeve, and across his chest were a number of campaign and service medals and badges. He was a married man with a wife and two children. He had been in France, in the Philippines and everywhere where the army had gone, and in appearance he looked, and was, in fact, what might be termed a "hard-boiled, hard-bitten regular soldier". He had seen it all and looked you straight in the eye and told you the truth with every evidence of self respect. We asked him about his living expenses and he told us with the greatest frankness, nothing dramatic at all, but it portrayed a desperate situation in his family. He indicated that his pay was utterly inadequate, and finally one Senator said to him: "Sergeant, if you had your way about it, whose pay would you first raise in the army?" "The army nurses", he said. We asked him why. He said "You see those two stripes on my arm? They took care of me then and they have taken care of my wife and my children when I have been away. You give them the first raise in pay; leave me out of it for a while." I think I never heard anything that made a deeper impression on me than that observation of his because it taught me the deep respect that these veteran soldiers had for nurses who had stood by them when they were suffering, and had stood by their families.

Events that are transpiring in the world today are of such vast dimensions that one feels almost speechless in the face of them. I need not describe them to you. You read of them daily in the press and you listen to them many times daily over the radio. That civilization, as we know it, is threatened cannot be denied. That self-government, liberty and all those spiritual blessings that go with the possession of liberty are endangered cannot be denied. We in this country wake up to a sudden realization of the fact that we have been taking things for granted. We have known that our forefathers won for us the blessings that we enjoy today, the blessings of liberty. We have taken it for granted perhaps that we do not have to do anything more about it, that those blessings may be enjoyed automatically. Now we are suddenly brought to a realization of the fact that if we are to enjoy liberty, we must prove ourselves worthy of it. Hence, the cry for preparedness. It is an old, old story, my friends, that democracies habitually neglect measures for their own defense perhaps for the reasons I have just attempted to utter, the "taking for granted." It has been true in the history of our country ever since its foundation in 1789. In time of peace, we have allowed ourselves to grow soft; we have refused to believe there was sufficient evil in the world ever to threaten us. We have neglected reasonable measures which would keep us in a "respectable posture of defense." What is going on today is merely a repetition of what has happened three or four times in the history of the United States. The cry for preparedness! It is well that we heed it. We cannot afford to take any chances; we would better make up our minds that the Government of the United States cannot be the master of events the world over. Sometimes we have been led to believe we can run the world. That is not so. We are not the master of world events. We must strive, however, to be the masters of our own destiny. To do so, we must be strong. And to be strong we must be willing to work and sacrifice.

I shall not at this time go into details about the matter of preparedness, of which I hear so much in Washington, but I cannot escape the conviction that here at least is a group prepared to serve. Would that we had thousands and thousands like you in every walk of life, prepared to serve their country if called for in a great emergency, in the relief of suffering, the care of the sick and of the wounded; for none of you can tell whether or not you shall be called into service some day. The country should be grateful to an institution of this sort that turns out, if I may use the expression, trained recruits in the national defense. That is what these young women are—trained recruits. And we need training; we need discipline; we need loyalty; we need fidelity, and this group possesses those qualities. And so you go on in your chosen profession. Doubtless you will scatter over the country somewhat and bring the ideals that you have learned in this institution into other communities, always remembering what you have learned here, always serving the people. I can only wish you the best of luck. I can only say that I wish I and millions of others were as well trained for service as you are; that your fellow citizens are grateful to you; that there can be no doubt that the country is better for your having attended this institution and passed through this course.

Mr. Dean Sage

MEMBERS of the Graduating Class: This is the seventeenth Commencement upon which it has been my province and my privilege to say a few words to the Graduating Class. During that time the School of Nursing has grown from a hospital adjunct to a University Department. Our material resources have increased many fold. Bricks and mortar to house us; funds and equipment to enrich our activities have been provided by others who believed that the heart to animate and the soul to inspire would be found here. It was ours to accept the gift that it might be woven into the pattern of life by the devotion, the understanding, the wisdom of those to whom it was entrusted. This has been done. The spirit of your leaders of the medical and of the nursing profession has made the School what you know it today.

And so it is the atmosphere of this place acting upon your own tradition and background that will endure and influence your future. The material things you see about you will perish; the lessons learned from lecture, text book and even experience will dim in the perspective of later life. But the intangible values drawn from your years of service here have gone into the fiber of your being and will remain with you. These values are spiritual—hope, faith in the future, courage, understanding, love. They are legacies to you from others who have made creation a part of their daily life that this School of Nursing and this Hospital might grow in usefulness. They are of the heart and soul of the Medical Center. Cherish them under divine guidance and hand them on to those who follow you here. So and only so will the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing continue to live and to give as in the past, to partake of and to pass on that which is immortal in mankind.

COMMENCEMENT ACTIVITIES

ON Wednesday evening, June 5th, the annual dinner given by the Alumnae to the Graduating Class was held at The Plaza. The Plaza was a happy choice this year for many reasons, particularly because the large ballroom gave Paul Draper space to present his marvelous skill as a solo dancer. He held the spectators spellbound with the music of his feet and with his clever impromptu encore in which he interpreted a variety of popular songs with dance steps. Mr. Draper must have felt somewhat repaid for this generous donation of his talent as he listened to the spontaneous and enthusiastic applause of his audience. The witty remarks made by Mr. Draper following his performance were appropriate for he had been a patient at the Medical Center!

The dinner was the usual gay and delightful affair that is made possible by Miss Eliot's excellent management and careful planning. Miss Young, Dr. Rappelye, Mr. Sage, and the president of the Alumnae, Mrs. Fordyce B. St. John greeted the guests of honor, the graduating class. Following their brief and entertaining remarks, general dancing became the order of the evening until one o'clock.

Thursday was a most perfect day for the Commencement Exercises. These again presented the same impressive and perfect picture than can only result from a program well planned in every detail. Following the Exercises, Maxwell Hall and the gardens were crowded to capacity with the many enthusiastic guests who stayed for the reception and supper.

On Alumnae Day all the "P.H." graduates came on duty in their school uniforms. Boutonniers were sold all day and had a record sale. The Alumnae Meeting was called at three o'clock. The annual reports were presented and the class of 1940 became members of the Alumnae Association. The meeting was followed by a very pleasant social hour on the lawn.

NOTE: Three interesting digressions were introduced into the presentation of diplomas by Mr. Kinnicutt, when he announced that:

Vivian Olivia Olson, one of the graduating nurses, was not present, because she was serving in a field hospital unit, which had been sent in aid of Finland.

Marietta Demetrius Papasaphiropoulou and Katy Saliari of the graduating class, were sent here by Princess Irene of Greece to learn American hospital methods of nursing. These nurses expect to return to Greece where they will take part in a plan sponsored jointly by the Near East Foundation in New York and the Greek Government to raise the standards of nursing in Greece.

The Meschutt twins who resemble each other closely were asked to come to the platform together.

1905

THE class of 1905 had as their representatives at their thirty-fifth reunion luncheon in the Board Room at the Presbyterian Hospital:

Martha Lanson
Edith Goulden
Ravenna C. Whitson
Charlotte Sherrill Kernan
Annie Thomas

Though there were few we had a happy time reminiscing and telling of our doings of the present. Letters were read from some of the absent members a few saying they would be on for the "Fiftieth Anniversary" of the founding of the School. We are hoping to have several of the '05's for a luncheon then.

ANNIE M. THOMAS.

The class of 1915 celebrated its 25th reunion with nine members showing up out of the original twenty-nine who graduated. Many of those who were unable to come were busy doing war work or graduating daughters or sons from other institutions of learning.

The following members of the class were present:

Elizabeth Culver
Elizabeth Brackett
Lucy Mathews
Mable Davies
"Pinny"
"Penny"
Kathryn Terriberry
Anne Williams
Isabel Woods

We had a delicious luncheon and the buzz of conversation bore witness to the pleasure we had in seeing each other and in hearing news of those who were unable to come. We are hopeful that more of our class will be able to return for the celebration of the "Fiftieth Anniversary" in 1942.

LUCY MATHEWS.

1920

The Class of 1920 had its twentieth reunion on graduation day. It was a festive occasion although the group was small.

Those attending were:

Gertrude Adams
Mary Paul Caner
Margaret Conrad
Elizabeth Curtis
Dorothy Deming
Nellie Estey
Winifred Kaltenbach
Eleanor Lee
Marjorie Strong Smith
Edith Milnor Swengel
Jennie Wideman

Jean Holden was unable to come for lunch but came in time for the procession. Dorothy Stockton Nelson had made her reservation but was unable at the last minute to come. Ann Campbell Duncan came, but unfortunately, she was two days early so missed the delicious luncheon and the patriotic decorations. They just had to be patriotic with world affairs recalling so vividly conditions of twenty years ago.

Ida Barnett Athey sent a contribution which will be added to our small balance, over expenses and turned over to the 1920 Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Edith Milnor and Mary Paul came from considerable distance to attend reunion. We appreciate the effort they made.

Let us all begin to plan now to attend the "Fiftieth Anniversary" in 1942. We want to be proud of our 1920 group and hope each member will do her utmost to attend.

MARJORIE STRONG SMITH.

The following members of the class of '25 returned to P.H. for our fifteenth Reunion:

Ruth D. Abernathy
Gracia Downs Mooney
Elizabeth H. Brooke
Doris Walden Ericson
Mary Morris Findlay
Faith Vanderbugh Ferguson
Ella Postles Fog
Theresa H. Johnson

Freda Parker Seriff
Helen Kingsley Shaw
Ruth Hart Roy
Edith Louise Nash
Dorothy Rogers
Gladys Paget Sweny
Louise Hopper Ritscher
Katharine Winton
Dorothy Rost

We gathered high up above the city in a solarium on the roof where a delicious luncheon was served to us with a birthday cake and ice cream to fittingly celebrate such a great occasion.

Gladys Sweny took pictures of the luncheon party which we hope will tell the perfect story of the setting.

So much to find out about our friends and so little time to hear all the news. Classmates unable to come to the reunion sent us news and we read their letters as we ate.

Bess Norfleet writes from North Carolina—"We are right busy in the Health Department now and it is hard to get off until vacation time . . . "

Ardis Duggan Morris—"Steward has a new job in Philadelphia starting July 1st and we expect to move between now and then . . . "

Alfhild Axelson—"I shall look forward to seeing you all next year for I am planning to be there without fail . . . "

From Bertha Davis in the Washington State College—"I am enjoying my work very much. It is decidedly different from any of my other positions. I rate as assistant Professor of Nursing Education in the College faculty and function as a director of the Nursing Education division of the College of Sciences and Arts."

From Mary MacMillan—"Best of all good wishes for a jolly party . . . "

Mary Potter Anderson—"I have one boy and two girls . . . We are dairy farmers. Sell milk wholesale in D.C. Have about 150 cows—two riding horses, one pony. Would enjoy seeing any of my classmates if they came near Washington. Just give me a ring . . . "

From Ruth C. Standerwich—"The graduation invitation came today . . . I would certainly like to see everyone again . . . "

"Tim", Timoxena Sloan from Grady Hospital in Atlanta. "I wish I might be there but it will not be possible for me this year."

From Dundas Center, Prince Edward's Island—Helen M. G. MacLeod—"Please give my best to all the class—hope sometime I will get to a reunion . . . Our girls are growing fast and I expect it will not seem long until Peggy will be able to look after things when I go away."

Claire Mowat Gray—"It is impossible for me to come to the reunion this year. Canada needs so much money to carry on her war work. I feel one should sacrifice oneself to the great cry—"Long live Great Britain and the Allies."

Emilie W. Jean, Tarrytown—"It is difficult for a public employee to have free time for personal interests — I am scheduled to meet Mothers of new kindergarten children on that day which is a once-a-year event."

Aileen Jamieson—Ontario—"There is nothing I would like better than to see all my old classmates again but this year I can't possibly make the trip."

After the tables were cleared, groups gathered to clatter constantly until the time came to march in the graduation assembly.

The out of door ceremony was beautiful and impressive. There was a constant stream of visitors ushered down the long ramp to their camp-chair seats, by Interns resplendent in fresh white suits and blue corn flowers in the lapels of their suits.

We faced the speakers stand which was beautifully decorated, and behind it the hospital walls went on and on up endlessly to the blue sky. On top floated the largest American flag imaginable. There as the eye traveled downwards could be seen the hundreds of faces at the windows—the personnel of the hospital who could snatch a moment to view the lovely spectacle.

The band played and the march began. No graduate could help but be moved when that procession winds slowly down through the grounds. When all were seated many others stood about under trees. We recognized attendings who used to order us about on the wards of the old P.H. Over and over we said, "Who is that? and that? and that?"

When we reached Maxwell Hall the orchestra played and a few were dancing. The class of '25 seemed to gravitate toward food once more. In the dining room we scattered about in different groups at small tables.

Visitors are always so cordially welcomed by Miss Young and those working with her, that the shyest of alumnae must feel at home.

FAITH VANDERBURGH FERGUSON.

There was a certain class that graduated from Presbyterian Hospital which, as far as the Alumnae Quarterly is concerned, has sunk practically into oblivion. I was a little worried about this situation so I left my home in California and journeyed to New York to attend the occasion of the tenth anniversary of our graduation. How surprised and pleased I was to find that many others of the class had left their homes for the same reason. It was a genuine pleasure to realize that so many of us were very much alive after all. Then there was the added pleasure of receiving letters from others of the class not present.

We met graduation day on floor R for luncheon. Luscious food it was—I think. Afterwards we added to the historical records by means of a camera—and kept on talking.

I want to say how much this visit to Presbyterian Hospital has meant to me. I have been living in California for nine years and have planned for a long time to be in New York for the tenth reunion. My devotion to California and family has not diminished my intense love for Presbyterian Hospital and every minute of this homecoming has been such a pleasure that I will remember it all my life.

It was so good to see each one of our class who did get to the luncheon. It is funny how much we all have in common. We only wish we might have seen the rest of you.

The following is a list of those present at this reunion:

Allene Kipp Miller
Dot Kenyon Dunscomb
Harriet Eriksson Esselstyn
Dot Dowlin Bell
Betty Dew Carnes
Chris Davis Stuart
Marguerite Tubbs Little Martha Kreer Hynes
Ruth Barnum Wahl
Marian Chase Grogan
Dot Billington Cunningham
Cecil Gerson Waite
Vivian Tait Taylor
Ethelbell Barrett Trowbridge
Emily McMullen
Betty West
Elna Saamanen
Blanche Collins

Elizabeth Schneider
Mary Swallen
Mildred Halligan
Agnes Niwell

The following were unable to attend the luncheon but came later:

Camilla de la Mater
Ruth Ebert Carnes
Eleanor Franklin

Molly Bull Basemore had to be on duty (Fever Therapy) but sent a letter. Letters were also received from:

Harriet May
Edith Wilson Stein
Lida Sprott Hickman
Florence Meyers Melick
Alice Hamlin Murdoch
Betty Prentice Burr
Elizabeth Tuttle Leveque
Ruth Sanford Allen
Mildred Platt Hadsell
Dot Wallace Mack
Alison McBride
Dorothy Cotreal
Mildred Ward Pennington

Clara Zelly Bishop left Harkness the day before with a new baby boy so could not be present either.

It was a wonderful thing to discover that in reality our class is still very much united in spirit—and when it comes right down to it, no one has been wasting time.

CECIL GERSON WAITE,

The time was all too short for the Class of 1935 at their Fifth Reunion Luncheon. It would probably take three years to tell all the news to each other. There were so many happy faces—not one seemed older—but almost all looked far more distinguished. The gathering shone in quality and even in quantity—there were forty-one present—which surprised even Miss Young. Our class has at last excelled in something!

If the following statistics vary with the truth it is because your reporter was enjoying the best food ever tasted in Presbyterian Hospital (there was even steak like butter, my poor absent ones), or talking too hard to listen accurately.

Those present who are "specialing" were: Nicky Steenland, Polly Pressly, Helen Stines, and Helen O'Reilly.

Those engaged in other professional activities were:

Margaret Allen—Research—Welfare Island
Eleanor Brown—Visiting Nurse—Brooklyn
Elizabeth Fisher—Night Duty—Vanderbilt Clinic
Helen Gillies—Assistant Director of Nursing—Neurological Institute
Isabel Harrell—Instructor—Vanderbilt Clinic
Mary Holden—Head Nurse—Neurological Institute
Willetta Mosser—Doctors' Private Offices—Neurological Institute
Margaret Peters—Head Nurse—L Center
Marguerite Potter—Head Nurse—6th Floor, Harkness Pavilion
Dorothy Ryerson—Head Nurse—Dr. Siegel's Research Division—Welfare Island
Margaret Sibley—Assistant Superintendent—"Tremont" Henry Street office
Paullyn Stines—in Miller-Abbott tube work
Lillian Suess—Head Nurse—Sloane Hospital
Helen Van Dynhoven—Teachers College in the Fall
Florence West—Head Nurse—Babies' Hospital, 7th floor

The married were:

Mrs. Walter J. J. Smith (Elizabeth Paddon)
Mrs. Harold H. Green (Edythe Rich)
Mrs. Robert Womrath (Dorothy Goadby)

The married and working were:

Mrs. John McKenney (Betty Moran), who is office nurse for a Cornell woman doctor.
Mrs. August Turchi (Marian Powell) who is with the Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service
Mrs. William E. Schmidlein (Florence MacEachern) Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service—also attends Teachers College
Mrs. Robert Dryburgh (Georgianna Hand)—Refractions—Eye Clinic
Mrs. Sidney Charlat (Lucia de Castro)—Clinic Aide—V.C.

The married with one baby were:

Mrs. George Lundberg (Marian Nylander)
Mrs. Isaac D. Hall (Marian Dalton, '34)—a guest of the Class of '35
Mrs. Clifford Ryder (Gertrud Koetter)

Mrs. Davy Dunham (Margaret Todd)—who also works in the afternoons in the Buckley School for boys.
Mrs. Carson Morris (Muriel Frederickson)—who is also a special nurse
Mrs. John Curtis (Margaret McAllister)

The married with two babies were:
Mrs. John Dunn (Priscilla Daniels)
Mrs. John Kane (Ethel Allworth)
Mrs. Charles Frost (Wanda Turner)

Telegrams were read from:
Mrs. John Whistler (Betty Thompson)
Mrs. Elton Huyck (Helen Truesdell)

Letters—with pictures—were read from:
Mrs. James Sala (Helen Jaster)
Mrs. W. R. Wreggit (Betty Bailey), who both sound very happily married
Ruth Hager, who is still school nursing in Bainbridge, New York, and may be in New York for Columbia's Summer Session.
Beatrice Chambers, who recommends doing nursing in the Philippine Islands.
Ruth Esther Skemp
Mrs. Robert Marle (Virginia Maher)
Florence Burnett, who is doing visiting nursing in Maternal and Child Health in Colorado
Marian Ziegler, who is doing orthopedic visiting nursing in Erie, Pennsylvania
Mrs. John Smith (Frannie Hill)

We did not hear from nineteen girls, who should be ashamed. Our information extends only to the fact of their marital status. We give that forthwith (letters with corrections will be thrice welcome).

Married and silent:
Mrs. Frank Hunt (Mary Louise Wheeler)
Mrs. Harry Edwards (Elizabeth Elmore)
Mrs. James Cardiff (Josephine Stancisco)
Mrs. Leland Moss (Katherine Lindholm)
Mrs. Walter Elliott (Beatrice Urban)
Mrs. Charles Simpson (Ethel Grace Carlson)
Mrs. L. Ozai (Louisa Ebbs)
Mrs. James Morrell (Edith Barbara Krantz)

The apparently unmarried and stubbornly silent:

Jemma Barbieri
Marjorie Schlotterbeck
Constance Brewer
Martha Aiken
Elise Dunlop
Gertrude Fisher
Ilona Szabo
Jane Bingaman
Naomi Ann Waldvogel
Marie Heller
Jessie Peeke

We hope to hear from all these in 1945.

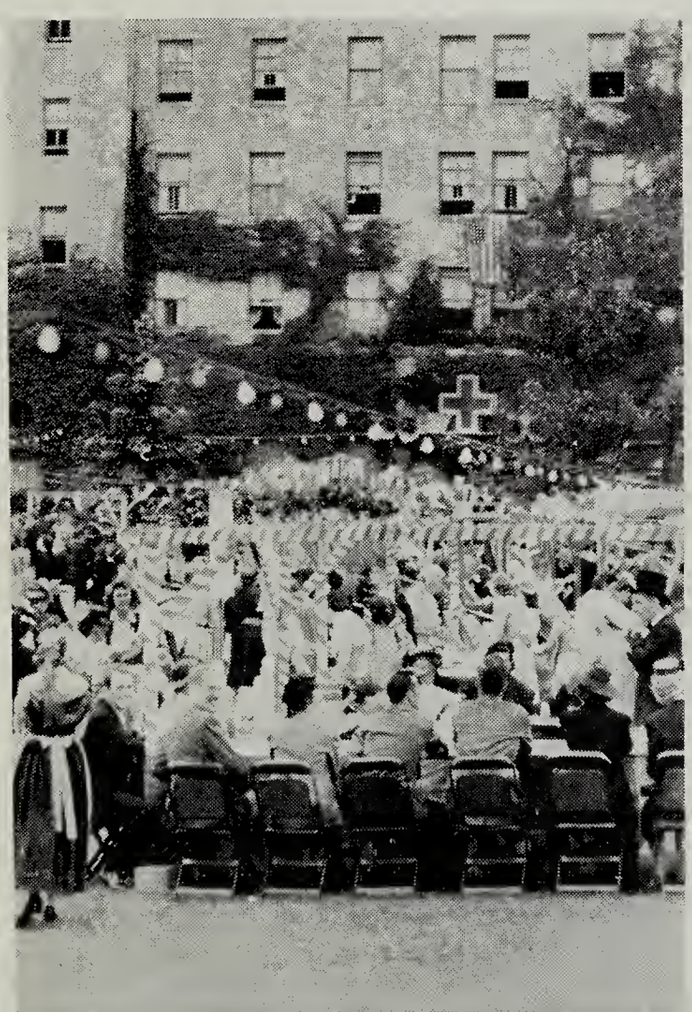

The Class of 1935 wishes to thank Miss Young and Miss Wells for their guidance and assistance in preparing our Reunion, and we thank the Dietitians and the enthusiastic cooks and waitresses who prepared the feast and served us. We give our thanks to Margaret Reid and Georgie Dryburgh for all their hard work in arranging details and notifying us and for writing many letters for news from the absent ones.

It was a most successful Reunion. Let us suggest for 1945 that we take at least a week, as a luncheon is too short.

The Red Cross Carnival

Taking Chances

Popular Bingo

THE RED CROSS CARNIVAL

Louisa M. Kent, '36

ON Tuesday, June 18, the Carnival for the War Relief Fund of the American Red Cross was staged on the lawn of Maxwell Hall, transforming that spot from its usual aspect of formal dignity to a scene resembling a miniature Amusement Section of the World's Fair. Electric light bulbs were strung above the circle and down the entire length of the drive, and a large brilliant "neon" Red Cross blazed significantly over the entrance to Maxwell Hall. Colorful booths, side by side, covered the lawn along both sidewalks and barkers shouted continually through megaphones and amplifiers, luring the crowd from one intriguing spot to the one next door. In the circle in front of the entrance a colossal florist establishment was doing a landslide business in cut flowers, boutonnieres, and potted plants, while on the other side the candy-cake-cookie booth was selling its homemade delicacies as rapidly as they could be weighed and wrapped.

In spite of a definitely unfriendly north wind and a grey sky that threatened constantly but never crashed through, the crowd started arriving even before the scheduled opening at four o'clock, and grew steadily as the evening wore on. As early as eight-thirty, the supply of tickets for sale at the gate was exhausted, and tickets hanging from the coats of earlier arrivals were being surreptitiously collected and sold to those who had not had sufficient foresight to buy them earlier. Maxwell Hall and garden were thronged with a gay crowd thoroughly imbued with the Carnival spirit and ready to take a chance on anything that turned up. A hilarious interlude occurred during the auctioning off of the suckling pig that had been snoozing contentedly in a daintily trimmed baby's crib since the opening of the Carnival. The pig was a big hit, and proved his popularity and personality by the steady, almost unbelievable rise in bids which finally came to a climax at fifteen dollars and fifty cents. This little pig had already collected a considerable sum of money on chances but the "lucky" winner put him up for auction.

The Carnival grew noisier and more successful by the hour. Eddie Duchin's men played for dancing in Maxwell Hall; a large crowd waited in line to play Bingo; sounds of smashing china resounded up and down Fort Washington Avenue as three barrels of donated china seconds became the target for the released inhibitions of many hitherto well-behaved and orderly husbands. Dozens of sandwiches started around the grounds on trays and were immediately snapped up; ice-cream cones were selling rapidly at one booth, while across the way strawberry shortcake (with real biscuits) and coffee proved to be a practical and painless solution to the supper problem. From tea time until long after the usual dinner hour, the tea-cake-sandwich service on the terrace was busy handling its customers, and at one point, viewed from an upper window of Harkness, the picture reminded one of the crowd waiting at the Swedish Pavilion Restaurant during the early days of the Fair.

The fun went on and on. The Medical Center was enjoying itself en masse, from the experts who operate on Y Floor to the occupants of Floor R and above. Everyone came and everyone brought his friends. And back came many old Medical Center residents, some who had not been back for five years or more. Until late evening the crowd stayed and played and took chances and stood in line waiting to get rid of its money.

The drawing for the Ford came off at ten o'clock. After much complicated preparation the drum, containing the thousands of stubs from tickets sold for the car, was placed between Miss Young and Mr. Bush. The final number drawn after several eliminations gave the car to Mr. Maurice Groff, a technician in the Biochemistry Laboratory of the Medical School, who will now be able to take a long anticipated trip through Canada this summer. The Board of Managers and Mr. John F. Bush made possible this Ford DeLuxe Sedan on which 11,950 chances were sold. Every department rose to the occasion with the result that $2,987.00 was realized on the car.

Time, energy, and plenty of hard work were responsible for the amazing success of the Carnival and the committee in charge wishes to express its appreciation and thanks to the following departments for their marvellous cooperation: Grounds, Housekeeping, Linen Control, Nutrition and Stewards, Occupational Therapy, Operation and Maintenance, Pharmacy, Printing, Protective, Purchasing, and Social Service. Special mention should be given to Mr. E. C. Bingham and his department for their skillful arrangement of the loud speakers and the building of the booths as well as for their high score of $525 in the selling of chances on the car. Through Mr. Bingham's influence, the "neon" Red Cross sign was donated. After the Carnival this was given to Miss Annie Thomas to present to the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross.

A repast of delicious food planned under the skillful management of Miss Nelda Ross and Miss Gertrude Brown and other members of the Nutrition department, in cooperation with the Steward's department, was cheerfully and efficiently served to the guests by many volunteer waitresses. Mr. Henry Landon, Purchasing Agent, secured many donations of all kinds for the Carnival. The Bingo table was a huge success and was managed by members of Miss Janet Thornton's Social Service Department with the help of Dr. Cagle and Dr. Levy. Dr. Province arranged for first class barkers from among the internes who carried the thing to such an extent that they were in a state of pseudo-laryngitis the next day.

Decorations for the Carnival and posters advertising it were done by a number of people, including Mr. Alfred Feinberg, the artist in the Medical School, and Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Bethke of the Art Department of the Institute of Ophthalmology. Miss Sadie Shapiro and Miss Katherine Collins, members of the Social Service Department at the Neurological Institute, were responsible for the artists and the handwriting expert, and a group of French children in costumes who danced and sang.

It would be impossible to give separate mention to all the members of the Department of Nursing who contributed to the success of the Carnival. Their untiring efforts, their ingenuity and enterprise were responsible for the collection of hundreds of dollars and much of the fun of the occasion. The internes of the various hospitals were most helpful in many ways and the attendings were well represented and generous in their donations. In fact there was not a department of the Center that did not represent some contribution. Many are the tales of individual efforts, such as the selling of chances over a weekend, and the securing of handsome prizes from various establishments to be sold for chances. Contributions were made in large and small amounts to such an extent that a check for $7,275.00 was sent to Miss Florence Johnson of the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross. This financial return was eminently satisfactory. Equally gratifying was the manifestation of the splendid spirit of cooperation which is always demonstrated at the Medical Center when the various departments become one in a common cause.

HISTORICAL DATA

A GROUP of people working together for a common purpose can do amazing things in the way of producing ideas. Thanks to the enthusiastic response of our Alumnae Association and their willingness to help, these ideas are being formulated and carried through. In other words, plans for the Anniversary are well under way.

Right now we are turning our attention to the past—delving into old attics and trunks, so to speak, and unearthing fascinatings bits of information which, when pieced together, will give us a more complete and colorful picture of our school. One source which has produced some "treasures" is our complete file of Quarterly Magazines. (1906-1940). These are being catalogued, and at the same time being perused for facts which in those days were news—now history. For example,

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

1—In the old hospital, the first Graduation Exercises were held in the dispensary.

2—When the American Journal of Nursing was first published, our Alumnae Association held nine shares of stock, the largest block of stock held by any Alumnae Association.

3—In 1910 Presbyterian Hospital purchased three electric ambulances.

4—Our familiar book-plate was designed for us by Dr. Alfred Jerome Brown and presented by him to the school in 1910.

5—Plans for the affiliation between Presbyterian Hospital and College of Physicians and Surgeons were entered upon as early as 1911.

Perhaps you could go back to the "old days" and send some "Do You Knows" that would be of interest to us all.

AMERICAN SCANDINAVIAN FIELD HOSPITAL

Correction—Vivian Olson 1940 went abroad with the Field Hospital. The editor wishes to apologize for confusing Vivian Olson 1940 with Elizabeth Olsen 1939.

[The following is taken from letters received from Delphine Wilde.]

Stromsund, Sweden
May 22, 1940

NOW that the Unit has settled down for a period of waiting, there's time to write a little about our small hospital at Grong, Norway, during the last of April and first two weeks in May.

The trip to Grong from Gaddede on the Swedish border was something I'll never forget. We travelled with all our supplies in nine trucks—three ambulances and a Ford touring car. Left Gaddede at 2 A.M. and going over the mountains got caught in the after drifts of a big snowstorm of two days and had to wait to be shovelled out. By 5 P.M. the next afternoon we were finally off the mountain, a distance of fifty miles since our start. Had dinner, our first meal of the day. Then we went into a valley where the road was mud and someone of the cars was stuck every fifteen minutes. You've never seen such roads. It took seven hours to go fifteen miles and in the process one truck turned over into the ditch! We arrived at Grong at 2 A.M.

The hospital at Grong was situated in a boarding school about 2 Km from the village, — which had been bombed quite badly before we arrived there. The railroad and bridges were still objectives for the Nazis whose bombers flew over several times a day, either just surveying the territory or dropping an explosive or an incendiary bomb in the vicinity of the station. The planes came right over the A.S.F.H. roof, often flying so low that we could see the men in the cockpit (no anti-aircraft there to scare them up). Tho told to go to the cellar, we would crowd in the doorway and gaze, and wait for what would happen in the village; when the bomb was an incendiary, we could see the flame and smoke—which fortunately did not last long, since they did not succeed in hitting any large inflammable place.

Then on the third or fourth day there, while the Unit was at lunch, the sound of a plane drew everyone to the window. It seemed to be flying right into our hospital, and when we suddenly heard the rat-tat-tat of machine gun fire and saw the smoke, everyone dived under the tables or for the cellar. We realized a bit later that they'd been shooting at the Norwegian sentries on the bridge just 200 meters below us. Guess they wouldn't dare attack a place that flew both the Stars and Stripes and a Red Cross flag, but after that we were somewhat more careful.

Meanwhile we had been working furiously to set up our hospital. As the freighters which carried some of the bulky equipment, such as beds, bedside tables, desks, and much linen never reached Norway, we had to manage with what the Norwegian military had been able to collect for us. The main ward, in the gym of the school, boasted an odd collection of 33 beds—some of them modern hospital cots, and others old fashioned wooden bedsteads of all descriptions—no bedside tables, nor desks, nor chairs, nor cupboard. Fortunately, however, it had one little room outside the ward with running hot and cold water —which served as work room, utility room, hopper closet, etc. The only toilet was down a winding flight of stairs in the basement. However, attics are great places in Norway too, and when I discovered a few stools, some straight chairs, and a desk up there, I was overjoyed. Other ward space was available in class rooms—but we didn't set that up.

The operating room was set up in a large living room—whose only water supply was from our utility room. The Primus stoves we'd brought worked well for sterilizing instruments, and our 2 autoclaves went into action without trouble.

Our first patients were civilians who had been hurt by bomb fragments or machine-gun fire, as there was no fighting going on in the Grong vicinity. Three days later our ambulances got going with a bang when a Norwegian troop train was wrecked, probably due to sabotage.

Between noon and 1:30 P.M. that day, I saw more fresh fractures than ever in so short a time before. There were all varieties: skulls, arms, ankles, backs, thighs—and they had six layers of clothing to be removed. At 9:30 P.M. Dr. Fishwick wound up the day's work by putting a Kirschner wire thru a femur, and by 10:30 P.M. the lights were finally out in the ward and most of the soldiers asleep—from exhaustion more than from narcotics. They were all very fine boys, and I was much upset five days later, after the Germans had occupied Grong, when the Commandant asked us to take a few German patients who had minor troubles, such as a bad scalp wound from being kicked by a horse. But it had to be done, and we soon had 3 "Nazis" off at one end of the ward (having previously discharged a few of the other cases). However, these were nice boys too, members of a division from the Austrian Tyrol, and most of the Norwegians did not seem to resent them too much.

Our hospital was soon running quite smoothly — with attending rounds by Dr. Fishwick at 8:30 A.M., and dressings and plaster work starting at 10. Everyone was anxious for more patients, but with the German occupation, it was impossible to get any Norwegians through from Namsos or Snaasa. As work slackened down, we took long walks on the roads where our uniform coat and cap was our pass to the German sentries. It was very disheartening to see the French and British anti-aircraft guns, machine gun carriers, and tractors that had been pulled along these roads and abandoned. It was still more discouraging to learn a few days later that the best thing to do was to transfer our patients, most of whom were by then in plaster or ambulatory, and to depart ourselves. The one poor chap with wire traction was left at the school with a Norwegian student nurse to take care of him, and a Norwegian doctor to visit him.

And so we dismantled our hospital and packed it away in the nine trucks and three ambulances and started our hard trek through the mud of the Namsdal and the snow of the Norwegian border mountains, back to Sweden. It's quite a job to move a hospital even when it's a "Field Unit." As for the personnel, they are now quite resigned to spending from 18-24 hours on the road, either sitting on the front seat of a truck, or wedged in between dressing drums and duffle bags in the back of an ambulance, with a chocolate bar q. 6 h. for food and solace.

Now, we are living in a church here in this beautiful lakeside village, awaiting orders to go to Northern Norway or Somewhere in..... By the time this letter reaches you, possibly the paper may have news as to our whereabouts. Meanwhile, we find it quite comfortable sleeping on a straw mattress box springed by two wooden pews turned seat to seat. The A & P menus still seem quite palatable, possibly because the air here makes one so ravenous, or else because the nurses on K.P. are such good cooks. (We've given our Swedish cook time off to visit Stockholm).

Thank you all again for the wonderful send-off that the Presbyterians had. We think of the Medical Center often, but not with homesickness yet. Just would like to have some of you drop in by parachute for an evening's chat. Miss Olson, Miss Westcott, and I are in good health—and ready to go anywhere. It seems terrible to think of what's going on in France now while we are idling here.

May 22, 1940.

FROM A LETTER FROM THEODORA WESCOTT

After these many weeks since we left the fold, I shall at last send you all the letter I have so many times wanted to write.

It is difficult to know where to start, for I realize that you have been able to follow our progress fairly well by the New York papers—and are, no doubt, as surprised as we are at what has taken place.

By the Quarterly which arrived yesterday and which was the most welcome mail I have had, I know that you do not visualize us in Finland. Perhaps the decision not to go there was a disappointment to us, but conditions over here were then, and are still, changing so rapidly that we could appreciate the difficulty in deciding where we would best be of service.

At any rate we went to Norway and at Grong set up a very adequate and comfortable hospital of about sixty beds. This was in a boarding school long since evacuated, so we were also able to establish living quarters. But, the war's scene shifted again, and in the end our services in Grong consisted of caring for about thirty patients who had been injured in a train wreck indirectly the result of the war.

And so it was decided that back to Sweden we would come. We have been in this small town about eighty miles from the border for several days now, awaiting further orders. What our ultimate destination will be is still a problem. Of course we are all disappointed not to be able to serve in the way which we had hoped and yet we realize the circumstances surrounding us, and so making the best of it, keeping up our spirits and ever hopeful that our "break" will come soon.

In spite of all, this is an experience never to be forgotten. We have been travelling in twelve large trucks, in the backs of which are packed the tons of equipment and supplies we brought with us. We have gone over a thousand miles in this way, and it is indeed a wonderful sight to see us on the road with our trucks painted with large red crosses and carrying American flags.

We have lived all ways of living! Hotels, schools, and now we are established in a church! With beds down either side and a long wooden table down the center, we have managed very well though it is a bit disconcerting to look up and see palms and a pulpit! We, the girls, have organized in groups for kitchen duty, and it is indeed miraculous to see what delicious and surprising meals have come out of our supplies.

The country here is beautiful, on our way to Norway we travelled on roads with banks of snow on either side as high as ten feet. At that time, too, the many many mountains were a mass of white, changed to indescribably lovely colors by the sunrises and sunsets. Now, however, and all within three weeks time, summer is definitely here. Every bit of snow has gone; the trees are budding, and the sun is very hot and persistent, for it leaves us only between eleven and two!

I must confess a bit of nostalgia for Presbyterian as I think of graduation so soon to come. I shall miss it terribly. Please know that I will be with you all in spirit. And please convey my congratulations and best wishes to those who are receiving their diplomas.

We are all well and happy, and safe so far. Although we have seen a good deal of action around us, we have not been molested, and have had nothing but respect from all.

Please remember me to one and all, and though I have not written, you have been in my thoughts many times. Thank you so very much for the Quarterly. I have devoured every word eagerly.

June 24, 1940.

From a letter sent by Miss Wescott on June 24th to Miss Louise Christman we learn that the "Unit" has moved from its church headquarters to the second floor over the movie house, where a solarium and auditorium function as separate dormitories. They have graduated from kerosene burners to a real stove. Miss Wescott writes that they occasionally have "fresh meat but fresh fruit, green vegetables and fresh milk are among the missing." The members of the unit are distressed that they must sit idly tucked away in a small Swedish village of 1000 inhabitants when they are equipped and so ready to be of service in Europe's maelstrom. The red tape of governments however will not loose its ties and the unit must therefore keep itself busy as best it may in this quiet and peaceful town of Swedish people who seem far removed from the ravages of wars which are devastating the rest of Europe.

NATIONAL BIENNIAL CONVENTION

Helen Goodale, '32

THE American Nurses' Association, National League of Nursing Education and National Organization for Public Health Nursing held their biennial convention in Philadelphia from May 12-17, 1940. The Convention theme was "Nursing in a Democracy", a very apt topic.

The Presbyterian Hospital was well represented with full-time delegates, and also a large number of daily visitors. Those attending the entire session were:

Miss Young
Beatrice Langmuir '27
Ernestine Arnold '27
Dorothy Robinson '34
Louise Kent '37
Betty Godsell Anderson '37
Helen Goodale '32

All those attending the meetings were impressed with the varying trends in nursing, and the steady progress being made toward improving the status of the profession. Considerable stress was laid on the place of the nurse in the community, not only in her professional field, but also in her personal contribution to the life of those around her. Mrs. Curtis Bok expressed it in this way, "Learn community facilities, develop an extra curricular activity which is outside your profession and which contributes to the total community." She urged us to discuss the community at our professional meetings. She said we should try to perfect our own personalities, to forget the drudgery in our work and watch the higher parts of our calling. Dean Howell states that nursing education should continue the democratic trend started in homes and schools. We should prepare our graduates better for the sudden freedom they experience at the completion of their training. Dr. Alan Gregg, at the Red Cross meeting, gave a very stimulating address in which he pointed out that in nursing generosity is not enough, patriotism is not enough, nor is "successive" passion enough, one must have a steady desire to be useful in sustaining life and hope. He added that education begins when a man starts from raw material to attain results which he cannot see, and which may be long in coming. Dr. Gregg discussed two ways of learning: through symbols and words, this leads to erudition, and through experience, which leads to skill. It is only from that skill that we derive joy and courage. He concluded his address by reminding us that when water is muddy, it clears if we stand still and wait.

The Convention opened with a Florence Nightingale Service on May 12th. The following night the joint opening session was held in Convention Hall, Major Julia C. Stimson presiding. At the close of the speeches a historical pageant was presented. Louisa M. Kent, '37 has written her report of the pageant and it follows:

"FORTY YEARS OF NURSING IN A DEMOCRACY"——

On Monday evening, the opening night of the Convention, the American Journal of Nursing presented a pageant entitled "Forty Years of Nursing in a Democracy." This pageant was put on at Convention Hall which is a colossal edifice rivalling Madison Square Garden in size, and although there were reported to have been 10,000 of us there, the place was by no means full.

The purpose of the pageant was to show nursing as depicted through the pages of the American Journal of Nursing from the beginning of that publication (and before), up to the present time. Considerable research was done in the Journal office in planning the scenes and writing the script, and the direction and staging of the Tableaux were done by a member of a professional theatrical group in Philadelphia. The cast, which was a large one, was made up of graduate and student nurses from nine different Philadelphia hospitals, along with a troop of Boy Scouts. The pageant was on quite an elaborate scale—and was extremely well done.

The general plan was to have each period shown as a series of three scenes. For this a "triglyph" was built with three separate panels independently lighted. In general two of these panels were showing at one time while the third was dark. During the showing of the scenes a masculine voice narrated the events depicted and the characters instead of being motionless as in most tableaux, carried along the general trend of the story by their actions.

The first three scenes were intended to show the background for later developments; (1) Florence Nightingale in one of the wards at Scutari; (2) Miss Alice Fisher, one of Miss Nightingale's own pupils at Blockley (now Philadelphia General); and (3) the Sisters of Charity who came to this country early and typified the work of religious orders.

In the second group, "The Nineties", a meeting of the Committee on Periodicals of the Nurses Associated Alumnae which created the Journal was depicted in the central panel; on either side were scenes showing events of the decade which had marked effect on nursing, — Jane Addams at Hull House typifying rapid growth of social settlements which affected the later development of public health nursing; and the Spanish American War which indirectly led to the establishment of the Army Nurse Corps.

In the group entitled "The Turn of the Century", the central panel showed nurses representing the six alumnae associations which had sent in substantial lists of subscriptions for the Journal while it was yet "unborn". These Alumnae were: Presbyterian (New York,) Boston City; Johns Hopkins; The Illinois Training School of Chicago; Garfield Memorial, Washington; and Massachusetts General. The uniforms the nurses wore were actual uniforms worn by nurses from those schools at the period indicated, or exact copies of those uniforms. The Presbyterian Hospital uniform with its puffed sleeves and cap set at the 1890 angle intrigued all of us, — while the Johns Hopkins uniform had something so familiar about it that we were all taken back to night duty in Bablies and half expected Miss Quinn to step out of the Tableaux and speak to us.

The next scene — entitled "The 1900's" — showed Miss Mary E. Davis, Chairman of the Journal Committee, trying to get the first issue of the Journal into the mails. The Nurses Associated Alumnae was not then an incorporated body, and the post office required evidence of responsible management before it could accept the Journal for mailing. Having no other recourse, Miss Davis made herself and the Editor, Miss Palmer, the "Entity," taking full financial and other responsibility for the magazine in order to get it in the mails on time.

"Historic 1912" was the big occasion when the A.N.A. purchased all the stock in the Journal, and burned the cancelled notes shortly after.

"After the Armistice" showed, in the center, the beginnings of our present national nursing headquarters. This was an outgrowth of the Red Cross Bureau of Information designed to help place nurses returning from overseas.

The Tableaux, "Nursing, Today and Tomorrow", depicted a few present day developments,—a community nursing bureau; graduate study; Red Cross disaster service; general staff, private duty, and public health nurses, — all in action.

The Tableaux, up to the final scene, were designed to show how nursing in this country has developed since 1900 and what forces have molded it. The final tableaux a typical modern family surrounded by nurses from all fields of nursing was intended to show the main and original purpose of nursing, — to safeguard and care for the family.

The pageant was really beautifully done, — and I for one would like to see it again (about a quarter of a mile nearer the stage). There is some discussion about giving it in New York during the coming year. If this is done, remember we definitely recommend it as entertaining and instructive, as well as amusing.

All the round tables and meetings were vastly informative and most interesting. Following is a report on one at which the present accreditation of nursing schools was explained. Beatrice Langmuir, '27 kindly reported on this for us.

"THE ACCREDITING PROGRAM FOR SCHOOLS OF NURSING"

The National League of nursing Education presented their Program for the Accrediting of Schools of Nursing at the National Biennial Nursing Convention in Philadelphia to a very interested audience of nurses — The aim of this program is to elevate the standards of nursing schools, their teaching programs and the grade of student accepted in the schools and by improving these schools improve nursing care to patients. Each school that applies for accrediting is to be studied by members of the Committee of Accreditors who work with directors and instructors in hospitals studying the methods and standards of teaching used in the schools. The cost of the survey is to be carried by each school applying and is $250.00. The N.L.N.E. has applied $27,000.00, to cover expenses so far. Of 122 schools which have applied for accrediting 31 were visited last year and 91 are to be visited in 1941. In New York State many schools were surveyed, the surveyors spent approximately three days in each school one day being with an affiliating school. Survey blanks are sent to the Schools before the visitors go to the hospitals to give time for study and decision of questions asked of the faculty.

The list of accredited schools to date is to be published in a special bulletin when the study is finished, schools not listed are not necessarily below standard as some have not yet applied for accrediting and it will take time to inspect those which have applied.

The belief of members of the Accrediting Program is that schools with high standards will maintain their standards and that those which are below par will either improve their schools or eventually be discontinued through lack of recognized accrediting. It will also elevate present standards and will be a recognition of a school's standing before the State Board of Nurse Examiners. The student nurse as well as the graduate nurse will have a firm foundation on which to begin her career and accredited schools will have superiority over non-accredited ones. Graduate members of a school will have need to uphold their school's standing and the faculty will necessarily strive to keep their teaching programs up to the required level.

The Reverend John L. Martin who is a consultant to the Committee on Accrediting and Superintendent of St. Barnabas Hospital for Women and Children in Newark, New Jersey said that he compares the accrediting program for nursing schools with that adopted by Medical and Dental associations in the past which set new standards for their schools, it decreased the number of mediocre schools and made the existing schools recognized by their survey and accrediting. He also stated that any hospital whether it had less than 100 or more than 200 beds is large or small in relation to the size of the community which it serves and if there is only one hospital in a community it must of necessity be a good one to efficiently serve the needs of that community, therefore accrediting would insure all hospitals with nursing schools a greater service to their patients.

The Schools that have been visited feel that the survey of their school and hospital is a stimulating experience for their members, that the patient is benefited and that there is better supervision and teaching, the institution too is aware of the necessity for the highest standards to give the patient in the hospital their utmost in care.

On Thursday noon the Presbyterian Alumnae Luncheon was held, and there were 51 present. Under Miss Young's always successful planning, the table was a sight to behold with our blue cornflower centerpieces, and the meal a veritable "melt-in-your-mouth" product. During the meal each alumna rose, introduced herself, and told what her graduate position was. We are a motley group — and a list of the numerous accomplishments would leave no doubt in your minds as to our "Community — interest I.Q." We had as our guests Miss Dorothy Daubert, on the staff at Neurological Institute, and Miss Louise Knapp, formerly of Vanderbilt Clinic.

And now may I inject a personal note? This was my first Convention, but I assure you it will not be my last. It was a most interesting and stimulating experience, and I advise all of you who have not already attended one, to try it. You will be well repaid.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF MISS YOUNG

The National League of Nursing Education published a picture and biographical sketch of Miss Young in May. Miss Young was one of the seventeen nurses chosen from all over the country to receive this distinction. Miss Eleanor Lee was asked by the National League of Nursing Education to write the biography and with Miss Young's permission it has been published. The picture of Miss Young was taken by Bachrach. One of the functions of the National League of Nursing Education is to prepare pamphlets and reprints for educational purposes in Schools of Nursing. Copies of the picture and biographical sketch may be obtained for ten cents from the National League of Nursing Education, 50 West 50th Street, New York.

Sympathy is extended to Cora Crowder Barnett, in the loss of her husband Charles M. Barnett who died suddenly of a heart attack on April 26.

Virginia Harrell writes that the Greenwich concept of its hospital has grown from the addition of twenty new rooms to a completely new hospital of a hundred and seventy beds, with new power plant, laundry and all facilities. The hospital has engaged the same architects, Crowe, Lewis and Wick, who built the Doctor's Hospital. Margaret Campbell Winters is in charge of the Physiotherapy Department of the University of Chicago Clinics.

1920

Elizabeth Curtis has been appointed State Advisory Public Health Nurse in the New Jersey State Department of Health. Miss Curtis is the first nurse to receive this appointment.

1921

Margaret Eliot, President of Cobble Court, Inc. Auxiliary to Nurses' House, with the officers and other members of the committee assisted at the ceremony for laying the first cobble stones for the "Cobble Court" at Nurse's House, Babylon, L. I. on May 28, 1940.

1926

Sympathy is extended to Marion Sieverts Holland, in the loss of her mother who died very suddenly early in the Spring.

Jean Wallace Bianco received her Bachelor's degree in June 1939. She has an appointment with the Henry Street staff and later hopes to start studying for her Master's in Child Development.

1928

Ora Sullivan's husband, Dr. Alfred L. Burgdorf, who has been Senior Epidemiologist of the Connecticut State Department of Health, has been appointed Health Officer by the Hartford Board of Health. Dr. and Mrs. Burgdorf and their one year old son are now living in Bloomfield, a suburb of Hartford, but expect to move into Hartford in the near future.

1929

Virginia Hartman, ever ready for adventure, packed at a few hours notice and flew across the Atlantic on the clipper to take care of Mr. Myron C. Taylor who was critically ill in Rome. The papers reported the news of Mr. Taylor's operation by Dr. Whipple and a well known Italian surgeon and stated that his condition was satisfactory.

1933

Miss Margaret MacIntire has accepted the position of nurse in the Ground Office on the Pan American Airways.

1934

Florence M. Harvey, '34, read a paper on "Psychiatric Nursing in a General Hospital" before an audience of three hundred nurses at the Biennial Convention in Philadelphia.

1939

Mary Shepard Anselmo has been working with the Visiting Nurses Association in Burlington, Vermont. She has also been supervisor of a Housekeeping Aide Project whereby women are trained to go into needy homes in which the mother is ill.

ALUMNAE SHOP

Neurological Hospital

The Alumnae Shop in Neurological Institute was opened on June 24, 1940. Miss Electa Griffith is in charge, and a welcome invitation is extended to all to come, to see, and to buy.

We now have three shops and a staff of four full time and one part time worker as well as two very loyal volunteers. Any member of the alumnae or any friend who would care to volunteer in the shop would be most enthusiastically received.

——OTHER NEWS——

Dr. Allen O. Whipple is now in Rome. He flew across to Portugal on the clipper on June 18th in answer to an urgent call from Mr. Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's representative at the Vatican. On June 26 a dispatch from Rome reported that Mr. Taylor "underwent an operation which lasted two hours. His condition was reported as satisfactory. The operation was performed by Dr. Allen O. Whipple of New York assisted by Prof. Raffaele Bastianelli, one of Italy's most famous surgeons. The envoy became seriously ill while in Florence and was brought to Rome two days ago to Prof. Bastianelli's private clinic. Dr. Whipple and Mrs. Taylor came to Italy from the United States by air."

From an article in the July number of the Reader's Digest entitled "What You Can Do to Help the Allies" we quote the following: "Many wish to do more than simply write a check. Dr. Henry S. Dunning of New York secured a State Department permit to solicit funds, wrote letters to dental surgeons all over the country, and was able to ship what is believed to be the world's first operating ambulance for air raids. Manned by a plastic surgeon, a dental surgeon, a dental mechanic and an anesthetist, it can speed 50 miles an hour to bombed areas, care for shattered faces before infection sets in and simplify the later plastic operations that prevent disfigurement. Now the British cable, '20 to 25 plastic surgery ambulances urgently needed.' Any one wishing to do such a job as Dr. Dunning's should write to the Allied Relief Fund."

IN THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS

The following poem was printed on the menu for the dinner in celebration of the fiftieth reunion of the class of 1890 of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University.

Methuselah ate what he found on his plate
  And never, as people do now,
Did he note the amount of the caloric count—
  He ate it because it was chow.
He wasn't disturbed, as at dinner he sat,
  Devouring a roast or a pie,
To think it was lacking in granular fat,
  Or a couple of vitamines shy,
He cheerfully chewed every species of food,
  Untroubled by worries or fears
Lest his health might be hurt by some fancy dessert,
  But—He Lived over Nine Hundred Years!

Dear Miss Young:

.....

We are passing very hard and dark days. We found our niece after twelve days. She was pursued for 10 kilometers while taking sick and wounded off the border.

Now we do not know where she is. Her mother, one of my sisters, was in our family house near Paris. She spent two days and two nights in caves (cellars) which were part of the Henry the Fourth cartel (armory). She was alone with people who, like her, had no caves (cellars). She heard our beautiful stone bridge blow up and, as our house is very near it, we think it must be gone too. She is now near Valence, she left with what she had on her back, losing everything they owned. It might be our turn any time now. We have taken many precautions but bombs on a house do not let many things untouched. I wanted to send my oldest sister away from Toulon, but when we arrived at the Bandol station, no more trains for travellers. She is eighty years old. We have no news from her only son. She is always full of hope, but if we have to fly in the woods at any time, I would prefer to be alone with my niece.

You will know as soon as we do what will become of us. I may not be able to write to the States later on.

The population is calm but, anxious faces everywhere.

We hope God will not let France perish.

Believe me yours very sincerely,

ADELE LOUISE FAURE.

——ANNUAL MEETING——

THE annual Meeting of the Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing was held on Friday, June 7, 1940 at 3 P.M. in Maxwell Hall. Mrs. Fordyce B. St. John, president, presided.

The following reports were presented:

Report of the Treasurer
Helen Young, '12

This report is printed in full on page 65.

Report on the Revision of By-Laws
Margaret Eliot, '21, Chairman

Miss Eliot read the various changes, namely "Articles of Incorporation" and the provisions governing the election of Honorary Members. It was explained that these revisions on the Articles of Incorporation were essentially the same but are reworded for simplicity and economy of phrases. We are indebted to DeForrest and Elder for assisting in the revision. It was voted that the changes be adopted.

Alumnae Representative on the Nursing Committee
Marie Byron, '17

The Nursing Committee met seven times in the past year. As your representative on this Committee, I report the following as being of interest to you.

Miss Young brought before the Committee the question asked by many of our members as to the possibility of diverting a certain percentage of the Income derived from the Radio and Alumnae Shops to one of the Alumnae Funds, since Alumnae are responsible for these activities. A resolution was made by the Nursing Committee that the moneys collected in this way should not be diverted from the original purpose, the School of Nursing Endowment Fund. Miss Maxwell started these two Alumnae projects in 1928 and the hospital helps to support these activities in many ways; light, rent and accounting for the Shops.

The request to the Board of Managers of the private duty nurses for an eight hour day at seven dollars per day with two meals was reported at the meeting in September, 1939. The following is the action taken by the Board of Managers.

Excerpt from Minutes:—

"A discussion ensued wherein it was pointed out that the request as made by the special duty nurses would establish a higher rate for special nurses than pertaining in the hospitals in the City, which is $5.00 per day for the eight hour day, and would bring up the question of an increase in the general duty nurses' salaries. It was thought that if considered at all it should be in co-operation with other hospitals and after a careful scrutiny of the effect on base pay of the upwards of four hundred graduate nurses employed by the hospitals at the Center. In view of the far reaching effects the Board did not express sympathy with the proposal as made. Upon motion duly seconded the matter was referred to the Nursing Committee for study and advice".

On Oct. 1st, 1939, a new plan was started for the direct payment to the private duty nurse for her meals.

$8.20 per day for 12 hour duty
5.80 per day for 8 hour duty

The additional $1.20 for the twelve hour duty nurses is based on three meals per day at 40 cents per meal, the 80 cents for 8 hour duty nurses, on two meals per day.

The patient is charged $1.50 in addition to the $7.00 for a special duty nurse on 12 hour duty. This means that the hospital still retains 30 cents for overhead; i.e., maintenance of locker rooms, guarantee of patients' accounts, etc.

At the March meeting Miss Young reported that G. P. Putnam's Sons were anxious to publish a new text-book on practical nursing as a successor to the one for which Miss Maxwell was responsible in 1900. It has been decided to make the new book an Alumnae project, the nursing staff here being responsible for its preparation and the proceeds going toward the Emma Baker Kennedy Scholarship Fund. The date of publication will be June, 1942, at the time of the Fiftieth Anniversary.

Following Mr. Bush's suggestion that economies could be effected by concentrating attention upon the four items, equipment, laundry, light and food, an exhibit of abused equipment was prepared by the Nursing Arts Department. Articles sent to the laundry by mistake over a two weeks' period constituted one section; in another a day's breakage of solution flasks was on display; right and wrong methods of drying rubber goods, boiling syringes and cleaning ink wells, made up other units. Posters called attention to the cost and were most effective. The total attendance at this exhibit was 822.

At the April meeting Mrs. Henry P. Davison reported that in the original survey of the Neurological Institute, certain recommendations were made for additional general duty nurses and orderlies, nurses' aides and floor clerks. Some of the additional nurses and orderlies have been appointed but the other matters have not been taken care of as yet. Mrs. Davison expressed appreciation for all that the Board of Managers has done at the Neurological Institute.

The subject of the celebration in 1942 of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Presbyterian School of Nursing was discussed in the May meeting. The Committee volunteered help toward the $5,000.00 estimated expense of this undertaking and are interested in all plans for this anniversary celebration.

A cooperative experiment was arranged with the Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service for two weeks of observation in public health nursing for the college graduates with advanced time credit, in the class of 1940. It is impossible to plan for any of the regular "outside" affiliations in the "short course," yet those students should have at least a glimpse of the public health field in order to decide if they might like to practice there. Our experiment, which lasted from November 1st to December 15th, 1939, proved so successful that we hope to repeat it again this year. The University financed it, at a cost of $698.00 which included the students' tuition, carfare and lunches, and general duty nursing to replace their service on the hospital wards. The American Journal of Nursing is to publish a report of the experience entitled "Shadowing the Public Health Nurse."

The pageant depicting the historical development of the Red Cross presented by the students in the History of Nursing Class was repeated as a "benefit performance" for Cobble Court, Inc., of which Margaret Eliot '21 is President. The proceeds ($1,000) were given for the building fund of the new wing of single rooms at Nurses' House in Babylon, known as the Eleanor Robson Belmont Wing.

94 students entered the School in September, 1939.

There are on file (as of June 1st) one hundred and twenty applications for entrance in September 1940: 61 probable degree candidates (25 of whom are college graduates entitled to time credit) and 59 diploma candidates.

Dr. Rappleye presented the Columbia University diplomas to the short course students in the September section of 1940 on March 5th in the Medical School. Ten of the thirteen graduates, who finished the two year and three months' course in nursing in December or January, were present. The date on the diplomas is February 28, 1940.

The class of 1940 with 88 members is the first class to graduate under the direction of the Faculty of the Medical School of the College.

The new diploma bears the signatures of the President of the Board of Managers of the Presbyterian Hospital and the Dean of the Medical School.

Report of the Alumnae Distributing Fund Committee
Margaret Conrad, '20, Chairman

The report for 1939 appeared in full in the Quarterly Magazine for January 1940.

A total sum of $1,840.22 was received, with 290 of our graduates and several of our friends as donors. No official intensive drive was conducted, but the class agents were active.

This year's receipts bring the grand total for the Fund since it was established in 1934, to $10,719.00.

* College graduates with time credit.

The fund was distributed as follows:—

Sick Benefit	$ 200.00
Pension Fund	200.00

1920 Memorial Scholarship

A. Eva Kohler, 1940

Every graduate will shortly receive a graphic representation of the class record for 1939 arranged according to the percent of living members who contributed. A total of 18% of our 1635 living graduates seems to be a good point to concentrate on for improvement. These cards will be sent out from the office, and you will probably also hear from your class agent again in the fall.

The class agents are recommending the adoption of class quotas for achievement by 1942, the Anniversary year, to be made up by multiplying the number of living graduates in each class by $10.00. This would mean an average gift of $3.33 from every member for each year. The class agents have some very interesting plans for reaching this goal, of which you will all hear more from time to time. I hope you all realize how much we owe to the enthusiasm and hard labor of our class agents!

The Committee members for the coming year are Eleanor Hall, '36; Ruth Williams, '17; Anne Pyle, '38; Helen Stoddart, '28; and Ruth Dean FitzGerald, '14 (arranged in order of length of term).

Contributions received for the Fund up to June 6th, 1940 amounted to $1,475.66.

Report of Alumnae Shops Committee

Since the last Annual Meeting the Alumnae Shop Committee has turned over $3,500 to the Endowment Fund. To date $22,715.41 has been transferred. Inventory of April 30, 1940 shows assets to the value of $3,878.97 and cash on hand $3,226.45. The Harkness Shop has been completely remodeled and is doing a good business. The Neurological Shop is to open shortly after June 15. Miss Rhoda Reddig resigned as chairman of the Shop Committee in March when she left for Ann Arbor and Miss Ernestine Arnold was made chairman to finish out Miss Reddig's time.

Report of the Education Committee
Eleanor Lee, '20, Chairman

Emma Baker Kennedy Scholarship Fund

A Scholarship of $300.00 was awarded this year to Mary E. Heath, '37 who was given a leave of absence from the staff of the Henry Street Visiting Nurse Service for study at Teachers College, Columbia University.

In the fall term a Scholarship of $150.00 was awarded to Alice C. MacKinnon, '32 who finished the course at Simmons College for a B.S. degree in February 1940.

In the spring term a Scholarship of $150.00 was awarded to Helen F. Pettit, '36 who received a B.S. degree from Teachers College at the Columbia Commencement on June 4, 1940.

Head Nurses' Convention Fund

Three Head Nurses went as delegates to the New York State Nurses' Association Convention in Buffalo in October: Jean S. Biddle, Head Floor Nurse at Sloane, Emily J. Simonson, Head Floor Nurse, Second Division Surgical Service at Presbyterian and H. Tashjian, a Bellevue graduate who is a Head Nurse at the Neurological Institute.

In May, four Head Nurses were delegates at the American Nurses' Association Convention in Philadelphia: Ernestine R. Arnold, Assistant Supervisor of Nurses in Vanderbilt Clinic, Beatrice Langmuir, Assistant Supervisor in the Operating Room, Louisa M. Kent, Head Nurse at Babies Hospital and Dorothy Robinson, Head Nurse at Sloane. Reports were given by the delegates at the Head Nurses' meetings following each Convention.

The proceeds from the sale on Alumnae Day of blue and white boutonnieres were $400.50. The balance on June 1st was $89.50 which gives a total of $490.00 in the Head Nurses' Convention Fund for next year. We are pleased that the American Journal of Nursing published a short account of our Head Nurses' Convention Fund in the June issue.

Legislative Committee
Emily Bauer, '09, Chairman

At the 1940 session of the New York State Legislature about 3,000 new laws were proposed.

The only bill passed, which directly concerns nurses, the Todd Bill, extends the deadline for licensure, under the Nurse Practice Act of 1938, until 1941. Also provides that one engaged in nursing in this State during the year ending July 1st, 1938 although not at that time a resident of the State, is eligible to take a practical examination for license as a practical nurse.

It is to be noted that the time for filing applications, namely July 1st, 1940, is not changed by this law.

Several bills unfavorable to hospitals and nurses were defeated. Among them the Lonis Bill, which would have changed the underlying principle of the 1938 Nurse Practice Act by permitting nursing without a license, provided the licensed titles were not used.

The Phelps-Wagner Bill, and a similar bill by Senator Hampton, to allow C.I.O. and A.F.L. affiliates to share with the State Nurses Association the right to nominate candidates for the examining board and the advisory council. Though variously amended, none of these bills was finally reported in either branch of the Legislature.

Senator Page's Bill, to terminate the right of the State Nurses Association to make nominations for the examining board and the advisory council, passed Senate, died in Assembly Rules Committee.

Senator Buckley's bill, making undesirable changes in regulation of nurse employment agencies, passed the Senate, died in Assembly Rules Committee.

Report of the Chairman of the Private Duty Nurse Group for the Year
Mary E. Brundage, '33, Chairman

The year past has been a notable one for our group for the following.

In June 1939, at a meeting of the private duty group, a committee was appointed to draw up a petition to be presented by Miss Helen Young to the Board of Managers. It was to request consideration of instituting an eight hour day for our group throughout the Medical Center, at a fee of seven dollars, excluding meals. We had hoped that by setting a precedent, the other hospitals of the City would follow suit.

However, our request was denied by the Board of Managers with the explanation that at this time with economic conditions as they are it would be unfair to the patients to inaugerate such a change. Of course, we were all greatly disappointed but the majority of the group would prefer to continue as we now are, on twelve hour duty, rather than attempt the city wide standard of five dollars for eight hour duty.

Since October of 1939 the Special Nurses have been receiving eight dollars and twenty cents a day excluding meals. This system has worked out extremely well. It is of especial benefit to those nurses who do not take all their meals at the hospital. Tickets are obtained at the registry for admission to the dining room. The cost of the number of tickets purchased is deducted from the bi-monthly salary checks.

Beyond this the committee has had several meetings with Miss Young to discuss problems as they arise and we are grateful to her for her interest.

Report of the Quarterly Magazine
Winifred Kaltenbach, '20, Chairman

In the year 1940 the Quarterly again lives up to its name and will be issued four times in the year. The Alumnae are fortunate to have Helen Goodale, '32 for the next editor of this magazine which is so vital a part of the life of the Alumnae Association for it is the mouth piece for and of the organization and represents through the years a true history of our school. I wish to thank the members of the Board for their cooperation during the past year. The Board for the October issue and the coming year is as follows:

Helen C. Goodale, '32, Editor

Elizabeth Allanach, '20
Winifred Kaltenbach, '20
Margaret Eliot, '21
Cecile Covell, '26
Mrs. Allen Look, (Maria Auchincloss, '32)

Report of the Red Cross Committee
Marjorie Peto, '26, Chairman

The Junior class with the assistance of the graduate nurses and other students raised $1,020 for the American Red Cross annual drive in 1939.

Report of Social Committee
Margaret Eliot, '21, Chairman

The 1940 Alumnae Dinner for the Graduating Class which seems to be the main function of this committee is now past history. We moved again this year from Pierre's to the Plaza which seemed to be a very satisfactory change. The graduates looked very charming at their two large tables which were further decorated by lovely white peonies and blue delphiniums very generously given to us by Mrs. Talmage. The other tables had big centerpieces of pink sweet peas which the garden committee presented to us. The entertainment was Mr. Paul Draper whose connection with the Draper family and Presbyterian Hospital is well known. We are very grateful to him for his magnificent dancing and I think everyone was delighted. This was followed by a short speech by our President, Mrs. St. John, after which we had a few words from Miss Young. The President of the Class, Miss Bellinger, announced that the Class of 1940 had made Dean Rappleye an honorary member. We were delighted to have Mr. Sage as the last speaker. Then followed dancing and more dancing until we suddenly heard "Home Sweet Home"!

I want to thank Mrs. St. John for her kind interest and assistance and Eleanor Lee for everything she did to help me with the arrangements, — and it was a very large amount!

Other than this the work of the committee has not been terribly strenuous because the social part of our meetings is usually taken care of with some coffee, sandwiches, in good times cake or cookies.

50th Anniversary Committee
Emily Clatworthy, '98, Chairman

Last June when I spoke to you we had just had the first meeting and luncheon of the Central Committee and Chairmen of the six committees who will really have charge of the Anniversary Celebration both in its preliminary arrangements and when it occurs.

The Central Committee of about 20 represent their classes or groups and serve in an advisory capacity—but these six committees are doing the work. They are:

Miss Deming ..... Hospitality
Miss McClune ..... Publicity
Miss Conrad ..... Program
Miss Eliot ..... Entertainment
Miss Warman ..... Registration
Miss Lee ..... History

In the October issue of the Quarterly you saw the very nice Caption which Ruth Page, class of '37 drew and which we will use for Anniversary news until the Celebration is over. We are also using it on Alumnae stationery. After the second meeting which was held in January, another Committee was formed consisting of Miss Young, Chairman, Miss Davies, Mrs. St. John, Miss Byron, Miss Clatworthy to serve as a clearing house to which questions could be referred.

Miss Conrad has made arrangements with Dr. Coffin of Union Theological Seminary to be present and speak at the church Service. This is to be held Monday night, June 1st in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in which at least eight graduations took place after we outgrew the capacity of Florence Nightingale Hall. Dr. Buttrick the present Minister said we could have organ, choir, and anything else he could give us, as he had always considered that our church.

Miss Eliot has been negotiating since March for the ballroom at the Waldorf Astoria for the dinner, but that is not as yet settled, as June 3, 1942 was not free. Though one starts more than two years ahead there is difficulty, but we have hopes for the Waldorf. In getting the History largely from the Quarterlies, Miss Lee needed to have their contents indexed. This presented quite a problem until Miss Caroline Nicoll, class of '29 came to the rescue and has been doing this difficult work. We thank her.

The third meeting was held in April and was well attended. A tentative program has been mailed to all graduates, not only members of the Alumnae Association,—as we want everyone back in 1942.

The School of Nursing Committee and the Board of Managers have been approached with our propositions and will help us financially.

The world is in a terrible state and all our plans may have to be changed but we must carry on—plans cannot be made but can be changed at the last moment. And now what can you do? We want the enthusiasm of every graduate to help make the Celebration a success. Write about it to your former classmates urging them to come and bring their husbands — we'd like to see them. We are going to give them a good time and there is much to see at the Medical Centre and many new things in New York. I have heard of groups who are planning to come together—perhaps you know of someone living in the West or elsewhere who could start such a group for we have graduates everywhere—so do get enthusiastic and round them up. Write someone a letter, get in touch again. We can arrange everything for their enjoyment but we need your help badly in making the Fiftieth Anniversary the success it must be—so we beg of you—get busy.

Annual Report of the Meeting of New York County's Registered Nurses Association—District No. 13

Annie M. Thomas, '05

There have been many discussions in regard to the problem of the Registered Practical Nurses connection with Registered Nurses Organizations.

A most interesting Institute was held during the year with prominent speakers on important subjects in the Nursing and Medical world.

It was asked that the House of Delegates give public recognition of Westchester Nursing Service Center until January 1, 1941 in order that said service could advertise in the Journal of Nursing as any registry in the District wanting recognition must apply annually for professional recognition noting any change in policy.

The subject of an increase of dues per capita be presented to each Alumnae Association for an opinion was discussed.

Westchester Nursing Service Center has a deficit and has asked New York County Registered Nurses Association about financing it as a loan, the amount of the deficit being about $4,000.00. It was suggested that each Alumnae Association in the District be asked to help raise the amount by an increase in dues or otherwise.

New York State Relief Fund is to charge 2% interest on loans.

Four general meetings of the Public Health section were held at various Hospitals and Henry Street, the program being most interesting.

The History of New York County Registered Nurses Association of District No. 13 has been completed and the manuscript turned over to the District for publication.

Total assets in the general Fund are about $1,900.00.

Total membership 6,296 an increase of 300 over previous year.

Revisions and By-Laws will be ready by the House of Delegates at the September Meeting.

Officers elected for the ensuing year are:

President ..... A. Isabel Byrne
Vice President ..... Lorraine Denhardt
Finance Officer ..... Edith Murphy
Directors ..... Margaret Conrad, Ann McCabe
Delegate ..... Annie M. Thomas

Membership Committee
Cecile Covell, '26, Chairman

Miss Covell presented for membership in the Alumnae the eighty-eight members of the Graduating Class.

Following this Beatrice M. Bellinger president of the graduating class presented the class gift to the Alumnae. This gift of a beautiful Columbia banner on a standard was particularly appropriate in the first year that the diploma of Columbia University has been awarded under the new University plan.

Report of the President to the Members of the Alumnae Association

Jane Rignel St. John, '13

One of the pleasant privileges attached to the office of President is to be able to let yourself go, and just talk all you want to. But I realize that the annual meeting is necessarily a long one, so I will make my greeting "short and sweet."

This year marks a mile-stone in our nursing education program, and to Miss Margaret Conrad goes great praise for the successful attainment of this long cherished ideal, — of having the academic award bestowed upon our nurses by Columbia University. You are familiar with the names of the nineteen nurses to receive the academic degree, — the Alumnae is justly proud of them, — and of Miss Conrad.

I should like to express my thanks to the officers of the Alumnae Association and the chairmen of the Committees, for their loyalty and co-operation, — and sustained interest. The year has passed very quickly, the Alumnae has the satisfaction of having accomplished important work in many fields, too numerous to mention.

I need not call your attention to the handiwork of Miss Margaret Eliot, — who so graciously helps to sustain the inner man. The success of our dinner on Wednesday last was due to her meticulous care of details, — and I wish to express our gratitude to her at this time.

I am especially indebted to Miss Helen Young for her advice and help in all matters concerning the Alumnae Association.

Every one of us owe Miss Young a debt of gratitude, for she carries high the torch, which our beloved Miss Maxwell passed on to her.

In the name of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing Alumnae Association let me welcome the members of the class of 1940, eighty-eight in all. In the days to come, we will all be put to the test and our souls will be sorely tried. We must be courageous, stand firm, and above all be true to ourselves, and to our Christian beliefs.

Let me again thank you for the confidence you have placed in me.

We have lost, through death, nine of our members in 1939. I will ask you to rise, while I read their names, —

BLOOD PLASMA FOR BRITAIN

Evelyn Elwood, '39

ON October 18th Presbyterian Hospital received its 2000th donor for Britain since the Plasma Bank opened early in August. The response of men and women to this call to aid England has most certainly shown great generosity and eagerness to help in this cause which is as much our war as it is that of England. People in all walks of life have come to us—from office boy to financial magnate.

Since the beginning of the Plasma Bank here at Presbyterian, which was one of the first to open, we have been averaging fifty donors per day—five days per week. At least sixty percent of these donors have been women. At this rate one can readily see the amount of help which has been and will be needed to handle the situation. The cooperation of the doctors and nurses thus far has been outstanding. Volunteer workers including secretaries, guides, aides of all kinds, together with technicians, have offered their services.

In view of the fact that the majority of nurses offering their services are able to see only the first steps in the collection of plasma, what goes on after each pint of blood is taken will no doubt be of interest to them.

As the blood is obtained, it is taken to the hospital Blood Bank on floor Q and is allowed to stand in the refrigerator for seventy-two hours. In that time it is felt that the ultimate amount of plasma is formed. The average is a forty-five percent yield. It is during this time that a Kline test is done on each blood—positive ones being discarded. Under sterile technique the plasma is then drawn from each bottle and pooled which means that the plasma from approximately eight bottles is put into one. This is cultured and after seventy-two hours is ready to be "Baxtered"—that is putting the plasma into a one liter vacuum Baxter bottle containing five hundred cc. of normal saline. This saline is necessary since the globulins or proteins of the plasma must be kept soluble. After a second negative culture the Baxter bottles are then ready to be packed in cartons and sent to the warehouse.

All shipments thus far have arrived safely and in good condition. The fact that plasma can be preserved for months, and also that cross-matching is not necessary before using, makes it a more valuable product than whole blood in this particular situation.

The work of collecting blood in this country for Britain is directed by the Red Cross and the Blood Transfusion Betterment Association. The Red Cross does the appealing for donors, and the appointments of the volunteers to the various hospitals are made through the Blood Betterment Association. At this time there are ten hospitals in New York doing this work.

Throughout the past week some men and women have come to us to give their second donation of blood after a six weeks lapse of time which has been advised.

How long this will go on, we are not sure, but we do know that England's wounded soldiers and civilians still need our plasma, and I certainly hope that the enthusiasm and co-operation which has been shown throughout the hospital will continue.

REPORT OF THE NEW YORK STATE LEAGUE OF NURSING EDUCATION CONVENTION

The Biltmore, October 17-18, 1940

ELEANOR LEE, '20
Chairman Arrangements Committee

The 31st annual meeting of the New York State League of Nursing Education was held at The Biltmore October 17-18, 1940. Great interest in these meetings was evidenced by the enthusiastic response from all parts of the state,—from head nurses, teaching supervisors, instructors, directors of Schools of Nursing, lay members of Nursing Committees and hospital administrators.

Grace A. Warman '17 President, presided at the opening business session on Thursday morning. An excellent program on "Student and Staff Health Programs in Schools of Nursing" was presented by the Health Service of the Bellevue School of Nursing. Dr. Clarence E. de la Chapelle, Physician to Bellevue School of Nursing spoke on "Health Criteria in the Selection of Candidates for Nursing Schools" and Dr. J. Burns Amberson, Jr., Physician in charge of Tuberculosis Service Bellevue Hospital spoke on "Tuberculosis Among Nurses".

The outstanding event of the convention was the luncheon in the ballroom of The Biltmore on Thursday, October 17, 1940 which brought together a notable group of representatives of Nursing Committees of Schools of Nursing and Public Health organizations, directors and faculty members. An invitation to attend the luncheon was sent to ninety-five prominent educators in schools and colleges in New York State and this invitation was made possible by the generosity of the New York City League of which Helen Young '12 is president. Following the luncheon three addresses were given which will be published in a pamphlet by The New York State League of Nursing Education. The following topics were presented.

"EDUCATION FOR THE LIFE OF TODAY"
Virginia C. Gildersleeve, Dean, Barnard College,
Columbia University, New York, N. Y.

"THE QUALIFICATIONS NURSES NEED TO HAVE IN ORDER TO MEET MODERN DEMANDS"
Elizabeth G. Fox, R.N., Executive Director, Visiting Nurse Association, New Haven, Connecticut.

"THE VOCATIONAL COUNSELOR'S PART IN THE SELECTION OF NURSE CANDIDATES"
Anne Laura McGregor,
Rochester Public Schools, Rochester, N. Y.

Margaret Eliot '21 was chairman of the luncheon committee and its success was due to her efforts. Jane R. St. John '13 was a member of the committee.

At the Red Cross meeting on Thursday evening Mrs. August Belmont spoke on "The American Red Cross Today and Tomorrow."

Mrs. Belmont said that at present the American Red Cross is concentrating on aid to Great Britain, as it concentrated earlier on each of the nations as they came under attack. Most of the supplies being sent abroad, are distributed by the British Red Cross and the women volunteers working under the direction of Lady Reading, the branch of the service concerned with aid to civilians.

She spoke of the work of 120 mobile canteens that are in service in England. These crews, she explained, go into the stricken areas after bombings, to give first aid to the victims.

An Historic Pageant of the Red Cross was presented by our students in the Class of 1940, a repetition of the pageant prepared in January 1940 as a class project during the History of Nursing course. The music for the pageant was supplied by the student nurses' orchestra under the direction of Manola R. Phillips, Recreation Director. Eleanor A. Hall, '36, Mary A. Ludes, '36 and J. M. Ada Mutch, '36 worked very hard behind the scenes.

On Friday morning Miss Isabel M. Stewart, Director of the Division of Nursing Education, Teachers College spoke on "Nursing Education and National Defense". Miss Stewart is Chairman of the Committee on Educational Policies and Resources of the Nursing Council on National Defense.

Miss Stewart said that as soon as our national census of nurses is completed, we shall have a better idea about the employment situation. With the bitter lessons of the past before us, we are naturally anxious to avoid an oversupply of nurses; at the same time we do not want to have a serious shortage. The Army has asked for 4,000 additional nurses before June, and similar expansion in the Navy and veterans' services, with a probable increase in Red Cross and official public health agencies, is expected to bring a demand for 5,500 students necessary to replace the 4,000 withdrawn from general service.

Officers for next year were elected Grace A. Warman '17, President of the New York State League of Nursing Education and Eleanor Lee '20 member of the Board of Directors.

GENERAL HOSPITAL No. 2

Marjorie Peto, '26

MAJOR JAMES C. MAGEE, Surgeon General of the United States Army, asked the Directors of the Presbyterian Hospital to organize, on paper, a medical unit to correspond to Base Hospital No. 2 of the last war. The Unit is to be known as General Hospital No. 2. The personnel is to be made up of 46 doctors and 120 nurses, all of whom are expected to be ready for active service at any time. The appointment is not to interfere with the civilian status and occupation of the doctors and nurses. It is merely a preparedness measure.

Dr. William Barclay Parsons and Dr. Kenneth Turner have been appointed to enlist the doctors. Marjorie Peto, '26, has been appointed as chief nurse.

The nurses are being appointed from the group at the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. To date there are ninety nurses who have been assigned to the Unit. The status of these nurses does not become military until they are called for active service.

Any Presbyterian nurses or nurses working at the Medical Center who wish to join the Presbyterian Unit can send to the School Office for an enrollment blank. The nurses must be members of the Red Cross Nursing Service and should be willing to serve any place the Unit is sent. The Unit will be under the control of the United States Army and will be supported by the United States Government.

AIR-MINDED NURSING

Margaret E. MacIntire, '33

THE whole world is becoming so very "air-minded" and "air-conscious" in these days of intense air warfare that it is only fitting that Presbyterian have a part in a factual way in the more peaceful, friendly aspects of aviation, wherein the airplane spans continents and nations to bring them within a few days and hours of one another and our homes. Pan American Airways Company has recently appointed Dr. Frederick H. Shillito, of the Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital staff as their Medical Officer for the whole Atlantic Division and set up through him the first Medical Office in this Division. I have the privilege of being his Nurse-Secretary working on a full time basis as an employee of the Company.

In July, when I went with the Company at New York Municipal Airport (LaGuardia Field) the Medical Offices were still being prepared and we had only temporary quarters. But Pan American had just "stepped up" its Trans-Atlantic service to a three-trip-a-week schedule and the personnel necessary to fly and care for three huge "Clipper" seaplanes had to be increased. A Medical Officer was needed to keep the flight crew in good physical condition by frequent check-up examinations as well as routine complete physical examinations. Also first aid and medical advice was essential for the "ground crew" and staff workers. And continually, qualified men in commercial or Army or Navy aviation who hoped to join the Company had to have pre-employment complete physical examinations.

Difficulties arose, as is always the case in anything quite new. It was necessary to collect equipment that had been obtained when the Atlantic Division was based at Baltimore. At that time one Trans-Atlantic "Clipper" ship was carrying on alone. Equipment and arrangements were essential for a complete First Aid and Medical Office; a nurse's office, a laboratory with innumerable "usual" things and all the more specific eye and ear testing instruments that a "Flight Surgeon", to use an aviation term, must have. With it all there were so many new things to learn about aviation itself.

Perhaps my first shock came on the first day when the Chief Steward called and we discussed meals and meal time on the Atlantic crossing. My head was buzzing with, "Lunch,—well, subtract four hours, that makes it really breakfast, at such a time—". I realized one had not only to know Greenwich Meridian Time on a basis of 24 hours but subtract for Daylight and Eastern Standard Time—and I was a nurse, conscious of time but not in relation to the whole world. Pan American, aviation, does that to people. Time, space, distance, seem so much smaller these days.

The "Clipper" trip to Bermuda, now on a twice-a-week basis is a mere leisurely "hop" of about 5 hours and has been flown in less than 4 hours. The trip to Europe, going by the "southern" route to Horta in the Azores and Lisbon, Portugal, since the war has shut off the more northerly route to "belligerent" nations, takes 22 hours of actual flying time. The stop in Horta, when weather is favorable, usually takes but an hour. As in all aviation, but particularly where the vast ocean has to be crossed, weather is of extreme importance and effects many schedules.

A Trans-Atlantic Clipper of 42 tons, capable of carrying 74 by day but limited to 30 on oceanic overnight hops because of sleeping arrangements, has a flight crew of 11. The Bermuda ship of 30 passengers has a crew of 7. These are a Captain and four Co-pilots, each with specific duties and ships "watches," 2 engineers, 2 radio men and 2 stewards. The Bermuda plane has a Captain, 2 officers, engineer, radio man and 2 stewards.

The flight crew is selected and two days before their departure they make a 2 hour pre-departure flight to reacquaint themselves with and test the ship, and work together as a group. On this day they come to the Medical Officer for a check-up. The men are exceptionally conscious of the importance of good physical condition, so this may be a mere routine observation of temperature, pulse, and blood pressure, general health since last trip, presence or absence of gastro-intestinal or upper respiratory disturbances, or contacts with illnesses at home. Yet this may be the very time to catch a beginning of something which 3 days later in mid-ocean or in Horta would effect not only the crew member but the entire crew. Thus, the comparatively simple replacement of one man at this time, because of his check-up, may more than justify the presence of a Medical Office.

Complete physical examination with laboratory studies and a Schneider test of physical fitness with careful examination of the eyes is an essential in all Aviation Medicine. Commercial lines have their own restrictions. With Pan American it is a semi-annual program. For a pilot to retain his standing in either of the service branches as a reserve (and many come to us from the service), he must also have their examination. The Federal License necessitates examination. At least four physical examinations a year can make one "health conscious." And to "health consciousness" must be added those things which science has given us in the form of vaccines and serums as a prophylactic measure. Small-pox vaccination and typhoid are continually given to be kept up to date and in some divisions of the Company yellow fever or cholera innoculations are given.

Whenever an applicant is under consideration his physical examination and laboratory studies are often the deciding factor in employment. We have had a busy summer with such applicants.

With a nurse in uniform and a new efficient-looking Medical Office the tendency is always to find out "how it works." And so I found it the first day we opened our office for First Aid in the Pan American hanger building. But in no time at all I realized the confidence the men put in the mere presence of something more factual than a First Aid Kit, and a doctor on the other end of a telephone. Paints and solutions, metal and wood-working machines, plane scaffolding, are but a few of the common potential hazards of any industrial nursing which take no account of the actual servicing of the seaplanes and flight instruments themselves. Each day brings its quota of minor injuries or accidents, some of which we can treat ourselves, some we send to doctors or hospitals.

The secretarial part of my work is principally typing, for as always medical records are important and letters or reports to various departments keep each in touch with our work. My "own perfected system" of typing for my own use and amusement, and Teachers' College papers, has had to go in favor of the accepted variety. Little does a nurse know when she may find typing a part of her qualifications.

Truly, "the world is small," and I am glad to have even a small part in helping to keep those who fly the "Clippers" in the best of health. Aviation is growing tremendously, and when a man can say, as one did to me, "I usually get to bed by eleven, we'll be in the Azores by that time so I'll get to sleep about midnight," one realizes it is pulling oceans and continents ever closer. Since the Atlantic Division is my province I have written of it but I cannot leave an account of this branch without mention of the broader system of Pan American Airways. With the beginning 12 years ago of a lone flight between Miami and Cuba it has grown until, with Pan American-Grace and affiliated systems it covers a greater part of South America and the islands of the Caribbean; it flies the Pacific to the Hawaiian Islands, Philippines, and on to China, and this year has opened routes to Alaska and New Zealand and Australia. Perhaps you have heard of the new Strato-Clipper that can make New York only three days from Brazil, South America, or that it is now only four days by air from New York to Buenos Aires when by boat it takes two weeks, or that Alaska can be reached in about thirty hours from New York.

As aviation grows, so could my enthusiasm as I write of it. My hope is that yours may grow likewise.

AMERICAN SCANDINAVIAN FIELD HOSPITAL

Delphine Wilde, '26

THE American Scandinavian Field Hospital last heard from while "waiting" in Stromsund, Sweden, continued its attempts to reach the scene of action in Western Europe. But it was a bit difficult to arrange the establishment of a hospital when the Germans were in control of one place after another. To get to England from Scandinavia was an impossibility. Therefore, when in late July, Minister Sterling wired us from Stockholm that the "American Legion" was coming over to evacuate American citizens stranded in Europe, his advice was for us to take this last chance to "get out." And thus it was decided.

Mr. Sterling then requested that the doctors and nurses of the Unit be divided up to give each group of refugees journeying up to Petsamo a medical escort. For six days they came: Americans from Germany, Lithuania, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden, etc.,—many of them people who had been living in those countries for years, whose children did not speak English, and sometimes not even both parents, but all anxious to get out of war torn Europe. It was not an easy trip for the old people, or mothers with small children, or the partially ill,—to spend several days and nights on a train, and then to ride for three hundred miles over the Arctic Highway in a jolting, banging bus that raced northward through the Lapland night. Therefore our Staff were able to help in many small ways until this tired humanity was safely stowed away on the ship.

When I say "stowed away" I mean almost literally that, for our berths were down in the hold of the ship, 100-200 people in each hatch where the canvas bunks were in tiers of three. One dodged in and out between hundreds of suitcases to get from companionway to bed. Yet people took it very well on the whole, even when a mounting number of seasick made life none too pleasant below.

The fear of mines of which the American newspapers made so much, seemed not to bother most of these people greatly, perhaps because they had already seen enough of war to develop a "live for the moment" philosophy. Of course it was not pleasant to hear a German broadcaster say that it would be a miracle if the "American Legion" came through safely. But he also remarked on another day that "the passengers on the American Legion are suffering from food shortage," and that we knew to be untrue. We ate without style, from army trays and in such crowded quarters that one had difficulty in approximating spoon to mouth; but there was plenty of food.

The voyage was an interesting one because we were able to talk with passengers who had been in countries where the Nazi machine had crashed through. They could tell of the Fifth Column Activity that made invasion easy, and of the efficiency with which the German command was functioning. This served to corroborate our own opinions formed in Norway and Sweden that Germany has the ability to carry on for a long time.

About the Unit's inability to get where it could be of further use, we were very unhappy, and could only be glad that our supplies had all been given to Finland. That country, though no longer needing help in the way of personnel has great lack of dressings, antiseptics and medicines, for treating the chronic wounds of last winter's war.

And so after a long cold voyage we reached the United States on August 28th happy to be back and yet willing to go again when and where truly needed.

ADDITIONS TO THE FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE COLLECTION

THE most recent gift for our collection was received from Dr. Hugh Auchincloss on October 22, 1940. It is of unusual interest as all of the material pertains to The Nightingale Fund. The original letters from the donors as well as valuable papers and pamphlets relating to The Nightingale Fund are included. This fund amounting to £ 50,000 was used to establish the first school of nursing at St. Thomas' Hospital, London.

The arrangement and indexing of all this material will be a class project for the students in the History of Nursing Course this fall.

Again we express our gratitude to Dr. Auchincloss for his interest and generous gift.

We are indebted to M. Maude Tennant, '04 for the gift of a small sketch of Florence Nightingale reading a book.

Below the sketch is the following inscription
"Florence Nightingale
From an authentic sketch by Colnaghi, of London."

July 26, 1940

Dear Miss Young:

Picture us in this five-room house set down in the midst of 96,000 acres all belonging to this one estate, with nine miles to the gate on the Salisbury side, and twenty-five miles to the boundary on the opposite side, and you may get some idea of the size of the estate. It makes me think of the huge ranches in the West. The country is completely different from that around Hariana although we are only 126 miles from there. Gone are the kopjes with their picturesque formations, gone are the hills, gone are the cactii and the Euphorbia shaped like the seven branched candlestick. Instead we have mile after mile of flat country, just now covered with dry grass anywhere from one to six feet high. Shade trees and wild fruit trees have given place to thorny scrub trees. It is wild country giving little indication except to the soil expert of the fertility hidden below the surface. It is for that reason that we are here. This is good tobacco, corn and wheat country and Stewart is to be in charge of all agriculture with a young white assistant and about two hundred native boys. The most important part of the estate is cattle raising. The owner has four thousand head of cattle which needless to say, require hundreds of acres for grazing. I've never seen so many cattle, some so wild that when they are brought in for their regular dipping, rather than go through the dip, they jump the fence and make a mad dash for the open country.

Perhaps you remember that at Hariana we were only four miles from the Post Office, which also contained a grocery and meat counter, and we received mail twice a week. But here, we are fifteen miles from Rocky Spruit which is no more than a native trading post with the branch post office and telegraph office as a side line. Worse yet, the mail is delivered only on Saturday. We send a native boy on a bicycle early in the morning and he returns sometime in the afternoon. Nor can we buy meat or groceries there. They must all come from Salisbury, fifty miles away! We have been here only ten days so I can't tell yet how everything is going to work out but just now it looks rather formidable.

You would have laughed had you seen our ½-ton Ford truck the day we moved. The furniture had come ahead on the Diesel truck belonging to the estate, but we had the prize load: Shirley's pram and two crates of chickens (three of which laid enroute), on the top; suitcases, boxes and tins of plants, bulbs, cactii, etc., inside the truck, not to mention Hector, the dog, Smoky the cat, Nip and Tuck, Shirley's puppies, all of whom vociferously objected to this method of transport! We had to pass through Salisbury and many were the grins as we went by. Shirley nothing daunted by the sights of the big town kept shouting, "Car, car!" and looking from side to side in a vain effort to see them all.

We are settled now and I am trying to get a flower garden started with the plants we brought down, and also to have the garden boy clear land down by the river for a vegetable garden. Water is pumped from a well by a windmill for the three houses (the owner's, the cattle manager's and ours). It comes by pipe to a tap outside the house and when there is a good wind we have plenty of water, when there is none, there is no water, and the boys have to take the farmer's stand-by, a four gallon gasoline tin, and go to the river a quarter of a mile away for water! Needless to say the laundry all has to be done at the river.

One of the first things Stewart did was to get out the two small dispensing cabinets and put them on the back verandah ready for use. There have been several patients already and since this is the only place where any medical aid is available, I can see where a larger supply of medicines will soon be needed.

Three days ago, an extensive veld fire broke out near one of the fenced ranges where thirteen hundred head of cattle roamed, so it was all hands to the rescue. Stewart took a number of boys in our car, the big truck took forty more and away they went carrying branches with which to beat out the fire. I could see the fiery blaze lighting the sky for miles along the horizon as night came on and could form some idea as to the progress of the fighters by the brilliance of the glow, one section becoming dark while another suddenly lighted up. I wondered if the prairie fires our grandparents and their fathers fought were similar to our veld fires. Stewart came in at eleven for some food then went out again having already walked about fifteen miles, and it was five o'clock before I saw him again, black and grimy with dust and smoke, having been on his feet twenty-three hours. Yesterday afternoon they went out again to fight another fire but were back by midnight. They had seen many different kinds of buck all fleeing from the fire, and six ostriches, one of which had a nest with two eggs. Stewart brought one home and now I've got to concoct ostrich omelette for supper! They also reached the headwaters of the Sabi river, narrow enough to step across, the same Sabi river where we spent our honeymoon, seeing crocodiles, hippos, etc. We are quite thrilled to know that it rises here on the estate. One of these days I shall go up and see it with Stewart but not when veld fires are raging.

There, I hope this introduction has given you some idea of our new home! I also hope it will make you realize how much letters and magazines will mean in the coming months since we are necessarily thrown on our own resources for entertainment. Shirley and I are the only white females for miles. She's lots of company now that she is walking and beginning to talk; much too full of mischief at times.

So, as the English say,

Cheerio,

EDITH J. AITKEN-CADE.

EXECUTIVE ENGINEER'S BUNGALOW,
BADULLA, CEYLON

Miss H. Young
622 W. 168th St.
New York City

19 April 1940.

At the moment I am up here in India's popular resort where British and many other European people come for the hot season—and there is a large American school here. This school seems to suit me better than any English school I have tried for my little eight year old son; so I expect to leave him up here when I return to my home and husband in Ceylon in June.

Now I am on a holiday and away from my teaching in the St. John's Ambulance Nurses Corp. and my Red Cross, Child Welfare Clinics, Social Service, and a number of other "irons in the fire"—none the least being the Girl Guides of which I've been made Commissioner for our Uva Province.

Kodai is full of such interesting people besides being gay with "teas"—morning coffee parties, concerts and "Shows."

It was nice seeing Mrs. Inez Johnson (Inez J. Jones, '19) and her family before they left here to sail for New York, and I have recently met Miss Katherine Hardeman ('37) who is up here from Madiera having her holiday.

Last Christmas I spent with my family and sister in Joffna (Ceylon) where Annette Beals ('37) is at work in Manipay. So I get a chance to talk about Presbyterian once in a while.

With very best wishes to you and to all my P. H. friends.

Yours sincerely,

Louise Clark Bingham, '18.

The next meeting of the Alumnae Association will be held in Maxwell Hall on November 14, 1940. Mrs. Virginia Hartman, '29 and Miss Delphine Wilde, '26 will tell us about some of their recent experiences abroad.

Your attention is called to the date, November 14, which is the second Thursday in November.

IT'S the same old story of September—the grand entrance of the new, the feeble departure of the old. This year the incoming class numbered one hundred and thirteen, twenty-six of these students already with college degrees. And the outgoing class of this year—they're leaving one by one, and will continue to leave until sometime next May. The same old story of September continues—the Probies' hair higher and waist bands tighter each day; every club out with nets of fine phrases and inducements to capture the new students; Seniors returning from vacation and staying for a second cup of coffee at dinner in order to watch both the five-twenty and six o'clock Probie Processionals.

Student Prints seeks a new adventure this year. The time is ripe, thought the staff, for major changes, new policies, great advances in the literary world. And so here it is—Student Prints, no longer a monthly newspaper, but a quarterly magazine, "edited for the purpose of encouraging those students interested in creative writing, and giving to them an opportunity to have their ability recognized." There remains one page given to club notices, personal pennings and current, local news. The first issue is to be published for October fifteenth, and then let's watch it!

The inevitable Probie Party initiated the new students into the Hall's gay and festive activity. A new faculty skit, lollipops, flitting and flustering Juniors, impressive Seniors, and impressionable Probies filled Sturges, and the lounge and 116. There'll follow soon the Hallowe'en party and its cornstalks, and saddle shoes, and summer dresses. The Glee Club has made tentative plans for the presentation of a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, and Dramatic Club is sponsoring try-outs for their future productions. Already there have been many cozy little parties in the kitchens, which are, one by one, being curtained and outfitted with utensils.

Last January the non-degree group of the class of 1941 presented for the school in connection with their History of Nursing Class an historic Red Cross pageant. They were asked to repeat it as a benefit for the Nurses' Home in Babylon. This they did, and were able to contribute five hundred dollars toward the Home's construction. Once again they have been asked to present the pageant—this time on October seventeenth in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Biltmore for the New York State League of Nursing Education Convention. The same evening Mrs. August Belmont will speak on "The American Red Cross Today and Tomorrow."

And so the same old story of September goes on, punctuated with the new events. The happy thought is to know that October, November, the winter, spring and summer follow—each with her pleasant sameness and glorious beginnings.

E. WALLACE.

THE CLASS OF 1943

Mobile Unit of the American Field Hospital Corps.

A MOBILE FIELD HOSPITAL

Margaret Eliot, '21

THE American Field Hospital Corps, formerly the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps, an organization of American citizens, has constructed a mobile field hospital for the relief of civilian war victims in Europe. Its sixteen weatherproof tents and twenty-five trucks and trailers, equipped with the most modern apparatus, were set up by special permission on what is known to us as the "South Property". The various tent units include admitting tent, main operating tent, surgical wards, commanding officer's quarters and quarters for doctors, nurses and general personnel. These units include a complete biological laboratory, an X-Ray unit with portable X-Ray apparatus, and sterilizing unit. Besides the refrigeration and supply truck, there are water and fuel trucks, a power truck, an electric generator truck and a machine shop. It is estimated that the complete hospital can be erected and in full operation within ten hours.

As may be imagined, it evoked much interest and attracted many visitors. We were pleased to be asked to help a bit and, after some of our nurses had made up the cots in a Surgical Ward tent of twenty-five beds, it certainly looked more realistic. We were also asked to act as "local color" for some pictures which were taken for publication. With nurses and doctors, some equipment such as instruments and linen (the operating tables, light, etc. were already there) we soon had the operating room tent arranged so that in no time at all "Mrs. Chase" was undergoing a major operation. It was quite exciting to hear an occasional plane flying over us (on its way from LaGuardia Field) and the clicking of many cameras at the same time. The pictures turned out to be very satisfactory.

On November 8, 1940, the Hospital was formally dedicated by Bishop Manning and officially presented to the British Hospitals Association. Shortly after this, they "folded their tents" and now this mobile field hospital unit, the largest and most complete ever constructed for civilian relief, has been shipped to England through the courtesy of the British War Relief Society. We hope that it will be possible to send more of these hospitals.

NEWS OF THE UNIT

THE American Red Cross Nurses are the reserve nurses for the United States Army. At the time of enrollment the nurse states whether she prefers army or navy nursing. The Red Cross sends the name to the Army or Navy and the nurses are assigned by the respective groups to a Reserve Hospital Unit.

The present crisis has caused a readjustment of these Hospital Units. Various hospitals throughout the country have formed Army Reserve Hospital Units consisting of nurses and doctors within their own groups. The Presbyterian Hospital Unit is known as General Hospital No. 2. It is to be called into action only in the event of a national emergency. The nurses who have joined this unit are being transferred from any previous assignment in a Reserve Hospital to the Presbyterian Unit General Hospital No. 2. All the nurses will be assigned by Colonel C. M. Walson, Surgeon for the Second Corps Area, and should return the blank informing them of their appointment to General Hospital No. 2 as soon as it is received.

The assignment to a Reserve Hospital does not prevent any Red Cross Nurse from enlisting now for active service in the Army Nurse Corps. Red Cross nurses are needed and can enlist without impairing their status in a Reserve Hospital Unit. Should the Unit be called the nurses who have had active service in the army will be better qualified for the work to be done and can be transferred from any service to General Hospital No. 2.

It is essential that all the nurses in the Presbyterian Unit keep Miss Helen Young informed as to any change in address or type of work.

MARJORIE PETO, '26.

VOLUNTEER ACTIVITIES AT MEDICAL CENTER

Many of the nurses and some of the other personnel have spent a considerable amount of time in knitting for the Red Cross. Dorothy Rogers, '25 who has had charge of distribution of wool in Maxwell Hall has turned in the following articles to the Red Cross in the past five months:

Socks, adult	101 pairs
Socks, children	7 pairs
Beanies	25
Wristlets	10 pairs
Sweaters with sleeves	46
Sweaters without sleeves	37
Mittens	1 pair
Children's scarfs	2

Mrs. McDermott, who has been organizing workers from Sloane Hospital, has turned in the following articles:

To the American Red Cross:

Baby day gowns, hand-sewed	40
Socks	11 pairs
Beanies	7
Sweaters, children	4
Sweaters, women	2

To the Bundles for Britain:

Sweaters	104
Socks	12 pairs
Helmets for Air Force	20
Helmets for Navy	6
Scarfs	3
Sea Boot Stockings	14

Nearly four hundred nurses have volunteered hours of service in the Blood Plasma for Britain division of the Red Cross.

The Class of 1942 solicited $1,195.00 during the American Red Cross Annual Roll Call.

CHRISTMAS AT THE MEDICAL CENTER

Louise M. Kent, '36

CHRISTMAS at the Medical Center this year was a colorful affair with its decorations, entertainments, and general holiday spirit. Each ward throughout the entire place had its own tree, and some went even more extensively into fireplaces, snow scenes, and other trimmings. In all, 142 trees covered with a total of 1800 electric lights radiated the Christmas spirit for the patients and the personnel. Another tree, 35 feet in height was put in its usual place in the garden, decorated by the engineering department, and was one of the most beautiful sights of the place each night from Christmas to New Years. Christmas morning each patient in the hospital received a Christmas card with a picture of the hospital, and their trays at dinner were appropriately dressed up with Christmas napkins and favors.

Many Christmas parties were held simultaneously throughout the hospital the day before Christmas. As usual the Babies Hospital had its display of large and small dolls dressed in all manner of styles by versatile seamstresses. Each child is presented with one of these dolls, usually the doll of her own choice. The traditional singing of carols on Christmas Eve throughout the Presbyterian Hospital was, as always, the most important part of that evening.

On Christmas Day, the 15 cooks in the various kitchens prepared and served 2500 pounds of turkey, 1000 pounds of white potatoes, 2 bushels of sweet potatoes, and 12 barrels of Hubbard squash. This was augmented by 78 quarts of cranberry jelly, 238 dozen rolls, 388 pounds of bread, 60 dozen stalks of celery, and 1280 grapefruit. 3 bushels of apples and 230 pounds of mincemeat went into the 135 pies which were served. 256 quarts of ice cream plus 16 dozen fancy molds went to different parts of the hospital. 125 pounds of nuts, 15 pounds of mints were a special order, but the milk consumed (1000 quarts) and butter (100 pounds) were somewhat below the usual daily allowances.

Most important event following Christmas was the personnel party which is held each year for all those connected with the hospital aside from the professional staff. For this 2000 invitations were issued and the affair was held on the Roof for three evenings so that everyone was able to come. This year a musical show was given with some unusually fine talent popping up from the ranks of the personnel. Music for dancing was provided by two orchestras, refreshments were served, and another personnel party was voted a great success.

COURSES FOR GRADUATE NURSES

[Editor's Note: All alumnae associations have been urged to cooperate in reaching those graduate nurses who are not now engaged in nursing, but who will be willing to return temporarily to the nursing field to help in the national emergency. We are printing the following announcement in an effort to cooperate in this phase of the nursing preparedness program for national defense, believing that there are many suitable candidates among our alumnae.]

A. Refresher Courses arranged by the League of Nursing Education.

It is important to emphasize the fact that these refresher courses for nurses are in preparation for possible emergency needs during which nursing service might even be on a volunteer basis. Regular employment after taking this course is uncertain, although possible. These refresher courses are being arranged in the various schools throughout the state for those who have been away from nursing long enough to need review practice of techniques and instructions in the many important new developments in nursing. In New York City several schools are ready to function when enough applications are received. If possible, individual preferences on the part of the applicant will be met. However, as the schools offering these courses are few and the special opportunity offered by each school must be considered in relation to the needs of the applicant it will be necessary for the final assignment to be made by the League Committee.

For the applicant the following are essential:

1. Good health.
2. Graduation in good standing from a school of nursing.
3. Registration in New York State.

For the courses, the arrangements are:

1. Two to three months course including directed clinical experience.
2. A special program planned by the educational department and given under the direction of a teaching supervisor.

Additional information about the Refresher Courses may be secured from: Mary Burr (Chairman, Education Committtee of New York City League), 333 Southern Boulevard, New York City.

B. Study courses arranged by District Number 13.

For those who have been practicing nursing more recently, but who would like some instruction, attendance at institutes or special courses such as the evening courses sponsored by Districts Number 13 and Number 14 may be sufficient. Some of the topics are: CONTROL OF COMMUNICABLE DISEASES AND EPIDEMIC PREVENTION, and OXYGEN THERAPY.

Information about the District program should be obtained from Mrs. Grace Woods, Executive Secretary of District Number 13, 50 West 50th Street, New York City; or Mrs. Ethel G. Prince, Executive Secretary of District Number 14, One Hansen Place, Brooklyn, New York.

N.B. All nurses are urged to return the questionnaires for the National Survey of Nurses as soon as possible.

ALUMNAE DISTRIBUTING FUND

The report of the seventh year of Distributing Fund is encouraging in its total amount, ($2,339.04), and in the increase in the number of alumnae contributing (354).

The most significant column in the report is that showing the percent of donors. The card which was sent to every graduate early in the summer, rating classes on this basis for 1939 seems to have borne fruit: whereas last year only ten classes had 20-29% of their members contributing, this year there are 18 classes in this range, and the number with 30-39% of donors has risen from five to seven.

Only two classes have no contributors; and as the bequest came from a member of the class of 1896, we may well feel that its obligations are more than met.

The class of 1914 retires from the list of active classes with agents, with a record of 31% of its members contributing $32.00, as against 13% giving $17.00 last year!

The best records have been made by these classes:—

1897	Largest percent of donors	(38%)
1927	Second largest percent of donors	(37%)
1931	Largest total gift	($100.00)
1920	Second largest gift	($ 90.00)
1916	Highest average gift	($ 9.67)
1903	Second average gift	($ 9.50)
1931	Largest number of donors	(25)
1932	Next largest number of donors	(19)

The Committee is recommending a revision of the goals for the Fund, to aim at 100% of living graduates contributing, and a total of $3,000 annually in donations for the next two years.

Other recommendations for the coming year include an analysis of the services rendered to members by the various funds in 1940; a class agent meeting in the spring before the bills for dues go out; a brief appeal with the bills restating the objectives of the Fund; and a report from the individual class agents at the supper meeting in November, regarding their activities during the year.

No changes are to be made in the class agents until after the Fiftieth Anniversary.

There is a noticeable increase in the general interest in the Distributing Fund, and a much better understanding of its purpose and operation, all of which is very gratifying. The class agents, the committee members and the association officers all have a share in this result.

ANOTHER year has come and gone and our Anniversary is only a year and a half away—not much time in which to contact the graduates and to find out what they want to do and see in that memorable week of June 1st, 1942. So again we print the program and the names of the Committee Members.

TENTATIVE PROGRAM 1942

SUNDAY, MAY 31	Visit to Arlington to decorate Miss Maxwell's grave.
MONDAY, JUNE 1	All day Registration. Afternoon—Anniversary tea. Evening—Service in Dr. Coffin's Church.
TUESDAY, JUNE 2	Trip to Convalescent Home with lunch in the Garden. Evening—Columbia Commencement.
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3	Morning—Hospital sight seeing. 11-1 Clinical Program. Evening—Alumnae Dinner. Dramatization of History of the School.
THURSDAY, JUNE 4	Reunion Luncheons. 4 P.M. Graduation.
FRIDAY, JUNE 5	Alumnae Day. 3 P.M. Annual Business Meeting.

N.B. This will also remind you that Miss Eleanor Lee is preparing the History and would like data especially from the older graduates. If you know the whereabouts of head nurses who were not graduates of the School during those early years kindly send these addresses to Miss Lee at the Hospital for they may have valuable information. Our Quarterly began in 1906. Interesting items occurring before that time will be gratefully received.

Do You Know That:

1. Last year was Mamie's 45th Anniversary with P. H.?
2. When the School of Nursing first started the Probationers' uniforms were almost any color? Miss Clatworthy remembers that hers were pink.
3. P. H. has had representatives in active service in 19 countries of the world?
4. The numbers on the backs of the latest pins are reaching the 2,000 mark?

A RESOLUTION

The following resolution was sent from the School of Nursing Committee to Mr. Talmage:

"In the death of Mrs. E. T. H. Talmage, the nurses at the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center have lost a loyal friend.

Her interest in the welfare of both graduates and undergraduates was evidenced by her many kindnesses. She contributed generously toward the comfort and pleasure of those whose living quarters were within the hospital.

The opportunity given the student nurses to attend concerts during the winter was one example of her desire to share with them the beautiful things of life.

The Alumnae have been indebted to her for many years for the charming table decorations at the annual dinners to the graduating classes.

She was an active, devoted and highly useful member of the School of Nursing Committee from 1929 until her death."

NOVEMBER "ALUMNAE" MEETING

A VERY interesting meeting of the Alumnae Association was held at Maxwell Hall on November 14, 1940. There was an unusually large number of alumnae present. After a short business meeting, conducted by Mrs. St. John, the program for the evening was presented.

Mrs. Virginia Hartman, '29, gave a vivid and glowing account of her experiences on the way to Europe, in Lisbon and Rome, and back again, this last fall. We all felt that we were almost with Mrs. Hartman in her flight over the ocean, her stop at Bermuda, and then the long flight to Lisbon.

The difficulties encountered in obtaining passage from there into Italy were considerable, and not the least of the troubles was difficulty in finding living accommodations while waiting for transportation. Mrs. Hartman had an audience with the Pope, and described in detail the beautiful ceremony and customs of the Papal residence. We all hated to have Mrs. Hartman reach the "returned home" point in her tale, for she wove a magic spell over us all.

Miss Delphine Wilde, '26, told us of her experiences in crossing to Norway and Finland with the American-Scandinavian Field Unit. She had some excellent moving-pictures of the trip across the ocean and into the winter country. We followed via the camera through all kinds of sleeping and living quarters, and queer hospitalization facilities. We realized again what a tremendous amount of reconstruction must be done, and once more were conscious of the indomitable courage of our friends across the seas.

Following these talks we had the usual social time around the lobby in Maxwell Hall, while we stood, coffee-cup in hand, saying, "Do you remember—" etc. Please come and join us in these social hours. The next meeting of the Alumnae Association will be held on February 20th. Your attention is called to the following notice of business to be discussed.

DUES FOR ACTIVE RESIDENT MEMBERS

Due to an increase in dues of District No. 13, the Executive Committee of the Alumnae Association is advising an increase of One Dollar in the dues of Active Resident members only. At the regular meeting of the Alumnae Association at Maxwell Hall on February 20, this matter will come up for discussion. There will be no change in dues ($3.00) of either the Resident associate members or the Non-Resident members.

NEWS BY CLASSES

1920

Gertrude S. Banfield has been at home in Austin, Minnesota for the past two months. Beginning January 20th she will be at the American Red Cross Nursing Headquarters in Washington to help out during the emergency. She plans to stay at the Allies Inn.

1925

Florence Strong O'Connell is local Red Cross Chairman in Bergenfield, New Jersey and is conducting classes in Home Nursing for an enthusiastic group of Bergenfield housewives. The Bergen Evening Record published an interesting account of Mrs. O'Connell's work. She has converted a former game room in her home into a classroom and has furnished it with all the home nursing equipment necessary for the care of the sick. "With businesslike efficiency, Mrs. O'Connell, a qualified Red Cross instructor and authorized school nurse who heads Bergenfield's Red Cross organization, conducts this pioneer group through 2-hour-a-week sessions. Half way through a 12-week course, interest on the part of the pupils has grown to a point where all are determined to be prepared for any disaster at home caused by sabotage, accident, or epidemic. In their own homes they will be able to recognize symptoms of illness, know how to prevent sickness and serious complications, and how to care for sick persons." The Bergen Evening Record, Dec. 30, 1940.

1928

Margaret Arnstein, R.N., was reappointed to the department staff September 16 as consultant public health nurse (educational supervision). Her services will be concentrated in the New York district. Miss Arnstein holds the degree of Master of Public Health from Johns Hopkins University and an M.A. from Columbia University.

1934

Phyllis Cowell is an army nurse at Fort Jackson, South Carolina.

Jane Huntley is Assistant Superintendent of Nurses at a small hospital in Fort Ontario, Oswego, N. Y. This hospital is now being organized, is to be ready Jan. 15, 1941 and will take care of soldiers from surrounding sections of the State.

1935

Beatrice Chambers is a regular army nurse and is now stationed in the Philippines.

Elizabeth Elmore Edwards was interpreter for Miss Alta E. Dines and Miss Elsie M. Lawler at the Fourth Pan-American Red Cross Conference held at Santiago, Chile, December 5-14. Miss Dines, as Chairman of the National Committee on Red Cross Nursing Service, and Miss Lawlor, as a member of the same Committee, flew to Santiago as delegates. Betty Edwards is very enthusiastic about the results of the Conference.

1937

Winifred Wadbrook has a position as Industrial Nurse with the Schenley Distillers Corporation in New York City.

Cara Lucile Conkling is anesthetist at the New Jersey Orthopedic Hospital.

1939

Jane E. Bauer has a position as a general duty nurse at the Orange Memorial Hospital, Orange, N. J.

Rose M. White is an Industrial Nurse with the General Chemical Company, Edgewater, N. J.

Doris Herrington is Industrial Nurse with the Chrysler Motors Corporation. She is working with Dorothy Bennett, '32.

1940

Elizabeth Henabray has a position at the Southside Hospital, Bayshore, L. I.

Hester Brown Hill is a general duty nurse at Mount Sinai Hospital, New York City.

Eileen G. Smith is doing general duty nursing in a hospital in Florida this winter.

Sympathy is extended to Elizabeth Anna Adams whose mother died on Dec. 24, 1940.

1941

Loretta Dwyer has a position as a general duty nurse on the staff of Willard Parker Hospital, New York City.

MISS Sheila Dwyer, Head Floor Nurse on I Floor, who is serving abroad with the American Hospital in Britain, Ltd., has written a most interesting letter to Miss Young. Below are some excerpts from it.

Oct. 13, 1940.

We have been in England now for six days. The trip was comparatively uneventful. The sea grew gradually rougher day by day so that when a storm struck, everyone had grown used to the motion and no one was seasick. The boat had been in drydock or something so it leaked like a sieve when the storm arrived. Many of the cabins were soaked, including ours, and the Atlantic ran up and down the passage, chased by a steward with a dustpan, muttering maledictions under his breath about ships in general, and this one in particular. The crew said the storm was only a light blow, but you can take my word for it that it was a near hurricane. The furniture travelled madly all over the ship, and the crash of crockery was appalling. However, the ship was very steady on the whole, and the trip was as pleasant as any I have been on. There were fifty passengers on board, either English or British Empire subjects on their way to England. They were very cordial to us. We found it impossible to work up any fear. We fooled so much about the boat going down that if it had done so and we had had to take to the open boats, it would have seemed like a continuation of the fooling. I understand that one should not discuss detail of convoy, danger, etc., in letters, although I know that all the details of our convoy were broadcast to the world after we landed by a reporter who had been on board with us.

We experienced several air raids in what is popularly known as a "North-West City", but the whole thing seemed more like the Palisades Park on a toot than war. We also went through a couple in a South eastern city, and several in London. I think it is safe to mention London by name since it has never been a secret that London is being bombed. We saw little damage anywhere except in London, but the damage there is tragic. It is not considered safe to take clothes to the cleaner, or watches to be repaired, because of the possibility of the shop vanishing in the night. Each of us has been issued a gas mask and a tin hat. You may tell Miss Penland that I know just how she felt about her tin hat when she first went to the front in the last war. Personally, I think the only suitable garment is a complete suit of armor. I have not felt any fear during the air raids except when I was alone in a tram in the dark in London. There is nothing on earth as black as the blackout, and nothing so terrifying as to be alone in it with a bomb going off beside one ear and a gun letting loose beside the other. My English relatives have slept fully dressed on mattresses placed on the ground floor, for the past five weeks. Places near them have been repeatedly struck, although the district is purely residential. Friends of theirs who have left the city, have been injured in air raids in small towns, and others have been killed in shelters, so the family has become very fatalistic about the possibility of being hit. The hospital here is perfectly safe. Lord Haw Haw has announced that the Germans need it so we sleep in comfort.

We seem to have fallen into a very confusing spot. This place is an ex-mental hospital taken over by the government as an emergency hospital, the wards of which are staffed by students and sisters of Westminster, West London, St. Thomas's and St. Mary's Hospitals. These latter have been assigned several wards each, in which they are trying to train their nurses. The students work from seven-fifteen in the morning until nine at night, with three hours off during the day. The uniforms are quite a sight. Every once in a while I can imagine that I am looking at a picture in an old history book. The first part of our unit to come over is hard at work in the operating room, or "theater" as it is called over here. We expect to start work soon.

We started work in the hospital on the seventeenth and have been so busy that I have not had time to get back to this letter. The first thing that happened to me was my appointment as supervisor of nurses. The position entails a good deal of running around to find out about such details as laundry, salary, etc., separating members of the group when the arguments get too hot, listening to complaints about service, and accepting criticism and advice from all.

The wards to which we have been assigned are staffed by students of the West London hospital and by V.A.D.'s. As you might have expected, I am busily working on a teaching program. Floor I will be interested to know that I am also working on a procedure book. I think I was working on the sixth revised edition of our books on Floor I, but they have nothing of the kind over here, so that is a virgin field too. They need one badly because of the number of slips that have to be made out. I have come to the conclusion that the only reason there is a shortage of paper over here is because the hospitals have to have it to make into slips: the army, navy, air-force, A.R.P., home-guards, police, civilian casualty insurance, and Park Prewett records. Making them out is bad enough, but delivering them is worse. The hospital spreads all over creation, and the nurses have to do the delivering. The pathological laboratory is exactly one mile from our wards. Fortunately, one of my nurses has a bicycle. It really is the most extraordinary sight to see the nurses in full uniform flying all over the place on bicycles. I am seriously considering getting one myself.

I have discovered that the expression, "Presbyterian Hospital in the City of New York" is international. So many people have asked "Any one of you from Presbyterian?" I have received the following messages for transmission:

Dr. and Mrs. James Beaver Mennell sent love to Dr. B. Stimson.

Mrs. Mennell invited us for lunch one day but we were unable to accept.

Dr. Wilson inquired for Dr. Clay Ray Murray, and also says that Mrs. Wilcox (Betty's sister-in-law) was the best patient he ever had.

Dr. and Mrs. Converse inquired about Miss Kaltenbach. I believe they think more of me because I know her.

Sister Dey inquired for Nurse Joan McClean (Sloane).

Sister Dey is a friend of Sister Julia Waters who was at old P.H. about fourteen years ago.

Nurse Jeans (Royal Vic. Montreal) is a great friend of Miss Ritter and sends love.

One of our doctors brought a neurologist from the Canadian unit to examine one of our patients and the following conversation took place after I noticed "Canada" on his sleeve.

I, "What part of Canada are you from?"

He, "Montreal."

I, "Oh really? I'm from Toronto."

He, "Oh."

I, "Do you know Dr. Penfield?" (N.B. I have met Dr. Penfield only once but I have heard so much about him from P.H. that I feel I know him very well.)

He, "Yes indeed."

I (proudly), "He's a Presbyterian man."

He, "I am myself."

I (in a state of collapse), "Why, I've just come from there! When were you there?"

He (glancing at pin and cap), "I was in old P.H. around '27 and '28."

At this point I had to break down and admit that I had not graduated from P.H., but that I had been there so long that I was part of P.H. and P.H. was part of me. He knows everybody and wants to be remembered to everybody including you, Dr. Auchincloss, Dr. Hanford, "Bob" Loeb (his words). It was not until afterwards that I discovered that I had been talking to Lt. Col. W. V. Cone who is Dr. Penfield's right hand man and head of the entire Canadian Neurological unit!

The blame for not completing this letter before can be placed squarely on English open fires. We have been given rooms adjoining an extremely comfortable sitting-room, in which a fire is lit every evening at five o'clock. I have found it impossible to leave the sitting-room while the fire is lit, and impossible to write in the sitting-room because every one talks at once. I am intensely interested in the English system of training nurses, and when an English sister comes in, I can think up thousands of questions to ask. Another vicious habit around here is after-dinner coffee. We ask people to our sitting-room, or they ask us to theirs for coffee at eight, after dinner, and it is ten or eleven before the party breaks up.

The American unit has taken over the male orthopedic work in this hospital. We have three hundred beds divided into five wards, all of which are staffed by the English, except one, which is ours. There are only three of us on the ward, the rest being English students and V.A.D.'s. Our ward comprises sixty-two beds which are kept full all the time at the expense of the other wards. The patients are a mixture of service and civilians. Some of our service patients are left-overs from Dunkirk. The civilians are in most cases evacuated from hospitals in London and other bombed areas.

I have never seen such a collection of horrible fractures. Most of them are compound, comminuted, and infected. All cases are treated by being put in plaster at once, dressing and all, a method developed in the Spanish war. No windows are cut for dressings, the wounds being allowed to drain into the casts for two and three weeks without changing. By the end of this time, the cast is in such a state that it could carry the patient to the operating room, and everybody almost faints when the cast is cut. The patients do extremely well under this treatment and it is most unusual to see a temperature over a hundred. The patients are the grandest people I have ever met. They never complain about anything. It is not unusual to see a patient white and clammy with pain, and to have him admit only under pressure that "Well, yes. It does hurt a little." They help each other a great deal. I met one of my patients yesterday pushing another in a wheelchair. The one pushing had one arm and one leg in a cast with a walking iron incorporated into the latter. With his one good arm he was pushing his friend about the grounds—his friend having both legs in casts, stuck out straight in front of him. Both patients were having a gorgeous time.

Food here is plentiful but it is all much of a kind. If you hear anyone complaining about beans twice a week, ask them how they would like to have mashed potatoes and cabbage twice a day, five days a week! On the other days we have mashed potatoes and a mixture of turnips and carrots. The meat is wonderful. They serve meals here for over twenty-five hundred people, but still manage to have the meat taste as if it were home-cooked. I intend to visit the chef before I leave, to find out how he does it. I find myself ravenous for all my meals. It is going to look very peculiar if I return from a war-torn country fatter than when I left. No one will believe that I was doing my duty for king and country. Although sugar, butter, and tea are rationed, the rations are sufficient for all purposes except heavy entertaining. Every one runs around with little dishes containing one's butter and sugar for the week.

The weather is typically British. The sun shines for two hours, then it rains for three and so on. I think it is fearfully cold because of the dampness, but these English run around congratulating themselves on the lovely weather, and leave all the doors and windows open. I am dressed now for zero weather in the States. What I shall do when winter comes I don't know. I find all the warm things given to me before I left New York, a tremendous help. I have added a hot water bottle and an electric heater to my collection.

It is queer the feeling one gets about planes. They have always seemed such lovely things and even in London one could admire their beauty. After having admitted casualties straight from a bombed area as they were dug out of smashed buildings, planes now seem things of horror. Even Spitfires and Hurricanes are ugly. I am getting quite adept at telling the difference in planes from the sound. I am still indifferent to personal danger, but the sound of a bomber gives me a sick feeling because of what it represents in mutilated people and smashed homes. One gets to hate even pleasant weather remembering what it may mean to London. These English must have developed cat's eyes since the war began so that they can see in the dark. I cannot see a thing without a flashlight and have been almost run in during an air raid alarm for daring to use it. I have lost my way completely four times when trying to get from the wards to the nurses' home.

When I do arrive I forget that my shade is up and turn on the light without thinking. In the towns I have to feel my way along the wall. The whole of England is alive with soldiers and the sound of the heavy boots coming toward one in the dark is one's only indication of an imminent collision. I dive into a doorway to avoid them, and proceed to knock over several people already there. The people of the towns are extremely conscientious about the blackout. Saturday nights the stores stay open late but one would never guess it from the streets.

The lack of equipment in this hospital is appalling. Let me know if any person you know would like to spend a large amount of money on ward supplies. Actual money is no good as the equipment will have to come from America.

I miss you all dreadfully.

P.S.—I met the matron of St. Thomas's (Miss Hillyers) at the coffee party I went to tonight and she wishes to be remembered to all of you.

[Excerpts from Letter from Nurse in Oslo, Norway]

November 16, 1940.

Including my visit to U. S. A. I think I have learned more this last year than I have ever before. I do hope that our experience at last will serve the benefit of humanity; we have to believe that, have we not?

I am still with my old work, and I love it. We appreciate much more those things which we in earlier days considered to be quite natural. In July I had a wonderful vacation trip with my brother. We were cycling in the mountains, and had a very good time. We did not expect to get opportunity for any kind of vacation this year. It is nice to remember those bright summer days now when the days are short and dark. Last week the city was white with snow; unfortunately it has disappeared again; it is much brighter you see when the ground is white. Never before did I imagine that the moonlight can illuminate as much as it does. We look forward to the moon period; it is much brighter during these evenings. The fall has been beautiful, and not too cold.

Nowadays we are glad to cultivate all kinds of home activities, we have glee clubs and gymnastic parties, and we try to provide for various kinds of evening entertainment. People are sewing and knitting warm clothes for our countrymen who may have lost their things.

I am so glad that I reached home before all these happenings took place.

[Excerpts from Letter from Nurse in Birkenhead, England]

November 17, 1940.

Some nights we have to dress with suit-cases ready to move out if necessary. September 11 we had 3 explosive bombs, 2 in front of the house and one a little further down the road. Over 50 houses involved—no one hurt, which was wonderful. Some badly "shell shocked." We were among those not so badly damaged and we now, after ten weeks, have our 33 windows restored, roof repaired, all door-locks and woodwork as well as outside stone work, kitchen grate, porch and new front door fixed and finished yesterday. The ceiling of the porch and the old front door landed in the hall. Such dust and dirt! The kitchen and dining-room chimneys emptied themselves in the rooms!

A terrific fight overhead before the shock of the explosions and crashing of glass and masonry. A good deal of destruction in Birkenhead town the last 2 months. Public buildings, houses, shops, etc. The last month we have been busy helping to clothe the poor bombed homeless families. Everyone has been splendid in helping. The Wardens, the night of the bombing, were wonderful. After attending to the bombs they were in directly, seeing how we were and what they could do. They seemed to land in with the crashing in of the front door and porch ceiling! I was supposed to be sleeping in the hall. Fortunately my sister's bedroom had only one pane of glass broken so she was able to use it in the day. She sleeps in the dining-room. Most of our neighbors have vacated their houses and stored what was left of their furniture. I could not have managed to remain in the house during the repairs if it had not been for my good "Help" Mrs. H—, who has been coming every morning for over 7 years. She was rather alarmed on the morning of the bombing to find the road barricaded, Police in possession, and the state of the whole road and houses, but she set to and we are now straight again, hoping there will not be a next time.

SCHOOL NEWS

STARRY-EYED and filled with spirit, we all emerged from Student Government Meeting last night, January 7, after listening to Miss Caroline Nicholl, Presbyterian Graduate of '29, talk about the incidents of the past which have made us and our school the great and unsurpassable group that we are. Glad to yet be students and able to be sure of intimate association with the institution for awhile longer, each of us looked down her own road to the time when she might know the pride arising from the knowledge that she belonged to the far-scattered, yet well-united, band of P.H. Alumnae.

Activities flourish in the Hall! Some are constant—Red Cross knitting, Orchestra and Glee Club rehearsals, victrola concerts in Sturges, drives for more quiet in prayers and radios for the Juniors; and the prevailing activities punctuated by major events—the Thanksgiving Dance with its Americana theme to replace the turkey and pilgrims, Christmas Dance with Dr. David Moore as Santa Claus beneath the tree to distribute gifts to all the guests, the Dramatic Club attending "Twelfth Night" en masse, and Ohuivo Club's successful drive for Bundles for Britain. And still plans are being made—Welcoming Ceremony will be January 31, Dr. George Draper being Guest Speaker; open house at Maxwell Hall the night of Valentine's Day; Ohuivo's guest speaker from the League of Nation's Association.

Student Prints' first issue under its new policy was an accepted success—the subscription list hit a new high, and the quality of material handed in by the students was excellent. The Preliminary Students displayed their usual enthusiasm, and it was accompanied by some especially notable pieces of creative writing, among which was Miss Ruth Willan's poem:

DEAR GOD

Is this war yours as well as mine,
Whose gift to whom, this waste of life?
For all of this, are we to thank you,
Or do you share our bitter strife?
Do you care, and does it matter
That men will suffer, starve and die,
And facing death will humbly seek you,
To breathe a tortured "Why?"

Dark dispair; is this yours too,
Born in doubt and bred in fears,
Nurtured by a helpless longing,
Fed with failure, salt with tears?
Do you feel a deepening pity
When we stoop to less than great?
Will you forgive the things we do,
Through misplaced faith and hate?

Or is yours perfection—unbeholden,
With nothing lacking, nothing sought,
And so no triumph, with no struggle,
No sudden joy nor ecstatic thought?
Are taunting dreams a part of you,
Or tears of joy and sweet release?
Or is pain for us; yours—quiet strength?
Dear God, grant us thy peace!

On November 12 a new late pass offense rule went into effect. It reads: (1) That offenses will not carry over from year to year; (2) a first offender will receive a warning and lose a week's late passes; (3) a second offender will appear before Student Council.

On approximately the same day the Junior Class announced that their Red Cross drive throughout the Medical Center was more successful than ever before. The total of contributions amounted to $1,195.

Dr. Hugh Auchincloss has given to the school three hundred letters concerning the Florence Nightingale Collection. The degree section of the class of '42 is editing these letters as their History of Nursing project. The other group of the class is preparing a pageant depicting the history of the school.

There it is, and to quote Ogden Nash:

"There is one fault that I most find with the twentieth century,
And I'll put it into a couple of words:
too adventury;
What I'd like would be some nice dull monotony
If anyone's gotony."

ELIZABETH WALLACE

PAGEANT BY THE HISTORY OF NURSING CLASS

THE History of Nursing Class presented a pageant on the history of our School of Nursing on Friday evening, January 17, 1941, in Maxwell Hall.

The script was written by Martha Pearson, '42, and each student in the class contributed in some way toward the very successful performance.

Information about the early days of the school is difficult to find and these students deserve great credit for securing so much material and for presenting it in such a delightful way.

The following topics were shown in the tableaux:

1. Founding of School in 1892.
2. History of our Cap and Uniform.
3. Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing Pin.
4. Chickamaugua and first Army nursing in 1898.
5. Alumnae Association in 1899.
6. World War Unit in France 1917-1919.
7. Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center 1928.

One of the most impressive of these tableaux was the story of the pin written by Helenmarie Anderson, '42, who also was the "voice of the pin" behind the scenes.

This is our first attempt at presenting the history of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing and it is fitting that the Class of 1942 should be interested in this project as their graduation will be part of the Fiftieth Anniversary in June 1942.

ELEANOR LEE, '20.

THE PIN

(Following the reading of the Parable of the Good Samaritan)

I am the Presbyterian pin. My base is a white enamel Greek cross, my four arms being equidistant from my center. My face is a raised red die upon which is chased the letters P and H. A gold laurel wreath circumscribes my face enhancing it with a rich, classical beauty. Supporting the wreath is my famous insignia "Salus generis humani" or "Health of Humanity." Across my back is inscribed the word "Neighbors." The lettering is straight, plain and clearly imprinted. And the significance is as clearly understood by all who know me or who know of me. I represent the spirit of nursing as it was interpreted by the founders of the training school. In Miss Maxwell's own words, in part, "It is the aim of this school above and beyond all to inspire the pupils with a reverence for their work, and the desire to carry with them into whatever branch of nursing they enter, that true love of humanity which makes the helpful and successful nurse."

I made my first public appearance in this particular visible form in 1896 when I was first presented to the graduating class of that year by Mr. Frederick Sturges. It was at this time that I was first referred to by the title "Neighbors"—"neighbors to them who fall among thieves." Since that first presentation my duplication has reached about 2000—yet the basic ideals that belonged to the initial recipients remain undiminished to this the present day. The communion of thought, of spirit and of work unite all graduates of the school in the Order of Neighbors—one to another. Their common purpose effects this neighborly manifestation in every phase of their chosen work and I remain the symbol of "safety to the human race."

Nor is anyone dedicated to the service of humanity of and by that only virtue—"a neighbor"—but only those are eligible whose capacity for learning the scientific aspects of nursing with its complementary performance of its practical tasks with skill and dexterity. In summary those who possess me must champion equally the basic qualities of science, skill and service.

So it is the spirit of me, the Presbyterian Pin, which influences the decisions of worthy women and useful nurses.

Should I not have been worn by the Good Samaritan? "For I say to you which of these was his neighbor?"

MOBILIZATION FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE
RED CROSS RALLY FOR NURSES

SPEECH BY MRS. AUGUST BELMONT

WALDORF-ASTORIA, MARCH 10, 1941

PIONEERS are wonderful people. I count myself fortunate to have known several of them in the American nursing profession: Annie Goodrich, Adelaide Nutting, Lillian Wald and Jane Delano, who laid the foundations for the successful enrollment of nurses in the First and Second Red Cross Nursing Reserve for the Army and Navy. When I joined the Red Cross in 1917, Miss Delano was at the peak of her successful organization, and the nursing enrollment under her leadership played an important part in developing this service to our armed forces.

This enrollment of nurses for national emergencies, disasters, epidemics, or for war, has been carried out successfully, thanks to the whole-hearted cooperation of the American Nurses Association and the Red Cross State Committees of Nurses. It involves a great deal of unselfish work, which has been given voluntarily and frequently after hours, when a day devoted to another full-time job has drawn to a close. On January 2nd the Red Cross Nursing Service issued the following statement: "The expanded army brings an immediate and an urgent need for registered nurses for duty with the army nurse corps." To become a First Reserve Red Cross nurse a woman must be single, between twenty-one and forty years of age, physically fit for all types of duty; she must be a high school graduate, a graduate of an approved school of nursing; she must be affiliated with the American Nurses Association, registered under State Laws; and she must be an American citizen.

Today a vast group of American women are asking themselves: "What useful part can I play in the national defense program? What can I do to help our Government in this emergency?" Nurses do not have to ask this question. America needs more well prepared registered nurses than are at present available. Definitely there are not enough nurses in the Public Health field. Yet nurses form the largest professional body of trained women in the United States. A call has come to them for government service. It is clear and unmistakable. They are the envy of thousands of volunteers; nurses know that they are wanted, and they are already trained to fill a most necessary branch of service.

Yet we are told that up to this point the actual enlisting in the military service on the part of nurses has been slow. This may be due to many things—a lack of understanding, perhaps, as to the seriousness of the emergency; a reluctance on the part of some to acknowledge that war is even a possibility by signing up for military service; and of course many personal considerations. An important fact is frequently overlooked by our men friends; namely how many women play a serious part in the economic life of the family. I believe definitely that when our nurses understand the situation clearly, when they do realize that they are urgently needed, they will respond in excess of the numbers called for. However, I hope that no nurse will respond for emotional reasons. Each nurse should give careful consideration to the various aspects of her enlistment, and then act promptly, with conviction. And as I see it, she should regard the matter from three points of view. First, what does this mean to her professionally? Is she more necessary in her present position than in military service? Then the question is, how does this whole emergency concern her as a citizen? And last but not least, how does it affect her spiritually? What does it mean to the inner self which guards her philosophy of life?

From a business point of view, I am informed that the duties of Army nurses are much the same as those in civil institutions of like general character, and the remuneration is comparable to what a young graduate would receive in any regular field of nursing. Naturally this does not apply to older nurses who have established themselves, after several years of hard work, in important positions, let us say, in their local communities. But each year the nursing schools throughout the country graduate approximately 20,000. These young people have worked hard to receive their diplomas, have submitted themselves to a definite discipline, and understand the physical miseries that attack human beings. The world of nursing is before them. But what do they need most? They need at this point experience, and have most to gain by it. They need an opportunity to develop skill in the use of the technique which they have struggled to acquire. Certainly military service offers them experience and opportunity. They enlist for one year and may leave at the end of that time, if they wish. Wasn't it Dr. Richard Cabot who said, "To find one's work is to find one's place in life"?

On March fifth a statement made by President Roosevelt formed a headline in all the papers. The President at a press conference stated that the United States is facing a more serious international crisis now than the national crisis which confronted us in 1933. If that is so—and every sign to east, to west, to north, to south of us seems to point to the fact that the President is absolutely right in this statement—then every citizen of an age to serve in any capacity is called upon to face the duties and responsibilities of citizenship.

Today many of our beliefs are challenged. But loyalty to our country and to our form of government is essential if we believe in that government. The time has come when lip service is not enough. Personal sacrifice will be common to all; that is clearly indicated at least. We must prepare ourselves, each and every one of us, to surrender voluntarily and promptly something for the good of the whole. Many changes are inevitable in our way of life and should be welcomed if the democratic way of life is to be maintained and is to be of expanding service to our people. But in the midst of these shifting values one fact is clear and will not change. When we are ill we need good nurses and good nursing if we are to survive. One million and a half human beings, even if they are young and healthy, are bound to have illnesses and accidents of one kind or another, and this particular million and one half of trainees deserve the best we can give them, as we count on receiving the best they have to offer their countrymen.

Everyone is talking about the international crisis. Tragic, heart-breaking flashes of news come to us over the radio, in the press, on the public platform. We are deeply disturbed. But the question is, are we who are not drafted disturbed to the point of action? We are ready to advise others what to do. We may criticize them for appeasement, for slowness in preparation to defend themselves. But similar problems are now confronting us; and the question in many minds today is, What must we do to be saved? How can we maintain the peace we desire and that we have grown to believe is ours by divine right, for instinctively Americans seem to feel that someone at some time guaranteed us in perpetuity the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. How can we continue the march of progress, comfort, and happiness for Americans? But when we have listened and read and talked ourselves out, ultimately we realize that the successful conduct of a democracy must depend upon the action of all its citizens and in the last analysis the future of this country depends upon us. You and I must decide what we believe, how effectively we will prepare ourselves for defense of these principles if and when we are called upon to defend them.

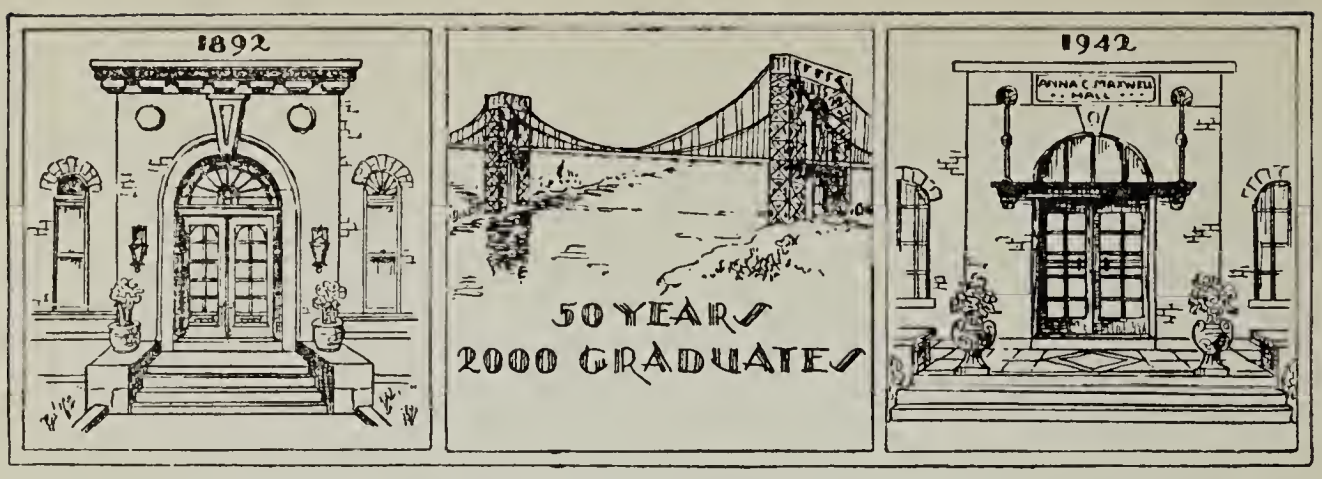

Some nurses are probably saying to themselves, "if this emergency comes closer, when it is more real for the United States, I will gladly do something about it." But now, yesterday, today, the Red Cross is calling on the nurses of this country to enroll in the First Reserve. I hope they will not procrastinate. With freedom, as we believe in it, under attack the world over, the prompt response of our citizens to the call for service, the easy functioning of our Democracy becomes a matter of increasing importance, and our obligations to each other become increasingly evident. We may build battleships and airplanes, but they are not enough. You and I must have the conviction that we are an essential part of national defense.

I have just been reading a report, issued last November, of the Nightingale Fellowship, the headquarters of which, as many of you know, was in St. Thomas's Hospital in London. This great hospital was bombed four times in one month; several of the nurses lost their lives in these disasters. As a result of the first bomb explosion, one of the wards which was full of patients seriously ill, was in complete darkness, glass falling everywhere, with a haze of choking dust. Night nurses went around the ward removing the patients' outer blankets, replacing them by fresh ones, and their calmness was so reassuring that the patients remained unperturbed. It was thus possible to transfer them promptly and quietly to another ward. The fall of masonry put out of action the lifts and the X-ray plant, and the gas and water supply began to fail. The description given in the report of various emergencies faced by the nurses in St. Thomas's ends with this: "I thank all the members of the Fellowship for the sympathy and practical help they gave us on hearing of the disaster to our beloved hospital. Buildings have souls; that is why we love them. It is comforting to think that although an actual building may be partially destroyed, the inner structure of all the selfless work forming its soul remains and cannot be destroyed. It will take possession of the new buildings and fill them with a splendid hope that the future of the hospital may be even greater than the past. May we all go forward into the New Year with hearts uplifted, proud, and ready to serve our God, our king, our country."

Some of our fellow citizens would have us think that the present war is divided into two camps, with men opposing each other under different leaders somewhat like a political campaign where if one is defeated you adjust yourself and then you go alone, pretty much as you were, under the successful leader. But Britain is fighting a state of mind as well as a combination of armies, air forces, and submarines. A philosophy of life is at stake in this war, and a philosophy of far-reaching importance to us is involved in the issue. They are fighting against almost overwhelming odds, fighting against a system of regimentation such as the world has never experienced before. The question is, can the present generation of Americans stand up to the challenge of these dangerous times? I have an abiding faith that they can, and that they will leave the stamp of greatness on their page of history.

Once more, I urge our nurses to consider the Red Cross call to enroll. Secure all the information available from the local Red Cross Nursing Service. The local committee will not leave half a question unanswered. Knowing the caliber of the young women in this profession, when they enlist for military service I believe it will be with conviction and high purpose, and I believe that they will do a fine job. The first time I heard Mary Beard, Chairman of our Red Cross Nursing Service, speak in public, she quoted a slogan which seems to fit these particular times, and I offer it to our young nurses now! Wherever you go, "do the best you can with the best you have."

FROM time to time we have published the names of our Central Committee members. This Committee acts in an advisory capacity. Now we print the names of the various committees who are actively doing and are going to do the work pertaining to the Fiftieth Anniversary.

On April 1st, 1941, the following Alumnae were serving in Army Camps:

Dorothy Pringle Armstrong, '31—Fort Ontario, Oswego, New York.
Mary Ellen Coyle, '32—Fort Dix, New Jersey.
Phyllis Anita Cowell, '34—Fort Jackson, South Carolina.
Jane Elizabeth Huntley, '34—Fort Ontario, Oswego, New York.
Beatrice Emily Chambers, '35—Manila, Philippine Islands.
Ruth Marie Herz, '38—Fort Jackson, South Carolina.

MISS MAXWELL'S BIRTHDAY

ON March 18th, Miss Young received the following letter from Miss Janet Fish:

"On the morning of the 14th, Vi Marbury motored me to Arlington Cemetery where we placed the wreath of pink carnations from the Alumnae on Miss Maxwell's grave, together with a myrtle wreath from Miss Maxwell's sister, and a victory wreath from Miss Brown."

ALUMNAE MEETING

The Quarterly Meeting of the Alumnae Association was held on February 20, 1941 in Maxwell Hall. Mrs. St. John presided. At the business meeting, it was voted to raise the dues of the active resident members from five dollars a year to six dollars a year, this increase to take effect with the May first dues.

Miss Lee announced and discussed three amendments to the Nurse Practice Act:

1. The period to practice without license has been extended to January, 1942.
2. Nurses from other states can practice in New York State until 1946, owing to insufficiency of nurses registered in New York State.
3. It is legal for nurses to practice under supervision before taking State Board examinations as long as the graduates take the first examinations after graduation.

A resumé of the plan for the refresher courses was given.

At the close of the business session, Mrs. St. John introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Marjorie Flater, '23, who gave us a very interesting account of her experiences returning from Beirut to Canada by way of the Pacific.

Then followed the usual social hour in the lounge.

GRADUATION AND REUNIONS

THE first Thursday in June is not far distant and plans for Graduation and its attendant festivities are well under way. Again the Alumnae Association will have the graduating class as their guests for dinner. Wednesday evening, June 4th, the day before Graduation is the date.

On Thursday, June the fifth, the reunion classes will have their luncheons as usual and we expect many back to enjoy them. At four o'clock on the same day—and we hope for a beautiful one—the graduation exercises will be held in the garden. Mr. Walter Lippmann will give the address which will be followed by a reception at Maxwell Hall.

SLOANE HOSPITAL BABIES' ALUMNI

The Babies' Alumni of Sloane Hospital was organized in 1917 by Mrs. Alfred B. Wade of New Canaan, Connecticut. With some of her friends, she felt that the babies in the private and semi-private rooms of Sloane Hospital might form the Babies' Alumni and contribute in annual and life membership dues. Contributing and associate memberships have been added. The contributions received are used in the work of the Social Service Department in meeting the needs of the ward and clinic obstetrical patients and their babies.

The Fund is used to provide convalescent care in the country or at home with additional help of housekeeper, as advised by the Doctor. Extra nourishment has been given; clothing needed by the baby has been provided. The Fund is used in emergency situations, but is not used to duplicate the work of any social organization, either public or private, in the community.

The membership of the Alumni has grown throughout the years to 1131 annual, and 101 life memberships. The Alumni are scattered over the United States, England, France, China and South Africa.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE COLLECTION

A GIFT of twenty-six letters written by Florence Nightingale and five bookplates of the Nightingale family was presented to Miss Young by Dr. Hugh Auchincloss in March for our collection.

These letters were written between 1847 and 1890 and were acquired by Dr. Howard A. Kelly of Baltimore during the years 1895 to 1910 with the exception of a few acquired in the early 1920's.

We again express our gratitude to Dr. Auchincloss for his generosity and interest in our Nightingale collection.

DR. CHARLES L. JANSSEN

[The following excerpt is from the minutes of the Medical Board Meeting of January 27, 1941]

Dr. Whipple read the following resolution on the death of Dr. Charles L. Janssen:

Dr. Charles L. Janssen, who died in the Harkness Pavilion, Presbyterian Hospital, on January 22, 1941, will always be remembered by his associates in the Presbyterian Hospital with genuine admiration and real affection. Coming to this country with a distinguished record of accomplishment as a military surgeon in the Belgian Army at LaPanne and with the highest recommendations from his Chief, Professor Depage, he began his work with us in the old hospital in 1923 in a very modest way in the Out-Patient Department.

It soon became evident to all of us that he was a man of unusual personality, training and intellect and he quickly demonstrated his surgical ability and rare judgment in his care of the patients with colon and rectal pathology. In 1925 he was appointed to the ward service and by his attention to the details of pathology and surgical technique established himself as an authority on the radical resections for cancer of the colon and rectum. His mortality figures for the abdomino-perineal operation in cancer of the rectum in the last five years were unexcelled by any surgeon in this country or abroad.

We all came to admire his surgical judgment, not only in his own specialty, but in the field of general surgery, for he had had a broad training and had contributed to the literature in many fields. He had a rare objectivity in his point of view both in surgery and in general medicine and his comments in his discussions had a clear Gallic quality and were always welcome and appreciated. As a teacher he was direct and convincing and the students admired him and regarded him with a peculiar affection.

Dr. Janssen was a most cultured gentleman. His knowledge of European, English and American literature, his ability as an artist, his interest in music, both old and new, were characterized by a catholicity and discrimination that gave him a rare distinction. His sense of humor and his witty conversation made him a delightful and whimsical companion.

These qualities, as well as his gallant fight for eight years against the spread of recurrent malignancy in which he bravely and uncomplainingly submitted to surgical and radio therapy, carrying on his surgery until ten days before his death, made him especially beloved by all of the Attending Staff. His associates, the residents, the nurses and the students watched him in apprehensive amazement and admiration. He worked until he could no longer stand and then he was granted that richly deserved surcease of unconsciousness and a peaceful ending, which in his Catholic faith he had hoped would mercifully come to him.

We of the Medical Board of the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center wish to record our unlimited respect and admiration for our gallant friend and associate and to have a copy of this expression sent to Mrs. Janssen.

Mary F. Ogden has a position at Willard Parker.

Katherine John Saliari and Marietta Papasphiropoulou sailed on the S.S. "Zam Zam" on March 29th. They are returning to Greece in response to an urgent cabled request from the Greek government. They are to travel via the Cape of Good Hope and Egypt.

AUXILIARY FOR THE CARE OF NURSES AT STONY WOLD

The Auxiliary for the Care of Nurses at Stony Wold is an organization of nurses, whose sole aim is to assist nurses who are ill with tuberculosis. The organization was formed in February, 1937, by a small group representing public health and private nursing groups, various nursing schools, Alumnae Associations, hospital nursing staffs and the nursing service of the American Red Cross. In four years the membership has grown to many hundreds of nurses whose annual dollar membership fee support this work.

Jane R. St. John, '13 is Chairman and Frances Allen Rossiter, '33 Recording Secretary.

In March 1941 the nurses at the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center conducted a membership drive which resulted in a total of $552.00. This amount was sent to the Treasurer, Mrs. Marion G. Sockrider.

[Excerpts from letters to Miss Young]

Wakefield, England
Monday, January 6th

My dear——

I was lucky enough to have W——home for Xmas. By now I suppose you will have received his letter from B. A. He was home ten days but recalled three times which split our holiday up. We went to Manchester to see our relations and it was raided. What a fearful night. We spent ten hours in a shelter and left the next morning for Liverpool. Poor Manchester City was a roaring mass of flames. When we got to Liverpool, it had another raid; the docks were burning and the suburbs one stack of miles of ruined houses. We went on to W——'s people in Blackpool for Xmas day but no Christmas dinner as it never arrived thru bombed Railways, so we had sandwiches. Poor Mrs. N—— was most distressed. I was also as I wanted it to be so nice for W——. Anyhow we were together so we were not downhearted.

It is quite impossible for me to describe the misery and suffering being caused by the bombing. Germany must and will pay if we never have another Xmas dinner again—we will never give in. W—— has gone off on an awful job—Commander ship to the Convoy. I cannot write. I do not know where he is bound or when he will return. Sometimes I feel life is not worth living or we will never be happy again, but when the sun shines on our beautiful English countryside, I know it will pass and anything is worth our country to be kept safe. All our friends are split up, husbands away, or left in France. I have to go to London this week for an interview to join a women's unit of ambulance drivers and interpreters for canteen work for our French and Polish allies. My French may be useful. I hope I can get in, as I would like to do a full time job. I hope when I write again, life is better.

[From a letter written January 12, 1941, from Kincraig, Inverness-shire, Scotland]

From here in my northern home I feel almost an outsider too, to all that is going on—years come on and one can no longer take the active life in helping as one would wish to. The family don't want me to be in London though—and one cannot be at home permanently with others whose houses are already taxed to capacity with evacuees or billeted strangers or whose whole time is taken up with Red Cross or other work. So far my house in London is intact, but one never knows from day to day what next will be destroyed. Just pure wanton destruction. It seems so futile, beyond being so brutal as to the lives of innocent children and others. The hospitals have suffered dreadfully—though happily with the wonderful organization, patients' lives have been saved to a large extent. How they will carry on eventually, one cannot see, for so much rebuilding will be necessary apart from loss of hospital outfits and instruments etc. Our circle have so far come through safely, with many close escapes. Bombs have fallen all around Holmbrush where there is no military object whatever.

The spirit of all is wonderful, both being determined and having confidence in the future which is helped beyond all measuring by the understanding and truly magnificent support you are all giving the great democratic cause.

——OTHER NEWS——

Mamie Clegg celebrated her 46th anniversary of employment in Presbyterian Hospital on March 8, 1941.

Sheila Dwyer who has been abroad with the American Hospital in Britain, Ltd., has arrived home as we go to press.

On March 24, ten graduate nurses enrolled in a refresher course in Presbyterian Hospital. They are on a schedule which includes bedside nursing on medical and surgical floors. Lectures and demonstrations by doctors and members of the nursing staff on developments in the fields of disease and therapy are being given, as well as periods of observation on various services. These nurses have proved to be very interested in this opportunity to bring themselves up to date. At the completion of the course the nurses will have had 400 hours of experience and will be ready to help in any emergency which may arise.

Miss Carol Miller and Dr. Wirt Stanley Scott, Jr. were married on March 7, 1941. Miss Miller was formerly on our general duty staff and Dr. Scott was a resident here after the completion of his internship. They will reside in San Francisco, California.

Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Thorne have announced the birth of a daughter, Phebe Ellis, on February 21, 1941. Mrs. Thorne was Helen Ellis, formerly a member of the class of 1937.

Miss Katherine A. Sanborn, retired superintendent of St. Vincent's Hospital School of Nursing, died on February 23, 1941. She was a graduate of the New York Hospital School of Nursing, class of '90. Miss Sanborn founded the St. Vincent's Hospital School of Nursing in 1892, the same year that Miss Maxwell founded ours.

Some of our outside general duty nurses have resigned to join the Army nursing staffs at the camps. They include Miss Margaret Coyle from Vassar Brothers Hospital, Poughkeepsie, New York, Miss Mary Vail from the Mercy Hospital Training School, Scranton, Pennsylvania, Miss Olga Bellettini from the Boston City Hospital, Boston, Massachusetts. Miss Alice Stephens from St. John General Hospital, was recalled to Canada in September.

Miss Esther Brage from St. Luke's, New York, formerly on our general duty staff, and then our registry, has also left to join the Army nurse corps.

SCHOOL NEWS

THE lists on the signing-out slip at Maxwell Hall have probably been shorter for the past three months than any others. The winds, rains, and heavy snows have made the 168th and Fort Washington corner the ultimate test of physical strength, and thus trips even to the "Alps" have been limited. Energies have been dormant inside as well as outside—perhaps the greatest individual activity has been the fingers of many expectant aunties knitting pink and blue sweaters and caps. It's becoming almost a Maxwell Hall legend—this fear that aunthood in June will overshadow graduation.

But soon the tide must turn for comes Spring, comes Senior activities and those of us who aren't blown into bed each night at eight by Henry Street gales or dropped in at nine by the merciless fingers of the O.R. are about to begin preparations for the Easter Dance on April 25, the Senior Banquet on May 1st, and the collection of nimble fingers to paint some three hundred covers for Student Prints' Graduation Issue. Since September the '41 Class has sponsored the sale of stationery as one of its pecuniary projects. Students and graduates alike have been enthusiastic about both available styles—one with the Maxwell Hall address, the other with the Presbyterian emblem.

The Fellowship of Christian Nurses brought to Maxwell Hall Miss Margaret Gough to talk to the students about her experiences as a missionary nurse in Africa. Miss Schwartzenberg, Secretary of the International Council of Nurses, spoke at Professional Problems one February Monday night, and so great was her reception that she was asked to return to speak on her travels throughout the world at an open meeting under the auspices of Ohuivo Club. World affairs and the present crisis are being made appreciable to the students by constant reference to their professional responsibility at this time. Seniors went as a group to the Red Cross Chapter House where Miss Alta Dines, Chairman of the National Advisory Committee, addressed students from many of the City's hospitals. The fact that two of our own graduates of last year, Katie Saliari and Marietta Papasaph, have left for Greece to become active in war nursing has made us realize that the prevailing atmosphere of intangible excitement and uncertainty is quite real.

Mrs. William Sloane has given the Hall twelve lovely French flower prints which have been framed and hung in the sitting rooms on the ninth and eleventh floors. We're going to need them and all other available bits of color and gayety to pick us up from our winter lull and return us to happy activity.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

DEAN RAPPLEYE

MR. President, Members of the Graduating Class and their friends: Varied really is the span of life. Last year, I was introduced as Nurse Rappleye, so now I am back again to my original designation, which I like after all far better.

As we stand in the gathering shadows of the world crisis, these are days for clear thinking and for cool courage. We must not forget that the past has seen similar periods when civilization and even human liberty have been threatened. The souls of men and nations have been severely tested in such experiences but the lessons of the past teach us that right will ultimately prevail, that the struggle to make the world a safer and better place will finally succeed when men and women with conviction and determination are aroused to meet the challenge.

Everyone is eager to contribute his or her particular part to the safety and security of the country. Our individual responsibilities are not only for the duration of emergency but equally for the reconstruction after the present crisis has passed, as it certainly will. Whether it be for the period of emergency alone or for a life career, the emphasis of this particular occasion and of the future is on adequate preparation for the tasks before us. The greatest difficulty confronting the country at the moment is the lack of properly trained people not only in the more obvious fields of defense and industry, but equally in the fields of public service, medical care, nursing, hospitals, and other important health features of a modern society.

There is general recognition of the fact that health is perhaps the greatest single asset of either an individual or a nation. The need of competent personnel to look after the well-being of the population is one of the paramount necessities of the country. Nurses are an indispensable part of the proper medical and health care of any community and in its defense program as well. Regardless of what may occur in the next few years, there is every reason to believe that this field of endeavor will expand and that ever increasing opportunities will be presented.

It is peculiarly refreshing in these hours of confusion that we gather to renew our confidence in the value of proper educational preparation for a truly great profession. It is vital to the future of our country that reliance upon standards of education and of professional performance remains unshaken. At the moment we are the only country in the world in a position to preserve the advance that have been made in medical, hospital and nursing care for the sick and disabled which have been attained after long years of constant effort. Upon us and upon you rests the responsibility for the preservation of those standards.

It is difficult to imagine a time in our history when there were greater opportunities for nursing. You who graduate today are indeed privileged to enter upon a professional career and to meet the exacting duties which only the trained nurse can be expected satisfactorily to discharge. When women everywhere are seeking a chance to contribute to the common cause, you are to be congratulated upon being equipped and ready to do your part.

You leave these portals with the best of wishes of the entire faculty and the institution for success and happiness as well as the confidence of all of us to carry high the ideals of unselfish service which has been long a tradition of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing.

ADDRESS TO THE GRADUATING CLASS

MR. GRISWOLD:

"Before the next stated number on our program, may I express our deep grief over the absence of Mr. Sage, the President of our Board of Managers, and for 20 years the genius and moving spirit of this institution. We share his sorrow over the loss of his devoted wife, and with your permission I shall send him, on behalf of the Graduating Class, the Alumnae, and his other friends here today, our message of sympathy and affection."

"MEMBERS OF THE GRADUATING CLASS:

WE meet here for a greeting and a farewell. As on other occasions, graduation is framed and warmed by the familiar setting of this great Medical Center, with its peaceful garden. But today our parting will cleave deeper than ever before. A world in turmoil warns that when we meet again life will be far other than we know it now.

The School of Nursing and the Hospital face changes that no man can foresee. We may be sure only that the old way will not survive and that the future is for those who best adapt themselves to the demands of a new and far less abundant order. There need be nothing disheartening in the outlook if it is faced with confidence, courage, hope, and, above all,—faith. Confidence, courage, hope, are but impermanent unless captained by that abiding faith which the greatest of all Books refers to in words charged with spiritual values,—"the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen". In the spirit of the School and the Hospital, as you have come to know them, there is a background enriched by the fortitude and blessed by the faith of those whose tasks have been completed. Their gifted eyes glimpsing the future, their devoted service, have together wrought a magic alchemy,—the best of the present tempered by a vision of what coming days will be. This is the soul of the Presbyterian, to be consecrated and renewed by those who now bear the burden and by such as you who must share in assuming it. Let no man say that this soul can be conquered. Courage! a firm step, a clear eye,—and faith."

"So speaks Mr. Sage. I trust you will never forget the inspiration of his message."

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

WALTER LIPPMANN

MR. President, Members of the Graduating Class, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is the privilege of those who year after year stand where I stand now to congratulate the members of the Graduating Class and to wish them well. This is a very pleasant thing to do. It is also by all odds the easiest thing which I can imagine. For there can be no more genuine cause for congratulation to anyone now entering upon his life work than that he has been highly trained and has become thoroughly disciplined to do work that is indispensable and that is of lasting importance. It is still easier to offer you good wishes in your professional careers. For yours is one of the very few professions in all the world of doubt and struggle which transcend the conflict and evoke respect and gratitude from all men everywhere.

Thus you will have that most enviable of all possessions—the conviction during your hours of activity that you are able to do very well something which indisputably needs to be done. Most of your fellow-citizens, indeed most of mankind, lack this conviction. That, I venture to say, is the ultimate cause of the tragedy through which mankind is living: that progressively among civilized men there has fallen apart the conviction that there is work of infinite value to be done and that it is the vocation of man on this earth to see, to understand, and to do that work. For without such a conviction there can never be the confidence to go on where the work is hard and painful, nor steadfastness in danger, nor consolation in sorrow, nor, in the end, victory.

Yet, even you, specially equipped though you are, belong to the community and must share the ordeal through which it must pass. Perhaps in your work and through your work you will be able better than most to understand what is happening to men and to understand why. For you see every day what modern men have persistently sought to deny, to escape, or to deal with cheaply. You live in the presence of the fact that at the heart of things there is not only the pleasure we desire and the joys we anticipate, and the security we seek, but also there is pain and sorrow and danger. You see men and women in the presence of their fate—at birth and in death, in affliction and in recovery—and you must come to realize what modern men have tried to forget, that in all life there is suffering and that the secret mystery of life is that none can be freed from suffering, but that through suffering all may be freed.

For when men suppose they can be freed from suffering, they do not, by denying the inevitable, escape the trials which are for mankind inescapable: they merely remain unready to meet these trials and unable to comprehend them and to bear them and to surmount them. They imagine a world which does not exist, and they become attached to things which do not endure, and they learn nothing which will sustain them when at last, but inexorably, they too must leave their houses, their clothes, their money, and their place and share the lot of all men. Nor can they who seek to escape and deny the lot of mankind add anything to, or even comprehend, the great achievements of men. For no saint, no hero, no discoverer, no prophet, no leader, ever did his work cheaply and easily, comfortably and painlessly, and no people was ever great which did not pass through the valley of the shadow of death on its way to greatness.

Thus it comes about in the history of nations, and in the lives of individuals, that they cannot long preserve in ease and comfort what they themselves have not created in toil and pain. That, in the last analysis, is why freedom and justice have been placed in such deadly peril throughout the world. In no great nation were there, until recently, enough men and women who remembered what it had cost their forefathers to win such freedom and such justice as they, the living generation, had become accustomed to take for granted. They could not imagine a world in which the elementary conditions of a civilized life had disappeared. So used were they to the blessings of civilization that they could not imagine the possibility of being deprived of them. They could not conceive that anything could happen which would ever compel them to earn those blessings as their forefathers had earned them. They were glad to believe that they were descended from the heroes and the saints. But it never occurred to them that in their steam-heated, air-conditioned world there would ever again be saints and heroes struggling to redeem mankind.

The lesson of the tremendous days through which we are passing is that men cannot live upon the achievements of their forefathers, but must themselves renew them. They cannot live on the work of their forefathers. They must earn their living in the sweat of their own brows. They cannot enjoy the liberties won by the heroism of their forefathers. Only by their own heroism can they remain themselves free. We cannot escape, and we cannot by any device circumvent, the elementary facts of life,—that for a people there is nothing for nothing, that what they have they must themselves make, that what they cherish they must themselves achieve, what they wish to keep they must themselves defend.

You are not going into a comfortable world. You are going into a world which is a vast battlefield in which it is going to be decided whether you and those who think and feel about life as you do, or whether others who think and feel quite differently, are to shape the world in which you and your children will live. You are better prepared than most to play your part: you are well trained to do important and necessary work.

But you will need more than that—you will need a stronger armor of the spirit,—to face the future, as you will wish to face it, with a clear head, a stout heart, and a triumphant spirit. You will need to remember the things which were long since revealed about where is your real home and your real treasure and your true vocation: only the remembrance of these things will carry you without complaining, without flinching, and with peace at the center of your personal lives, through the dark and dangerous struggle of this age.

But while this must be the ultimate source of the strength of spirit that you will surely need, you can find assurance and confidence in the knowledge that you belong to a nation which is at the beginning, as such things are measured in history, of its destined career in the world.

For this America was first a colony of the old world. Then it became a new and independent world. Now, by the logic of circumstances, the Americas are destined to become not only the arsenal and the citadel, but the central homeland, of western civilization. Fix your minds upon that indubitable fact. Hitch your wagons to that star. If you do, you will know what you are doing. You will know where you are going. You will know the rhyme and the reason amidst so much that must otherwise be meaningless and mad.

REUNION CLASSES

DUE to the distinctly unusual graduation weather the reunion luncheons were all held in the gymnasium on floor R of the Presbyterian Hospital building. In all there were 144 alumnae present. The tables were gay and festive-looking, and everyone's spirits of the brightest, in spite of rain outside. There were representatives from the class of 1896, 1901, 1906, 1911, 1916, 1921, 1926, 1931, and 1936. Below are detailed reports of the classes of 1931 and 1936.

1 9 3 1

The 10th reunion of the class of '31 was attended by 33 members of the class. We sat down to a delicious luncheon at a table gayly decorated with bowls of red, white and blue flowers in honor of Dorothy Armstrong and Virginia Sage now serving with the Army Nursing Corps.

Arranged on a screen were photographs ranging from "Probie days" to the present, which brought forth gales of laughter. We were very proud of the fact that '31 had contributed the largest amount for the past year to the Distributing Fund.

Snapshots of children and letters from absent members were passed around and exclaimed over. Elise Garretson Tillman read the report of the 5th reunion. The day may have been dull, but the spirits of the class of '31 were gay, and we decided that we were more youthful looking now than the day we graduated.

Those present were:

Those of you who weren't able to get back for the 5th reunion celebration missed a lot of fun—and we missed you! There were 29 present at the luncheon:

Dottie Avery Ferb
Caroline Angell (guest of '36)
Ginnie Bankauf
Nancy Baumis Bullock
May Broomhead Krimmel
Polly Christie
Bee Crocker Glasier
Mary Edgerton Blom
Kay Edwards
Ethel Flinn
Bonnie Foster Merson
Helen Gillies (guest of '36)

Helen Pettit
Elizabeth Price
Dottie Reichling
Irene Rushmeyer Slack
Emily Simmons
Jane A. Wilson
Jane B. Wilson

We met for luncheon on Floor R in the gymnasium which had been transposed into a fine banquet hall. Our table looked very gay—all blue and white beneath the basketball basket! The food was delicious and, when a blue and white frosted cake was presented to us as a gift from the hospital, we were overcome! (It seemed for a minute as if Kitty Hoban would go right under the table!)

After eating, we went down to the Demonstration Room (M 125) where, with the door closed and only Mrs. Chase and her two sisters to hear, we had a wonderful time catching up on all the news!

Dottie Avery Ferb is working in Vanderbilt Clinic.

Ginnie Bankauf is specialing.

Nancy Baumis Bullock came down from Fitchburg, Mass.

May Broomhead Krimmel (bride of a week) looked as smart as ever and she simply beamed all afternoon. She brought Ernest in later and we were delighted to meet him.

Polly Christie is at Henry Street.

Bee Crocker Glasier has just returned from a vacation with Pelham in Bermuda. Bee and Pel have a son and daughter.

Edgie Blom keeps house in New York City.

Kay Edwards is the person to know these days! She works at J. P. Morgan and Co.!

Ethel Flinn was here from Detroit. Ethel is Director of Junior League Volunteer Workers in Detroit.

Bonnie Foster Merson came down from Buffalo.

Helen Gillies stopped packing long enough to come. She is leaving to be married to Dr. Jim Wilson (Jane B.'s brother) in Teeswater, Ontario, in July.

Lucy Gregory is doing Public Health Nursing in New Rochelle, New York.

Eleanor Hall is an Instructor at P. H.

Eleanor Henderson is very streamlined—and it is becoming! She is doing private duty.

Kitty Hoban is as amusing as ever. She is to be married very soon to Captain Lee Gorin Brown (U. S. Army).

Emma Kaiser Mountain brought along several pictures of her son David III. Em is full of pep and her boy is handsome.

Kentie is Head Nurse and Ass't Instructor in Babies.

Knoxie Thatcher keeps house in New York and does private duty, too.

Elsa Macrae plans to do institutional nursing this fall.

Ada Mutch is an Instructor at P. H.

Nancy Nightingale Deffaa keeps house for Gene at Parkchester. Can she cook?

Helen Pettit is a Head Nurse in Sloane.

Pricey is a Head Nurse in Harkness.

Dottie Reichling is an Anaesthetist at Neurological.

Rushie Slack is a housewife in Sunnyside, Long Island.

Emily Simmons is doing General Duty in Harkness.

Jane A. Wilson is a Head Nurse in the Eye Institute.

Jane B. Wilson is Head Nurse on L. East.

We had letters from ten members who couldn't come. There were telegrams of regret from Irene Chopey, De Vrany, Anna Kraitcheva Dobson and Nancy Stevenson Dunphy. Nancy sent a snapshot of her two little girls.

There was a fine letter from Miss Houston. If she had been able to come, she said, she would have "been greatly tempted to quiz the girls on dosages of drugs'". (Shades of grams to grains!)

Edwina Mead Gagge couldn't come but she sent greetings. She and Pharo have two small English girls with them "for the duration".

Mary Ludes had to be in Harrisburg to speed preparations for her wedding on June 26. Mary's wonderful plans have kept the School of Nursing in a dither all Spring!

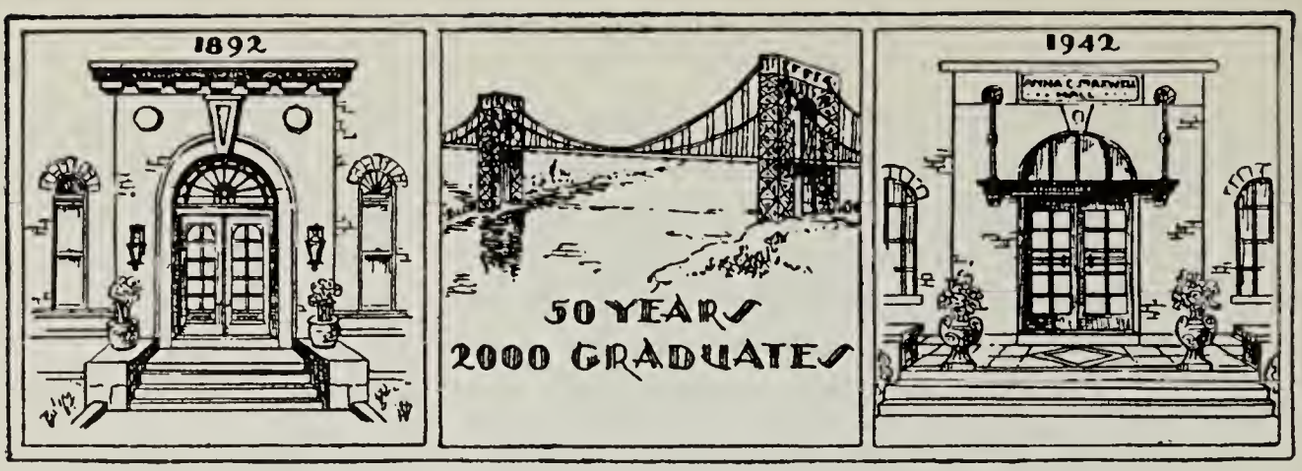

We have some interesting statistics about the Class. (From all indications, these will have changed when you read this!)

41 are married. (There are 23 children—to date!)
16 are in institutional nursing.
16 are in private duty.
11 are in public health nursing.
3 are in industrial nursing.
16 have done post-graduate work.
4 have received degrees since '36.
1 is an M. D. (Jean Walker—P. & S. '40—is now interning at Jersey City Medical Center).

We all agree that Reunions are fun! It was most satisfying to all of us to find that five years apart have not dulled the spirit which was ours from '33-'36!

Those present resolved to make attendance at the 50th Anniversary Celebration in 1942 100% for '36. SEE YOU THERE!!!

ELEANOR A. HALL.
(Tarzan to you!)

THOUGHTS ON THE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

MAMIE CLEGG

"I'll be happy to be celebrating my 47th Anniversary with P.H. along with the 50th Anniversary of the School. I'll surely be there to greet all my former students."

DR. HUGH AUCHINCLOSS

'"There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good: myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy, if I may."' "So, Robert Louis Stevenson, in his Christmas Sermon, expressed what Anna C. Maxwell, Helen Young and their Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing have been practicing for fifty years."

* * *

MR. JOHN F. BUSH

"My congratulations to the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing on its Fiftieth Anniversary in the year 1942.

"Nineteen years ago I became acquainted with some of the nurses in the School of Nursing and in the year 1926 I had the great honor of being elected a member of the Class of that year. I, therefore, am the oldest male graduate of the School of Nursing.

"During the past fifteen years I have seen the School grow under the able and careful supervision of Miss Helen Young, a worthy successor to Miss Maxwell, to the largest class that the School has ever known. It should be very gratifying to those charged with responsibility of selecting the students that the reputation and type of young women enrolled in the School are of the finest."

HARRIET HEFFERNAN, Class 1942

"As a member of the class to be graduated as the fiftieth one from the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, I sincerely hope that we shall be as successful in starting the second half of the century as was the pioneer class of 1894. We hope we are equally able to carry on the tradition of the school as were the classes which have preceded us, and that we shall live up to the ideals which they have set for us. I think I express the sentiments of the other members of the class when I say that we are honored to find ourselves part of this fiftieth anniversary celebration."

PROGRESS REPORT ON THE HISTORY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING

The Alumnae will be interested to hear about some of the people who are helping to give information about the early days of the school.

Three of the first head nurses at Presbyterian:

Mrs. Julian Russell who was Miss Eleanor Campbell, a graduate of the Hartford Hospital Training School was a head nurse on Dr. McCosh's Women's Surgical Ward and is living in East Falls Church, Virginia.

Miss Jane A. Osborne a graduate of St. Luke's Hospital Training School in 1891 while Miss Maxwell was Superintendent, was head nurse in the Accident Ward at Presbyterian and is living now in Norfolk, Conn.

Miss Florence A. Horne, a classmate of Miss Osborne's at St. Luke's was the first graduate nurse to come to Presbyterian to help Miss Maxwell in 1892. She was head nurse on the Men's Medical Wards. She is living at "The Wilderness", Hudson Heights, Quebec.

At the kind suggestion of Dr. Ellsworth Eliot, Jr., I have been to see Dr. William S. Bainbridge, Dr. T. Stuart Hart and Dr. David M. Marvin.

In corresponding with Miss Sally M. Johnson, Principal of the Training School for Nurses of the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, I have secured the names of some of Miss Maxwell's graduates while she was superintendent there 1881-1889. I have been to see Miss Mary L. Keith in Elmwood, Mass., class of 1888 at M.G.H. whose scrap-book and vivid personal recollections are very helpful. I called upon Mrs. John W. Pratt of Dedham, Mass., class of 1887 at M.G.H. and a cousin of Dr. Anna Hintze of Clifton Springs, N. Y., class of 1886 at M.G.H. who was an intimate friend of Miss Maxwell's. Miss Anna Hooker who is living with Mrs. Roswell Eldredge in Great Neck, Long Island and Miss Margaret W. Stevenson of Old Greenwich, Conn., are both M.G.H. graduates and friends of Miss Maxwell's who are interested in helping us.

Some of the P.H. graduates who have contributed information about the early days of the school are:—

Lillian Welsh '94
Mrs. David Bovaird '94
Emma A. Kuroski '95
Araminta W. Beatty '95
Harriet F. MacArthur '95
Mrs. M. Farmer Murphy '96
Mrs. Ralph W. Shaver '96
Mary Magoun Brown '97
Mrs. J. Holmes McGuinness '97
Mrs. Baillie Ripley '97
Nancy E. Cadmus '97
Emily Clatworthy '98
Mrs. Janet B. Christie '98
Mrs. Preston C. West '01
Mrs. Edith Joy Field '02

There is much more to be done and I will be very glad to receive suggestions or material about the history of the school.

PRESBYTERIAN ABROAD

Marietta Papasapharopolou, and Kati Saliari, class '40, sailed on the "S. S. Zamzam" for Greece. They were going by way of Africa and the trip was expected to take three months. The ship was torpedoed somewhere between Brazil and South Africa. They were among the passengers taken on a prison ship and were later landed in occupied France, where being Greek subjects, we are afraid they have been interned for the duration of the war. One of the American Volunteer Ambulance drivers who was also a passenger on the Zamzam and has since returned to this country wrote the Near East Foundation that at the time of the actual sinking these girls were courageous and calm, helping the women with the children. Later on the prison ship they nursed the sick, and with their cheery good nature helped to keep up the morale of their companions. Another passenger on the Zamzam has also written of their bravery.

On June 10th Martha Reis, Susan Ralph, and Marion Weimer, also of the class of '40, sailed for England to join the Harvard Red Cross Hospital. Nancy Heberden, from the Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester, N. Y., who had been on our general duty staff since last September, sailed with this group. They were on a Dutch freighter which was torpedoed. They were picked up by a tanker and taken to England. On July 6th an English woman interviewed some of the nurses in the Harvard Unit in a broadcast. Helen Roser, '28, heard the broadcast and has sent the following information:

Miss Weimer and two other nurses of the Harvard Unit, one from Amherst and the other from Chicago, were interviewed by an English woman on the regular broadcast from foreign capitals. Their ship was somewhere between Greenland and Iceland when it was torpedoed. They had been warned to wear warm clothing and life-jackets at all times while in those waters, so were prepared in that way.

They were in the dining room when the ship was hit. They ran to their cabins for their most precious articles, and then to the life-boats, two of which were damaged by flying pieces of shell. One of the boats leaked so badly that it had to be abandoned and the nurses from it were in the water for about an hour before they were picked up by boats from a tanker in the convoy.

Miss Weimer was in the first boat to reach the tanker. She, speaking last, said they were hauled up the side of the tanker, were given hot drinks and food, and warm navy pants and shirts, and then were put to bed. They had excellent care for the week during which they were on the tanker. Miss Weimer mentioned the care in particular, for the tanker, which had never carried a passenger, had taken on and cared for so well forty shipwrecked passengers. She spoke very clearly, and seemed to be cheerful and happy. The English woman finished the interview by saying that they all look very well indeed.

NATIONAL LEAGUE OF NURSING EDUCATION CONVENTION

THE National League of Nursing Education held its 47th Annual Convention in Detroit from May 26th to 30th, 1941. The theme was "Nursing Education in the National Defense Program."

The Convention was well attended and the total number swelled by five representatives from the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center—Eleanor Fries from Sloane, Grace M. Hartman '37 from Neurological, Margaret J. Hawthorne '27 from Presbyterian, Helen M. Roser '28 from Presbyterian and Helen P. Wood '29 from Babies Hospital.

The sessions were all very interesting and well conducted. The Business Sessions, opening and closing, were thought provoking as one of the first topics was the Red Cross Nurses Training Camp at Bryn Mawr. Margaret Conrad '20 has been made Dean.

Dean W. W. Whitehouse, Ph.D. of the College of Liberal Arts of Wayne University, gave an address on "The Challenge to Nursing of the National Defense Program." The topics under discussion in the ensuing sessions were attempts at solving some of the problems rising from the national emergency.

P.H. graduates had their "get-to-gether" at the Alumnae Luncheon Tuesday noon. It was a memorable affair—good attendance, interesting reports of the various activities of its members, attractive decorations of blue and white, and an excellent repast. Those present were:

Grace Ames Warman '17
Gertrude Sterling Banfield '20
Edith Jane Holden '20
Helen Martin Sherman '20
Augusta Patton '21
Langdon Gill '25
Margaret Woodbridge Stewart '26
Margaret Jane Hawthorne '27
Elissa Prien '27
Rhoda F. Reddig '28
Helen M. Roser '28
Helen P. Wood '29
Margaret McKenzie '33
Grace M. Hartman '37

Guests were Mrs. Eleanor Fries of Sloane and Miss Louise Knapp, formerly of Vanderbilt Clinic.

TO OUR GRADUATES

June 18, 1941.

The following letter from the United States Civil Service Commission was received in the office of the Alumnae Association. We are publishing it, hoping that some of you may be able to respond.

Presbyterian Hospital
New York, New York

Dear Sir:

The Civil Service Commission is receiving the valuable cooperation of the various professional and scientific organizations in publicizing examinations announced in connection with the National Defense program. In this connection, it has been suggested that the alumni associations of nurses of the various hospitals might be in a position to be of assistance in the recruiting program for nurses for National Defense positions.

As you may know, the U. S. Civil Service Commission has announced open continuous examinations to secure nurses, but despite these examinations, there is a continuing acute shortage of nurses for the civil-service position.

The nurse examinations open the way to an opportunity to render patriotic service, and at the same time to serve in interesting and satisfying work. There is an opportunity for advancement, and the Government provides for retirement for superannuation or disability.

By direction of the Commission:

Very respectfully,
WM. C. HULL,
Executive Assistant

LAST April the Class of 1942 invited Dr. and Mrs. Auchincloss and Mrs. Richard C. Colt to one of the Wednesday teas in Maxwell Hall and showed them the progress made in the arrangement of the Nightingale Fund material. At this time Dr. Auchincloss brought a letter and also a valuable book written by Florence Nightingale. These are described below.

LETTERS

(copied in full)

Barrack Hospital
22 November 1854

"My dear Sir

Allow me to thank you for the many occasions in which we have experienced your kindness, and to hope that you will permit me five minutes conversation with you tomorrow at any time most convenient to you.

May I trouble you with three little requisitions for the use of the Hospital?

I remain

Yours truly
Florence Nightingale"

L.B.S.

NIGHTINGALE (FLORENCE). Life or Death in India. With an Appendix on Life or Death by Irrigation. Demy 8vo, original paper covers, in half morrocco slip case. London, 1874.

First edition. Presentation copy with the author's autograph inscription on the title page, "Offered to Her Most Excellent Generalship Mrs. Nassau Senior late Inspector General of Female Infantry from Florence Nightingale (in consternation) London Dec 7/74"

(The following type-written description was inserted in the pamphlet)

A particularly interesting memento of the famous nurse and hospital reformer, presented to an associate in her humanitarian work. The pamphlet is concerned with the prevention of disease in India by sanitary reform, especially in relation to purifying the water supply. The subject of improved conditions of health in India was one of Miss Nightingale's major interests in later life although she never visited the country. The results obtained were largely due to her efforts and remain as a further evidence of the benefits to mankind conferred by her life of devoted service to humanity.

A gift of eleven letters written by Florence Nightingale was presented to Miss Young by Dr. Hugh Auchincloss on May 4, 1941, the day of the Florence Nightingale Memorial Service at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. These letters were obtained by Mr. Charles C. Auchincloss at an auction of rare letters and books and given to our Florence Nightingale Collection in memory of their mother Maria Sloan Auchincloss.

1. An autograph letter signed to Miss Helen Taylor stepdaughter of John Stuart Mill.

April 23, 1868
35 South Street
Park Lane
London

To Dear Madam

"I do (in these things) exactly as Mr. Stuart Mill bids me . . . (I am quite afraid that this candid confession will deprive me, in his mind, of all title to his esteem & even of all title a vote—as an independent 'female')

"Will you kindly tell him, at a convenient season, that nothing but the feeling that I had not the time to write anything which was worth his time for reading prevented me from answering the most kind & noble letter with which he honoured me (from Avignon)—that I sent my 'adhesion' to the Woman's Suffrage to Mrs. P. A. Taylor, instead of to him, not liking to trouble him, that, altho' I entirely adhere to his admirable principles, I don't think he quite understands my position which is a lack-a-daisical word—I mean my Work. Perhaps when this busy Session is over, if I am still alive, I may venture to trouble him with an answer." Etc.

Also an autograph letter signed from Miss Helen Taylor, Blackheath Park, April 25, 1868 to Florence Nightingale being the reply to the above letter. These two letters have been framed together.

2. Lea Hurst
October 29, 1880

To My very dear Mary—
Telling about the serious illness of Mr. Smith and describing in detail the care he is receiving from the nurse from London and members of the household.

3. March 13, 1885
10 South Street

To Dear Bratby
Inquiring about her health and also Mrs. Broomhead, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Brocklehurst. "But you must tell them all please that, tho' I think of them I cannot write. They, and you too, must think of me as seriously ill with a night nurse (which I have never had in my life before and a doctor two or three times a day. They must pray for me as I do for them and God bless you all I say continually." Florence Nightingale also mentions "My aunt at Embley", "Shore and his son Louis" and "Lady Verney".

4. Nov. 9, 1886
10 South Street
Park Lane W

To dear Bratby
telling about sending a load of coal to Mrs. Barton and saying that Dr. Dunn has given "a good account, on the whole, of our people". She mentions Mrs. S. Smith and Mr. Shore at Embley.

5. Dec. 3, 1886
10 South Street

To Dear Bratby
asking her to get a pair of blankets for Martha Sheldon "at Matlock Bath or even at Holloway".
"I ought to have written before, but I have been so ill and so over worked with the India Office & War Office, like what I was when dear Mary and you were with me." . . .
"Today is India mail-day and I must stop unwillingly."
"Lady Verney, wonderful to say, has been better". "Sir Harry comes up Tuesday for Lord Hastings' meeting."

6. Dec. 29, 1886
10 South Street
Park Lane W

To Dear Bratby
listing the New Year's presents she is sending to several of her poor neighbours, giving all of their names. "I am sorry not to do them up all in separate parcels for you to send; but we are such Invalids in this house and I am so busy". A postscript to this letter is "What stirring times these are".

7. March 8, 1887
10 South Street

To Dear Bratby and Mrs. Brocklehurst thanking them for their kindness "to our dear old Mrs. Barton". "She was a good woman, so patient, living her lonely life in Holloway and so industrious"
"Mr. Nightingale used to go to see them almost every Sunday afternoon".
"I hope she had some comfort in her sons" . . .

'Now the labourer's task is o'er,
Now the battlefield is passed,
Now upon the farther shore
Rests the voyager at last' "

8. Oct. 2, 1888
Claydon House
Winslow
Bucks

To Dear Bratby
asking her to give some money to Lydia Prince for her personal needs. She inquires about all the others. Florence Nightingale gives news of her own family "Lady Verney and Sir Harry" . . .
"Dear Aunt Mai at Embley" . . . "Mrs. Shore and Rosalind return from Ireland this week, Rosalind is working hard at Co-operatives".

9. Oct. 11, 1888
Claydon House
Winslow
Bucks

To Dear Bratby
referring to Martha Sheldon's death. "Some forty years ago she was such a nice young woman. She was in my class of adult mill-girls and I was fond of her. I think during her last few years she was not responsible for what she did and said. 'Tis a Loving Father calls the 'wanderer home' and I hope she has gone home".

She sends a message of sympathy to her brother. "I am obliged to go back to South Street on Monday. Lady Verney is not better but Mrs. (Captain) Verney is coming to her here. Sir Harry is well" 10.

Nov. 16, 1888
10 South Street
Park Lane

To Dear Bratby
"I have been so pressed for three weeks by Lord Lansdowne's leaving England as Viceroy for India. And my eyes and health are very bad".
She asks Bratby's advice about several matters, paying for Martha Sheldon's funeral, writing a reference for James Bunting, etc. "I do not do this with our own trained Matrons and Nurses from St. Thomas School unless I have had personal acquaintance with them and their work. That is the only value of a Testimonial".

11. (copied in full)

Jan. 17, 1889
10 South Street

To Dear Bratby
"You will have been prepared, I hope by what I told you, to hear that, since last Friday my dearest Aunt's life at Embley has been only a question of hours—and alas! of more or less suffering."
"She went home this morning at one o'clock quite quietly —home to her God whom she had so loved and sought. She was apparently conscious to the last but too weak to speak above a word or two.
They were all there. Mr. Shore returned to her on Monday. Mr. Arthur Clough on Tuesday.
They will all feel her loss terribly. Shore most of all— but all of us
God bless you

Faithfully yours
F. Nightingale",

On Wednesday, June 4, 1941 at the Alumnae Association dinner at Pierre's in honor of the graduating class, Dr. Auchincloss presented the following letter to Miss Young.

Dec. 30, 1870

To My dear Mrs. Schwabe asking for a printed receipt for £22.8.2 for the Widows & Orphans Fund (the proceeds of a concert) received from the Rev. John Denman, Rector of Newmarket.

(signed) Florence Nightingale

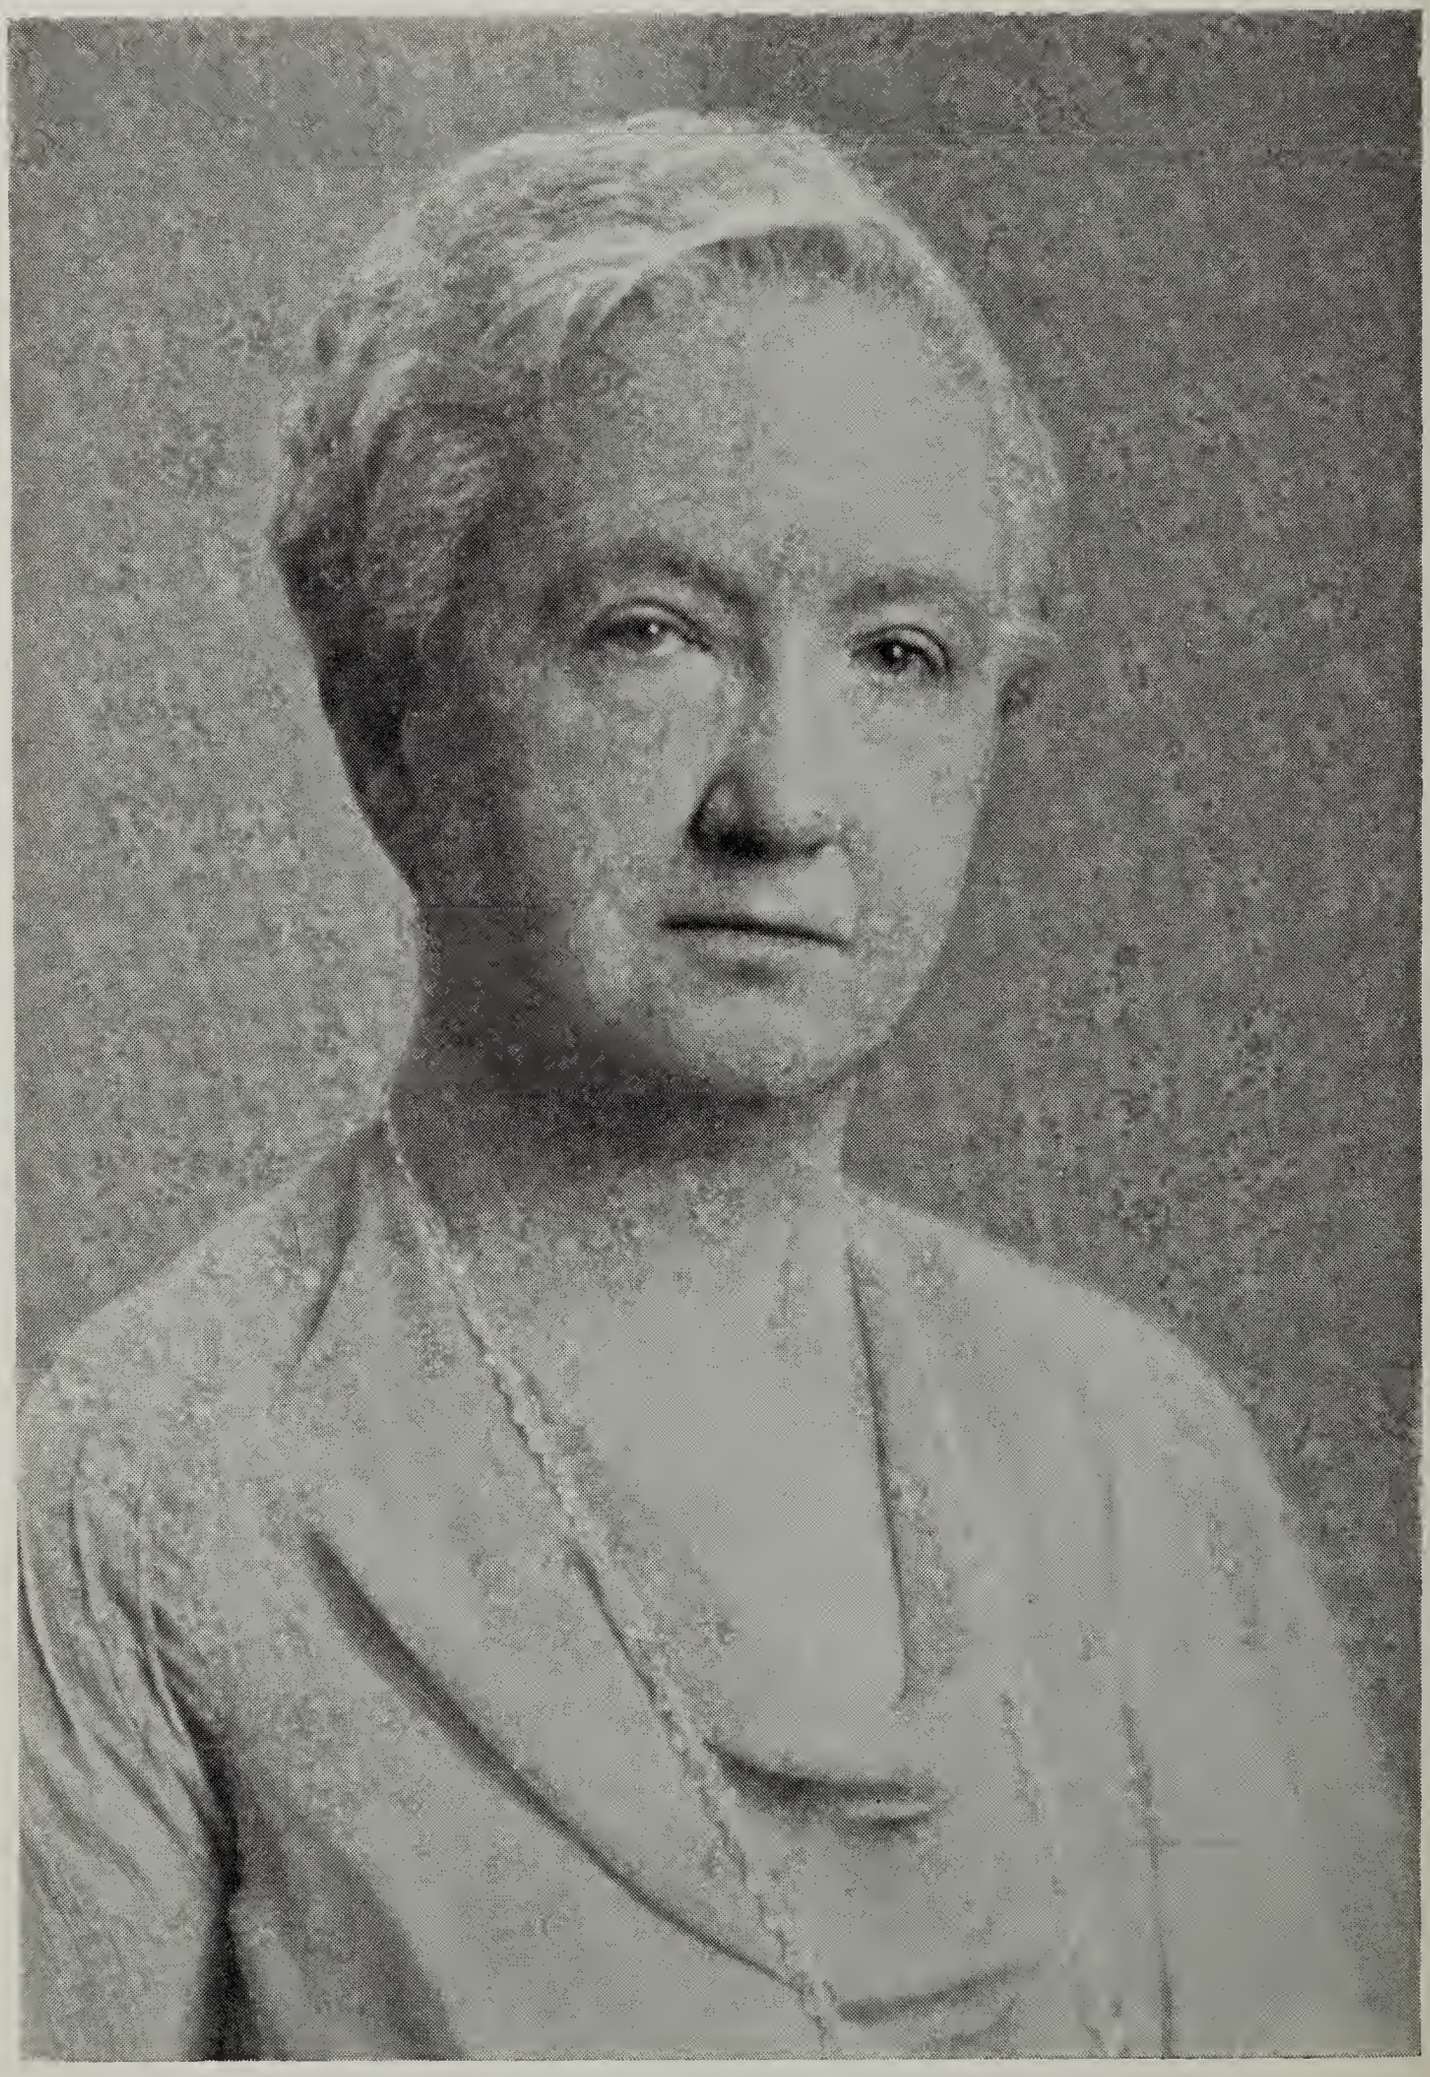

On July ninth Dr. Auchincloss brought to Miss Young a beautiful picture which Mrs. Richard C. Holt had obtained and given to our collection in memory of her sister, Maria Sloan Auchincloss. Mrs. Colt has had this picture framed for us. This picture is a colored mezzotint after the portrait of Florence Nightingale in the National Gallery, London. *"circ. 1840. Small oil portrait by Augustus L. Egg, R. A. In the National Portrait Gallery (No. 1578). This picture was bought from Mrs. Salis Schwabe (an admirer of Miss Nightingale with whom she had a slight acquaintance) by Mr. William Rathbone, with a view to its presentation to the nation; and was given to the Portrait Gallery in 1910 by Mrs. Rathbone in accordance with her husband's desire. In view of these facts, and as the attribution to Egg agrees with dates, the Trustees accepted the portrait as authentic. Miss Nightingale's family, however, doubt whether it is so. . . . If the portrait be indeed of her, and by a practised artist, it can hardly have been made from the life."

The collection is of ever increasing interest. An article describing the collection appeared in the New York Herald-Tribune and also in the Montreal Star in recognition of Florence Nightingale's birthday May the twelfth. Recently the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company asked permission to incorporate some of our pictures and letters in a film-strip which they are preparing for educational use.

The letters and pictures are now all framed and in place. We do appreciate the privielge of having such a wonderful collection.

Jean Isabel Gunn, '05

JEAN ISABEL GUNN, '05

It is with great sorrow that we announce to the Alumnae Association the death of Jean Isabel Gunn, '05. She passed away peacefully Saturday evening June 28th in the Toronto General Hospital after an illness of several months.

In the death of Miss Gunn our Alumnae has lost its most illustrious member. She graduated with the class of 1905 and according to her own statement at that time began immediately to prepare herself to be a superintendent of a hospital. She felt that in order to creditably fill such a position she should participate in all aspects of patient care. With this in mind she got experience from the following positions, always staying long enough to get the necessary experience and always contributing immeasurably to the service — Presbyterian Hospital Head Nurse on Men's Medical, Night Director, Head Nurse in the Operating Room; New York City Social Service; Memorial Hospital Morristown, Director of Nursing. During these years Miss Gunn demonstrated many outstanding qualities—a keen sense of humor, fairness, vision and marked executive ability.

Following this preparation, she was offered the position of Principal of the School of Nursing and Director of Nursing of the Toronto General Hospital. This was both a great responsibility and a great opportunity as at that time the Hospital was being moved near the University in order to improve the clinical teaching opportunities of the Medical School. How often it seems that a higher power directs our destinies. Miss Gunn slowly and surely was developed for greater and broader fields of influence but she never became Superintendent of a hospital.

At her death the Canadian Press—always friendly to her—paid many warm tributes. Since these so well describe what she accomplished in her later years we are quoting direct.

The Globe and Mail, Toronto, paid the following tribute in an Editorial:

"Death Ends Useful Career

> Miss Jean Gunn, for twenty-seven years superintendent of nurses at the Toronto General Hospital, who died recently, wore worthily the Florence Nightingale Medal, awarded for outstanding contributions to the welfare of mankind. Like Florence Nightingale, she was distinguished as a skilled and sympathetic nurse, with the additional distinction of high talent as a hospital administrator.
> It is interesting to record now of this eminently capable woman, this ornament to the nursing profession, that as a child her mind was set on becoming a nurse. This was at an age when there would be no thought of a career, nor of any distinction; merely the kindly impulse to be of service to those who needed nursing care; and that remained throughout her life the guiding spirit of all Miss Jean Gunn's activities.

Such a woman inevitably attracts the attention of all those engaged in humanitarian work. As Miss Gunn's skill as a nurse and her great organizing ability became known she achieved international fame; especially through her association with the Red Cross. In recognition of her work, Miss Gunn received many honors, perhaps the most appropriately worded being that conferred by the French Government for "Outstanding contribution to the general public welfare." "

The Toronto Daily Star:

"An Inspiring Life

In the death of Miss Jean Gunn, the public health field suffers a serious loss. Miss Gunn had for the past 27 years been chief of the nursing service and of the training school for nurses at the Toronto General Hospital. But her contributions in the nursing field were varied and important enough to merit international acclaim. Miss Gunn received during her lifetime many awards and decorations, among them the coveted Florence Nightingale medal for outstanding contributions to the welfare of mankind, and the Order of the British Empire.

The nursing profession is one in which a selfless pioneering spirit is a requisite to achievement. Miss Gunn was known for such spirit. She possessed also outstanding organizing ability by which she was able to establish one of the leading training schools for nurses on this continent. She continually kept pace with the developments in her field. In 1925 Miss Gunn was awarded a Rockefeller scholarship for hospital study in Europe and the hospital nursing service in Canada benefitted from her extensive study and observations.

Miss Gunn took an active and leading part in nursing organizations and in movements to improve the standards and prestige of her profession. She had been the president of the Canadian Nursing Association, vice-president of the International Council of Nurses, Adviser in Nursing to the Red Cross, and one of the founders of the Bedford Post-graduate Nursing Course in England.

Despite serious illness in the past year, Miss Gunn gave her services to Canada's war effort. To her is given the chief credit for the formation of a medical committee to design and plan the surgical supplies provided by the Red Cross for overseas service. Those who knew Miss Gunn as friend or associate speak of her as "a great and noble woman." She spent her life in helping to relieve suffering. Her life and faith will remain an inspiration to the nursing profession and to all who strive to advance the affairs of mankind."

From a column on the obituary page of the Globe and Mail, Toronto, we take the following:

"Won Many Honors

Miss Gunn was honored by the King, recognized by the Government of France and was the recipient of the highest honorary degree of the University of Toronto. In 1925 Miss Gunn was awarded a Rockefeller Scholarship for hospital study in Europe, a recognition of the high degree to which she carried her work in Canada. Ten years later Miss Gunn was honored by the French Government when the Department of Hygiene commemorated her "oustanding contribution to the general public welfare," with a medal. In the same year the International Red Cross Committee of Geneva presented her with the most coveted honor of the nursing profession, the Florence Nightingale Medal, awarded for outstanding contributions to the welfare of mankind.

In September, 1938, the Alumnae Association of Toronto General Hospital tendered Miss Gunn a dinner in recognition of her twenty-fifth anniversary with the hospital. On that occasion congratulatory messages were received from every Province in Canada and from practically every State in the Union to the south, and at several points in the United States dinners were held by groups of graduates who were unable to be present, yet wished to honor their former instructor.

Miss Gunn received many honors during her lifetime. Among them were: President, Canadian Nurses'

Association; vice-president, International Council of Nurses; Adviser in Nursing, the Canadian Red Cross Society; member of the board of the Florence Nightingale Foundation and representative of the International Council and the League of Red Cross Societies. She was one of the founders of the Bedford Post-Graduate Nursing Course, of London, England."

From the Globe and Mail of July 2, 1941, we take the following account of the funeral:

"Hundreds Pay Devout Tribute To Miss J. Gunn

Hundreds of men and women from all walks of life as well as representatives of the medical and nursing profession, filled Old St. Andrew's United Church yesterday to pay tribute to a great nurse at the funeral service of Miss Jean I. Gunn, O.B.E., LL.D.

Superintendent of the Nursing School and member of the staff of Toronto General Hospital for 28 years, Miss Gunn died Saturday night after a lengthy illness. She was born in Belleville and the body was taken there for interment, which will be made today, following a service at her mother's home. The service at Old St. Andrew's was conducted by Rev. J. R. P. Sclater, assisted by Canon Cody, President of the University of Toronto.

Miss Gunn gave definite instructions as to the rites, prior to her passing, said Dr. Sclater, noting that it was her request that there be nothing spectacular at her service. "I do not intend to deliver any lengthy eulogy. There is no need. She and her work are part of Canadian history, inscribed in the golden book of her country and abroad."

"If we seek her monument we have but to look about wherever the nursing profession brings balm to the sick and suffering," said Dr. Sclater, who stated tribute must be paid "not only to the public leader but the tender hearted woman and warm friend".

"I am charged with a word especially for the nurses from Miss Gunn herself," said Dr. Sclater, "she desired you to know that she died as she lived, in the faith. Her final testimony is that of a humble Christian woman who desired her younger friends to practise in private and in the sanctuary the word of God."

Canon Cody, who read the Scriptures, delivered at the request of C. J. Decker, Superintendent of the Toronto General Hospital, a tribute from every member of the Board of Trustees and every member of the staff. "Heartfelt sorrow is felt at the passing of Miss Gunn. That she was a staunch champion of the institution, an earnest and capable leader and an outstanding teacher of scientific nursing, is common knowledge. But only those with whom she worked in the administration of a great hospital can fully appreciate those priceless human qualities that made her cooperation so pleasant and so effective. She was a friend, indeed, whose sympathetic understanding made it easier to attempt the realization of those high ideals of hospital service in which she believed so unfeignedly.

"Miss Gunn was a noble character, a great woman. Her name will be forever linked with this institution, dedicated, as her life was dedicated, to the service of the sick and suffering."

Miss Gunn is survived by three brothers and four sisters, John S., of Belleville; George S., of Stouffville, and Donald A., of Belleville; Mrs. D. M. Sinclair, of Seattle; Mrs. John I. Armstrong, of New York City; Mrs. John Tims and Mrs. C. H. Wills, both of Toronto, to whom the sympathy of the Alumnae Association is extended.

A TRIBUTE

During the first week of June, there was a feeling of sadness associated with a great sense of loss at the Medical Centre. Mrs. Sage, the beloved wife of our President, Mr. Dean Sage, after several months of suffering, went to her long home. During the years in which Mrs. Sage was interested in the Presbyterian Hospital, first, at Seventieth Street and later, the greater undertaking at Medical Centre, she endeared herself to all—not only by a friendliness and interest, but also by a wiseness and a far-sightedness in solving these problems. She was Executive Chairman of the Occupational Therapy Committee and as such responsible for much of the success of that department. Many of us looked forward to the semi-annual sales of this department because we knew Mrs. Sage would spend the day at the Centre and we could have her for luncheon. While she made the Occupational Therapy Department her special interest, still she never failed to express her enthusiasm for the various activities of the School of Nursing and the Alumnae. We will all miss Mrs. Sage.

HELEN YOUNG.

[Excerpts from letter from Dorothy Davis, '40.]

As soon as I arrived in Manila I took the Philippine Board examinations which one must take here in order to secure a license to practice in Manila. I found them very easy after New York State boards, but the results won't be known until the end of this month. As it happens I am working at Sternberg General Hospital which is the U. S. Army Hospital and not under the jurisdiction of the Philippine Government so I don't need a Philippine license.

I am working as a civilian nurse, but get the same pay and privileges as the Army Nurses. I live at home and do not have a contract. I find it much more satisfactory working for the U. S. Government than trying to do private duty or work in any of the city or private hospitals. There are very few American Nurses in the city outside of Sternberg and there is no Nurses Association, therefore I would have to work with the Filipino on a much lower standard although as an American I would get more pay. At Sternberg we work six hours a day and when on nights, 12 hours; however, after being on night duty two weeks we get one week off. We are on duty six hours only because of the climate. It seems that when the nurses worked longer hours they were unable to keep good health records.

I am working in obstetrics now, on night duty. It certainly is a far cry from Sloane, but I am enjoying it very much and certainly getting a lot of experience. I am the only nurse on for the whole ward which includes eight rooms for the mothers, the nursery and delivery room.

It is rather nice having such complete contact with each patient, assisting her in her labor and delivery, taking care of her afterwards as well as taking care of her baby. Since all of the American Army Officers' wives have been sent back to the States, all my patients are the wives of Philippine Scouts. As a rule the Filipino women have very easy deliveries and they go home (walking) on the fourth day if they had no stitches. They are never given any medication or anaesthesia during their labor or delivery. Very often especially at night the nurse has to do the delivery as the women come in in such advanced labor or even if they have been on the ward some time, they advance so rapidly once they start that it is impossible to get the doctor on call up in time. Usually they do arrive in time to deliver the placenta and help put silver nitrate in the babies eyes.

The Babies are all very small rarely weighing over six pounds and more often only five. I have had one 3½ lb. baby and one 4½ lb. baby. The hospital don't even own an incubator but the babies seem to do very well.

I have been getting a tremendous amount of exercise, riding, swimming, playing tennis and Badminton, bowling and playing golf and it seems to agree with me in spite of the heat which has been considerable, as I have gained 10 lbs., am almost as brown as a Filipino and feeling fine.

SCHOOL NEWS

YOU needn't feel sorry for us, thank you. Perhaps none of you had to contend with an honest-to-goodness summer downpour for graduation, but too, none of you have been graduated from beneath the same roof under which you labored for three years toward that end. We of '41 are a little proud of our distinction of being the only class to have had its graduation exercises within the walls of P.H. And to have had for our speaker Walter Lippmann was certainly another event to find us a place of fame in the alumnae's history annals. Each of the graduating class received a printed copy of Mr. Lippmann's address.

Thus passed Pierre's, graduation, and Alumnae Day festivities—then came summer. And so it is now—we know for the class of '42 is busy finding little sisters in the list of incoming students, while the class of '41 is busy marking off the weeks till the individual finishing days. Vacations come and vacations go, but the roof remains the universal sun spot. On June 20th we had the Freshman-Senior dance, which was primarily attended by Juniors, and the following week Dramatic Club opened new doors of production by going to the Maxwell Hall garden to present its spring play—a Shakespearean comedy.

At the last Student Government meeting Miss Conrad made an announcement concerning two of our three affiliations. There will no longer be the two month's affiliation at Henry Street for a selected group of Senior students; it is to be replaced by a two week's affiliation—classes and observation—for all students. The psychiatric affiliation has also been changed—students will go to Psychiatric Institute here in the Medical Center, rather than to the Westchester Division of the New York Hospital in White Plains.

On April 23rd, Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss were guests of honor at a tea, given at Maxwell Hall, by the Class of 1942, of which Dr. Auchincloss is an honorary member. Miss Elizabeth Schoonmaker was the student chairman of the affair. A feature of the afternoon was the exhibit in the South Library of letters concerning the Nightingale fund, which Dr. Auchincloss gave to the School of Nursing and which one section of the class of 1942 has been mounting as a project. Dr. Auchincloss took this occasion to add a first edition of Miss Nightingale's "Life or Death in India", and another of her letters to the growing collection. Other special guests included Mrs. Richard C. Colt, Dr. Auchincloss' sister; Hugh Auchincloss, Jr., Dr. Scudder, Dr. Albert Lamb, Jr., and Mr. Thomas Fleming, librarian at the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Graduates coming back to Maxwell Hall now might guess that it was breakfast time at any meal of the day. We are having cafeteria service entirely.

ELIZABETH WALLACE.

——ANNUAL MEETING——

THE annual meeting of the Alumnae Association of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing was held on Friday, June 6, 1941 at 3 P.M. in Maxwell Hall. Miss Young, treasurer, presided in the absence of Mrs. St. John, the president, and Mrs. Smith, the vice-president, who were both attending their children's graduation.

Following are the reports presented:

Report of the Treasurer
Helen Young, '12

This report is printed in full on page 59.

Alumnae Representative on the Nursing Committee
Marie Byron, '17

The Nursing Committee met eight times in the past year. As your representative on the School of Nursing Committee, I report the following:

The entering class in September 1940 numbered 113.

Classification according to educational preparation—

Degree candidates 56
- College graduates with advanced time credit ..22
- Two or more years college approved 34

Diploma candidates 57
- College or professional school, 1-4 years 16
- High School graduates 41

The average age for the class was 21 years. There were 38 colleges represented. The States represented were 15. There were two students from China.

The number of students registered in the Department of Nursing today are as folows:

Class of 1941 71
Class of 1942 71
Class of 1943 96

Miss Conrad reported that the New Jersey College for Women asked last year about an affiliation in which Rutgers might give the degree on completion of the Nursing Course here. Such an arrangement seemed impractical at present, but plans were made which might arrange for a larger number of students to transfer here as degree students after two years at New Jersey College for Women. Miss Conrad spoke at their vocational conference on November 30th. She also visited several other colleges, and was invited to speak to their student body.

An affiliation with the Highland Hospital of Rochester, New York, for Pediatrics and Neurology was started January 1, 1941.

The affiliation with the Westchester Division of the New York Hospital, formerly Bloomingdale Hospital was discontinued May 1st of this year. Arrangements are being made for the students to affiliate with the New York State Psychiatric Institute for psychiatry. This means that all students will get either psychiatry or neurology. The Henry Street affiliation has been changed from a two months participation basis to a two weeks observation basis.

The following resolution was prepared by Miss Young and sent to Mr. Talmage on the death of Mrs. Talmage, which occurred November 8, 1940.

"In the death of Mrs. Talmage the nurses at the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center have lost a loyal friend. Her interest in the welfare of both graduates and undergraduates was evidenced by her many kindnesses. She contributed generously toward the comfort and pleasure of those whose living quarters were within the hospital. The opportunity given the student nurses to attend concerts during the winter was one example of her desire to share with them the beautiful things of life. The Alumnae have been indebted to her for many years for the charming table decorations at the annual dinners to the Graduating Classes. She was an active, devoted and highly useful member of the Nursing Committee from 1929 until her death."

Your representative reported that at the resuest of the Trust Company of the Bank and the Finance Committee of the Alumnae Association a complete revision of the By-Laws had been made. In doing this we had the assistance of the law firm of DeForest and Elder.

There was much discussion at the February and April meetings as to what could be done to protect the graduate group living in apartments in the neighborhood of the hospital from thieves. It was decided to ask for police protection, and we understand that detectives have been assigned to this area.

Ten graduate nurses, who have been out of nursing for some years started a refresher course at Presbyterian on March 24, 1941. The New York State League of Nursing Education is sponsoring these refresher courses and several other hospitals are conducting similar programs. The idea is to bring into nursing the older graduate nurses to prevent a shortage of nurses.

Fourteen nurses received their degree in Nursing in January, 1941. They were presented their diplomas by Dr. Rappelye, acting for the President of Columbia University. This is the second group to receive a degree in nursing since the School was made a Department of Nursing of the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

At the October meeting it was reported that Miss Wilde, Miss Wescot and Miss Olson, P.H. nurses in the American-Scandinavian Unit to Finland had returned. Miss Sheila Dwyer, Head Nurse on the Urological Service, sailed for England September 27, 1940 to be a charge nurse in Dr. Philip Wilson's Hospital. She returned in May. Gladys Curry, Class of 1918, who has been living in France for several years, has been doing volunteer work at the American Hospital at Neuilly before the German occupation. She returned to the United States in May.

There are ten Presbyterian nurses in active services in camps in this country. The Presbyterian Hospital in cooperation with the United States Government and the National Research Council has organized a unit for the study of infection in severe accidental wounds. Five beds on L-West will be used and three on the Fracture Service. In order to keep these beds filled with suitable cases, arrangements have been made with the Department of Hospitals of the City of New York for the admission to this hospital of severe accident and burn cases.

Report of the Alumnae Distributing Fund Committee
Margaret Conrad, '20, Chairman

The report for 1940 appeared in full in the Quarterly Magazine for January 1941.

A total sum of $2,339.04 was received, with 365 of our graduates and several of our friends as donors.

This year's receipts bring the grand total for the Fund since it was established in 1934 to $13,042.91.

Sick Benefit	$ 150.00
Pension Fund	100.00
Kennedy Fund	100.00
1920 Memorial Sch. Fund	90.00
Students Scholarships	500.00
Anniversary Fund	900.00
General Fund	185.00
Nurses' House at Babylon	300.00
Unassigned Balance	14.04
	$2,339.04

Donations	$2,162.20
Quick Reference	162.80
Unassigned Balance	14.04
	$2,339.04

The students scholarships were awarded to these students:

Eileen M. E. Goodyer 1941
Edna Ellen Higgins 1941
Esther L. Johnsen 1941
Catherine Sause 1941
Helen A. Dawson 1942
Ruth Galloway 1942
Nancy Wamsley 1942
Alice M. Bigger 1943
Rosemary Heeren 1943
Dorothy R. Manion 1943

1920 Memorial Scholarship
Agnes Nelson 1941

The appeal this year has been in the form of a letter sent to every graduate,—to members with the bills for dues, and to non-members, separately. A new card of acknowledgment of gifts is being used, to date. This has brought $2,000.00 from 398 donors, of this amount, $83.00 was received on graduation day, after the luncheon. Three gifts of $100.00 each have been received.

Suggestions for activities this year include: using sub-committees to be appointed by the class agents themselves; making special appeals to alumnae able to give larger gifts for $10 and $25, perhaps as one of a group each of whom would agree to give such a gift this year; urging every graduate to give something: keeping statistics on all activities for the individual agents' report at the November meeting; making up book plates to be sold by the Alumnae Shops for the Anniversary Fund, from the two doorways which appear on the Fiftieth Anniversary heading.

The Committee members for this year are Eleanor Hall, '36; Ruth Williams, '17; Anne Pyle, '38; Karen Munch, '26 and Cleo Steiner, '22 (arranged in order of length of term).

We are all indebted to the class agents for their enthusiasm and labor, and to all of our donors for their fine cooperation.

Report of Alumnae Shops Committee

Since the last annual meeting, the Alumnae Shop Committee has turned over to the Endowment Fund $4,000 of their surplus money making the total of $26,715.41 since May 20, 1932. The inventory of April 30, 1941 shows assets to the value of $6,363.35 of which $1,810.98 is in cash.

The Neurological Shop has had its first birthday and the sales have been increasing satisfactorily. The Presbyterian Shop, with its new cabinet, has been redecorated a pale green and seems much more spacious. A section of the general storeroom on Floor X has been allotted to the Shop for a stock room which fulfills a long felt need.

Mrs. Martin deForest Smith who was elected Chairman of the Shop Committee by the Executive Committee in June 1940 resigned in January and Miss Helen P. Wood was appointed Chairman at that time.

Report of the Education Committee
Eleanor Lee, '20, Chairman

EMMA BAKER KENNEDY SCHOLARSHIP FUND

Two Scholarships of $150.00 each were awarded in the spring term to Marguerite W. Potter and Helena van Duynhoven, both of whom were studying at Teachers College, Columbia University. Miss Potter received her B.S. degree at Columbia Commencement on June 3rd, 1941.

Head Nurses' Convention Fund

Thirteen Head Nurses went as delegates to the New York State League of Nursing Education Convention at The Biltmore, New York in October.

In May three Head Nurses were delegates at the National League of Nursing Education Convention in Detroit, Michigan:—Margaret J. Hawthorne, head nurse, Metabolism Service, Grace Hartman, assistant head nurse, Neurological Institute and Eleanor McLaughlin Fries, head nurse, Sloane Nurseries. Reports were given by the delegates at the Head Nurses' meeting following the Detroit Convention.

The proceeds from the sale on Alumnae Day, June 6th of blue and white boutonnieres were $432.60. The expenses for flowers, pins, etc. was $30.50 making a profit of $402.10. The balance on hand on June 1st was $140.00 making a total of $542.10 in the Head Nurses' Convention Fund in the Corn Exchange Bank.

Legislative Committee
Emily Bauer, '09, Chairman

The 1941 Session of the New York State Legislature adjourned April 3rd, 1941.

There were 6 bills introduced to amend the Nurse Practice Act.

The Todd—(A. Int. 746, Pr. 816)—Mahoney Bill (S. Int. 588, Pr. 659) introduced "at the request of the Commission to Formulate a Long Range Health Program" was passed and signed by the Governor, as amended the law,

A. Permits persons who failed to make application for license either as a Registered Professional Nurse or a Practical Nurse to do so until July 1st, 1941.

B. The effective date of the law when all who nurse for hire must have a license is postponed from July 1st, 1941 to January 1st, 1942.

C. Until 1946, The Department of Education may admit to the licensing examination a graduate of a school of nursing accredited in any other state, province or country, who has completed a course of study in Nursing considered by the department to be equivalent to that required in this state at that time and has met all the requirements as to age, citizenship and preliminary education.

D. Permits the practice of nursing, pending results of licensing examinations by graduates of registered schools and other approved applicants; provided the candidate enters the next available examination until she passes, but not beyond the announcement of the result of the third such examination.

The Crawford Bill (Int. 1383, Pr. 2206) which, until January 1st, 1942, grants a license to one who has completed a course in nursing, has practiced as a resident of this state for ten years and is engaged in nursing without financial gain as a member of a religious order was passed and signed by the Governor.

The Page Bill (Int. 1817, Pr. 2282) admits to a practical examination for R. N. a graduate of a two year course in nursing in a U. S. School not accredited, who has practiced for ten years, five of them in this state, and who applies before July 1st, 1941.—Passed and signed by the Governor.

The Crawford and Page Bills are, in effect waivers.

The Esquirol Bill (Int. 2123) to amend the general business law in relation to Nursing Bureaus in cities of New York State. (Similar to Buckley Bill of last year) was killed in Committee.

Report of the Chairman of the Private Duty Nurse Group for the Year
Margaret Grant Elliott, '33, Chairman

Miss Young has held two meetings with the private duty nurses during the year. Topics concerning the hospital and the group in particular were presented and discussed.

District No. 13 has sponsored several interesting programs including lectures and demonstrations on professional subjects. More than fifteen of our group attended a study course in First Aid conducted at the Washington Heights Health Center.

Many of the "Specials" have been knitting all winter for American and British war relief societies.

The group has been making a real effort to be of aid in the necessary economy program of the hospital.

We all wish to express our appreciation to Miss Helen Young and Miss Phyllis Young for their cooperation and interest in behalf of the private duty nurses.

Serving on the committee this year are Miss Elspeth Gould, Miss Katherine Ives and Miss Ruth Fehrmann.

For the year 1941-42 Miss Mary Galligan has been appointed chairman.

Report of Radio Committee
Helen Scott, '27, Chairman

Report of the Red Cross Committee
Marjorie Peto, '26, Chairman

The Junior class with the assistance of the graduate nurses and other students raised $1,192 for the American Red Cross annual drive in 1940.

Report of the Social Committee
Margaret Eliot, '21, Chairman

The Social Committee of the Alumnae Association has had a very active few weeks recently. This year we went back to the Hotel Pierre for the dinner for the graduating class and 275 of us dined there together on Wednesday evening. The ball room was a lovely setting for the very pretty senior class. The beautiful arrangements of blue and white flowers on the class tables were the gift of Mrs. Sage who had ordered them herself several weeks ago while Mrs. W. R. K. Taylor very kindly had all the other tables decorated for us. As is customary, several of the flower arrangements were brought back with us after the party and used yesterday for the reunion tables. After dinner Mrs. Martin de Forest Smith welcomed the class for

Mrs. St. John and introduced Mr. Griswold, the Vice President of Presbyterian Hospital. Mr. Griswold spoke in his usual gracious way and was followed by a few words from Miss Young without which no party would be complete. After a dancing couple entertained us with a few dances and a few tricks we all danced until 12:30. You must know that without the able help of Miss Eleanor Lee I am sure you would have been sitting at the wrong tables and very likely in each other's laps, so I want to thank her right now for all she did!

After each meeting during the year we have had our social hour made, I think, more social by a little liquid as well as solid refreshment. Next year the social committee will try very hard to fulfill its obligation with as many dinners, luncheons and teas as will make a satisfactory fiftieth anniversary for the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing.

Report of the 50th Anniversary Committee
Emily Clatworthy, '98, Chairman

Since June 1939 when we held the first meeting of the Central Committee and Committee Chairmen, we have tried to keep the 50th Anniversary before the eyes and in the minds of the students of the school and of the members of the Alumnae Association Data and information have appeared in seven issues of the Quarterly. Last year at this time a program of the proposed events was mailed to each graduate whether a member of the Alumnae Association or not, and again we had it printed in the January Quarterly of this year. This program has not been changed. During the winter the Central Committee was enlarged to give better representation to the forty-six classes which had been graduated. Now we add another forty-seven and will have a representative from the class of 1941. The Chairman met with the chairmen of the various Committees during the year and a meeting of all Committee members was held March 25th at which time 30 were present.

Miss Lee—chairman of the History Committee has been very busy making contacts with the first head nurses and others who knew of Miss Maxwell's activities in those early days—graduates of St. Luke's, Massachusetts General and Hartford Hospitals have been helpful and from her experiences a very interesting history is being assembled. The book will be sold at a reasonable price and I am sure will be a great success thanks to Miss Lee.

During March Miss Conrad Chairman of the Program Committee and who is also (as you know) chairman of the Distributing Fund Committee. This Committee was responsible for the sending to all Alumnae Members and non-members of the Association literature pertaining to the Anniversary. Miss Conrad assures us that no special financial appeal other than this will be made in connection with that event but I am sure you will all want to support it through this appeal.

Realizing that the success of any Anniversary depends largely on the interest indicated by the size of the Attendance. We are most anxious that all shall know in plenty of time to make their plans. Questionnaires will be sent out next autumn and winter with information as to costs, etc. Questions may crop up in your minds from time to time send them along we will gladly answer them and publish them in the Quarterly for the benefit of others. Our Annual meeting next year will end the festivities and we hope to have seen so many of our old friends. If we all do as much as we can and talk a lot about it from now until next June, I am sure we shall have had a most successful fiftieth and truly golden Anniversary.

Annual Report of the Meeting of New York County's Registered Nurses Association—District No. 13

Annie M. Thomas, '05

The membership during the year has been increased to 2477 also there has been an increase in membership dues of fifty cents each.

A revision of the By-laws has been made.

An advisory Health and Preparedness Committee was formed which includes the arrangements for a Refresher Course in different Hospitals for older graduates who have been inactive, also for first aid groups and some who have completed the course have assisted with the teaching of Home Nursing Classes under the Red Cross.

Some broadcasts on the nurses survey were given over station W.N.Y.C.

The Emergency Relief Committee reported twelve emergency loans returned.

The Nurses Service Committee questionnaire sent to Alumnae Associations were slow in being filled out and returned but to date the report is as follows:

Sick Benefits	$3,261,00
Gifts	831.89
Loans	1,585.00
Annuities	9,465.60

The treasurer reported $2,386.44 remaining in the general funds.

Nan Cummings (Mt. Sinai) elected First Vice President.
Miss Rosenkranz (Metropolitan) Recording Secretary
Directors: Miss Falls and Fayville.

A talk on Red Cross stressing the need of nurses to meet the present situation was given.

Report of the Program Committee
Winifred Kaltenbach, '20, Chairman

The graduates who were able to come to the Alumnae meetings in November and in February practically encircled the globe. In November they traveled from Norway by sea with Delphine Flora Wilde, '26 and from Italy by air with Adeline Virginia Hartman, '29. In February they traveled East by sea and rail from Beirut, Syria with Edith Marjorie Flater, '23.

Report of the Public Health Committee
Karen E. Munch, '26, Chairman

All the New York City hospitals have co-operated this year in the new effort to reduce deaths of infants under one year of age. A daily list of the discharges of infants from the maternity services is sent to the Department of Health which forwards these lists to the local health centers. Public Health nurses visit all infants not under private physicians care giving temporary health supervision and seeing that the baby is referred for medical care.

The new National Defense Program has resulted in an increase in Public Health activities. X-Rays of all the draftees have uncovered many cases of early Tuberculosis. Blood serological tests are finding cases of syphilis. A need for intensive help in health education is presenting itself more and more as nutritional and physical defects are being found.

Dear Fellow Alumnae.

Three years ago when we began the arrangements for the Fiftieth Anniversary Graduation Day 1942 seemed far in the future.

The Program Committee expects to make few changes in the tentative program. In a few weeks you will receive a return postcard asking for information about your plans for attending the celebration in June.

Since the facilities of the Medical Centre will be taxed to the utmost by the increased number at the Graduation Exercises no arrangements for individual Class Reunion luncheons can be made here. Another courtesy extended to the returning graduates — that of providing uniforms — will be omitted this year. It will, however, be a great disappointment if those having uniforms do not join the procession.

Our Canadian Alumnae (one hundred in number) may have difficulty in coming to the festivities on account of travel restrictions. It is already being suggested that Class mates invite them to be their guests for the week.

The contributions to the Anniversary Fund have been so generous that the general expenses are assured.

We are expecting to be very happy next June seeing each other and recalling other days. But we should remember that the real purpose of such an anniversary is to do honor to those who made the present possible. I think of the generosity of the many friends of the Presbyterian Hospital; the wise judgment of the Board of Managers; the great devotion of the Surgical and Medical Staff; and above all the wisdom of Miss Maxwell whose high standard of nursing care still points our way.

"PRESBYTERIAN GOES TO THE ARMY"

AT the present writing there are twenty-five Presbyterian nurses serving in Army Camps. They are all Red Cross Nurses, and we are proud of them. Miss Gertrude Banfield, '20, who is the Assistant Director of the Red Cross Nursing Service, and is in the Washington Office, spends many agitated moments trying to recruit sufficient Red Cross Nurses in order that the Army may have an adequate supply on which to draw as its needs increase. Miss Banfield must feel especially proud when she accepts a member of the "P.H." alumnae, so if you've been putting off joining the Red Cross until a more auspicious moment arose, now is the time! Join now, and help support Miss Banfield in her earnest endeavor to see that the Army is assured of plenty of nurses.

We are printing a list of the Alumnae already in camps, and where they are situated. If we have overlooked anyone kindly notify us at once so that we may give credit where credit is due. Or if you have been transferred to another post, please tell us that too. We are interested in every detail of your experiences and will be glad to publish any letters or excerpts from any of you. Perhaps you can persuade a classmate to join you if she thinks she is missing something. Let's see what good recruits the Presbyterian Alumnae can be!

THE RED CROSS NURSES' TRAINING CAMP, 1941

THE Red Cross Nurses' Training Camp for college graduates held at Bryn Mawr College this summer was an interesting venture in many ways.

Its original sponsors were Bryn Mawr College, The Woman's Medical College, and The American Red Cross.

While its resemblance to its natural ancestor, the Vassar Training Camp of 1918, was evident, it had certain distinctive characteristics of its own. Some of them resulted from the very brief time available for publicity and preparation (the decision to establish it was made on May 23rd, and the opening exercises were held on June 26th;) and some of them reflected the changes that have taken place in the curriculum of the basic course.

The general plan was the same: to give college graduates the instruction of the preclinical term, preparing them for the completion of the basic professional course in schools of nursing in less than the customary three years. The curriculum therefore covered anatomy and physiology, chemistry, microbiology, nutrition and cookery, community health and an introduction to nursing involving nursing practice, hygiene, drugs and solutions and professional adjustments. The Philadelphia Presbyterian Hospital generously allowed some of its wards to be used for actual practice during the last few weeks. The nutrition laboratory at Drexel Institute was made available, as neither time nor finances permitted the equipment of one on the campus. The emphasis on community health with visits to hospital and child health clinics and to patients' homes was made possible by the cooperation of various hospitals and agencies in Philadelphia. And the Philadelphia Board of Education, by supplying bus transportation without charge, enabled us to use all of these scattered facilities as well as the anatomy and physiology laboratories at the Woman's Medical College. So one difference between the summer of 1918 and that of 1941 was the amount of time spent in bus travel.

One of the greatest contrasts was in the number of students actually enrolled,—thirty instead of four hundred. The registration was no indication of the degree of interest, however, for there were nearly five hundred inquiries. The thirty students represented sixteen states (including Arizona and Florida) and twenty-six colleges. They were a serious, democratic, enthusiastic group of students,—very much like their forebears in characteristics. The small numbers made it possible to give much more individual attention and instruction than would have been possible otherwise; and the results of this "tutorial experiment" were very gratifying.

The faculty was made up of excellent teachers, each of the sciences being taught by a text book author (Drs. Greisheimer, Arnow and Frobisher) and all courses by instructors with wide experience in their fields and in the teaching of nurses. Our other alumnae representative was Isabel Waterhouse, 1925, who was in charge of the infirmary and who taught hygiene. The Woman's Medical College furnished a very thorough health service.

The hospitality of Bryn Mawr was interpreted most thoroughly and graciously by Mrs. Thomas Raeburn White (Dorothy Shipley of the Vassar Training Camp) who was the prime mover in the original plan; and by Mrs. James Chadwick-Collins, the college Director in Residence and Administrator of the Camp. Their understanding and enthusiasm were vital factors in the success of the summer, and as they are continuing to give both time and effort to the problems of recruiting and of financial aid for student nurses, their interest may bear lasting fruit.

Five of these students transferred to our School. Others are completing their courses at Johns Hopkins, Bellevue, Lincoln and the University of Minnesota.

STATE BIENNIAL CONVENTION

THE second Biennial Convention and the thirty-ninth Convention of the New York State Nurses Association, and the New York League of Nursing Education, was held at the Hotel St. George in Brooklyn.

At this four-day convention which opened on Monday evening, October 20th, with a "Red Cross Night" at the Academy of Music, and closed Friday evening, October 24th, the hostess was District 14, and very able hostesses they were. Delightful and delicious breakfasts, luncheons, dinners, floor show, fashion show, speeches by H. V. Kaltenborn, and Bertha Damon, who wrote "Grandma it Carnal," were some of the interesting activities.

The registration at the Convention was 2,720. The theme of the Convention was "Our Communities and Their Nurses." It was a most inspiring as well as interesting and educational experience. Nurses part in the Defense program was given a prominent place in the programs. Mr. Moir Tanner, President of the New York State Hospital Association, told us how "Hospitals Prepare for Defense." Dr. John J. Bourke, Medical Officer for the New York State Civilian Defense, told of the "Relation of Emergency Medical Service to the General Defense Program," and Miss Caroline Falls, R.N., Director of the Defense Program of the New York State Nurses Association, told of the Nurses part in the Defense Program, "The Inventory goes to Work". Miss Helen Young, presided at one meeting of the League of Nursing Education, at which meeting, Miss Margaret Arnstein, '28, spoke on "Communicable disease nursing in the home," and Miss Elizabeth Wilcox, '27, "Opportunities for teaching communicable disease nursing in the general hospital."

The Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Centre, as well as our Alumnae, was well represented at the meetings of the Convention.

The Private duty section held two business meetings during the convention, conducted by Miss Nan D. Cuming, chairman. The eight-hour day for Private duty nurses was discussed, but many thought that due to our national emergency, it was unwise to work for it at the present time, others however were in disagreement with this idea. Accordingly four resolutions were proposed at these meetings.

1. A committee be appointed by the State Board of Directors with the Private duty chairman as one member, to help the districts with their hours and wage problems, if they so request.

2. That there be one meeting of the Private duty section, devoted entirely to business without other programs planned for the same meeting.
3. That a quarterly report from all districts be sent to the State Chairman to keep her posted on the activities of the Private duty Nurse.
4. That the hours of voting at the Convention coincide with the business sessions, so that those coming only for the business sessions may have an opportunity to vote, also that evening hours of voting be included.

New officers of the Private duty section elected were:

Chairman—Miss Anne Hardy, District 1
Vice-Chairman—Miss Dorothy Rostetter, District 13
Secretary—Miss Gertrude Lyon, District 9

State officers elected were:

President—Miss Ruth G. Hall, District 2
Vice-President—Miss Grace M. Longhurst, District 15
Second Vice-President—Miss Minnie Shaw, District 7
Secretary—Mrs. Dorothy D. McLaughlin, District 14
Directors—Miss Agnes Gilinas, District 9
Mrs. Tessa M. Klinn, District 1
Miss Blanche T. Mann, District 8

There were several amendments to the By-laws of the Association.

Space prohibits my going into further details of the Convention, but a detailed report will be published in the next issue of the "New York State Nurse."

As a delegate to the convention, I wish to thank the Alumnae for this privilege and opportunity.

JANE M. WILSON, '29

TWO additional letters by Florence Nightingale were given to Miss Young by Dr. Hugh Auchincloss in September for our collection.

A statement enclosed with the letter to Captain Galton gives the information that Sir Douglas Galton was related to Florence Nightingale.

The letter to C. S. Whitbread, Esq. copied in full below is dated August 2, 1901 which makes this letter the only one in our collection written after 1899. The letters in our collection beginning with the one written in 1854 now extend over forty-seven years of Florence Nightingale's life.

HEAD NURSE COURSE

A special program for head nurses has been arranged at Teachers College, Columbia University this year as a project in the Defense Program financed by Federal funds appropriated for nursing education. Six hospitals are cooperating in the plan and each head nurse student will spend twenty-four hours per week in supervised experience on the hospital ward and approximately ten hours per week in class at Teachers College. Each head nurse student will receive 22 credits toward her B.S. degree at the end of the spring semester.

Three Presbyterian graduates are taking the course, Elsie Moore, '40 at Babies, Mary M. Scott, '40 at Neurological, and Margaret M. Finn, '39 at Sloane. The cost to the head nurse student is carfare and one meal per day at the college; the hospital provides laundry and two meals per day; the remainder of the expenses, tuition and nursing is covered by the federal funds.

Members of the Committee have probably seen reference in News articles to these funds. On July 1, 1941 $1,250,000.00 was appropriated for Nursing education to be administered by the Federal Security Agency, U. S. Public Health Service, and Surgeon-General Parran.

The Scholarship Committee of the Alumnae Association decided to use the two Emma Baker Kennedy Scholarships of $300.00 each for this year to help pay the expenses of the third head nurse student as we were offered only two scholarships from the federal funds.

REUNION CLASSES

MORE reports of the reunion luncheon meetings held on the roof of the Presbyterian Hospital follow.

1906

At thirty-fifth reunion of this class there were six present at lunch. A splendid time was enjoyed by all, and many letters were received from absentees.

Those present were:

Katherine M. Danner
Sybil Eden
Helena Mackie
Grace Emily Towner
Mrs. Boyd (Lydia Vernon Smith)
Mrs. Bethel (Edith Mary Truman)

1911

There were five members of the class of 1911 at the reunion luncheon on June 5, 1941. A pleasant time was enjoyed by all. Those present were:

Ethel Bellamy Pearsall
Helen C. Howes
Rose E. Griffith
Agnes M. Shuford
Ruth B. Wood

1921-1941

Eleven of us sat down together for luncheon last June at graduation-time to celebrate the 20th reunion of the Class of 1921. All our arrangements were very simple because we want to have our real celebration next June at the time of the Fiftieth Anniversary and then we hope to have many more here. However, it was great fun getting together and we were all very much pleased with our party—and our birthday-cake! We were not sure how many were coming and as each came we added places one by one and in the end we had to have a larger table. Everyone looked well and happy—and remarkably young. It seemed a very short time since we were together "doing medicines and dressings"!

Next year we hope our "Canadian Contingent" will come and we are planning to arrange for them. The class of 1921 is never complete without this distinguished group. Those at the luncheon were as follows:

M. Elizabeth Allanach
Dorothy Wandel Bancroft
Lelia Hedges Dennen
Margaret Eliot
Dorothy Gilliam
Elizabeth Deans Howell
Katherine Tucker Orbison
Caroline R. Smith
Margaret Green Todd
Francis G. Townsend
Florence West

1926

Without the slightest show of apprehension, thirteen members of the class of '26 sat down together at luncheon on Graduation Day. R Floor of the hospital had been turned over to reunion classes and the tables in the gymnasium were most attractive with blue and white centerpieces, and place cards as souvenirs appropriate of the occasion.

We have gathered some facts about the thirteen stalwarts who bravely faced the truth and came to their fifteenth reunion. We will briefly record these and other items of class news for posterity.

Margaret Urquhart Forster—slim as a girl in spite of three children, one twelve, one eleven and one seven.

Marion Holland—who has the important post as night director at Vanderbilt Clinic. Marion is the class traveller for besides having taken yearly trips in all directions, her around the world tour still makes us envious.

Peg Cleveland Mortimer—smartly turned out as ever. No children but plenty of other worries, eh Peg?

Marian Nelson—one of the best on the Presbyterian Registry in case any of you should need a really good one.

Irene Hamlin Kent—has two children and a husband in the Merchant Marine. That's something to think about these days.

Jeb Smith Addis—just crazy about reunions, hasn't missed one in years.

Marjorie Peto—our patriotic member, head of the Presbyterian Hospital Nursing Unit under the American Red Cross. Pete will be in charge of 120 nurses with Field Hospital #2 comes the revolution.

Huldah Robbins Labusohr—arrived with pictures of two completely grown up children. Huldah had a little head start on most of us though, remember?

Margaret Stewart—No one can compete with Peg when it comes to counting children. She has them by the dozens and dozens. Being Director of Nurses of the Children's Hospital, Detroit, she can match any of the problems you mothers might present.

Margaret Eddinger Andrews—your alumna president ladies, who is intensely interested in all of us, gives a dinner and theatre party every reunion. Let her hear from you (New Bethlehem, Pa.) if anything happens, such as a new husband, a new baby, or a new job.

Delphine Wilde—had her taste of war last year, bombed and everything. Went to Sweden in charge of the nurses in the Swedish American Unit.

Margaret Grant Hill—bringing up two splendid looking children from their pictures. A son Bobbie, and a daughter Barbara.

Cecile Covell—has bought and renovated an old house at Quaker Hill, Pawling, New York. Planning to retire to it at 65 which won't be long now. In the short time left hopes to remain at Neurological.

Bitsie Berrien D'Esopo—just missed the luncheon by a year, thought it was to be in 1942. Made graduation though. Bitsie has at the last count three children, Peter, Tony and Jane.

And here is other news of our classmates which came by mail, by telegraph, by air and by telephone at reunion time.

Jeannette Archer Neal—sent us a telegram wishing us happy times. Jinny has two boys and a banker husband. Has been giving lectures we hear on Madame Chiang Kai-shek in case any of you Ladies Aiders want a speaker for some of your Wednesday meetings.

Phoebe Bull Kirby—lives in Santa Cruz, California but remembered to send us a letter just the same. Has married a real southerner from Carolina she says, and to date no children.

Edna Dugan—is in charge of the Doctor's Private Offices at Neurological. We send our sympathy to Edna at this time for her sister Katherine died at Harkness Pavilion, Saturday, July 12th.

Irene Elderkin Hewson—sent two charming pictures of herself and family, all on skis, radiating health. Irene has a son Roger and a daughter Jeann, and stated that only the Canadian Customs officials kept her from reunion this year.

Ruby Lowry—is specialing in New York City, sent best wishes to all.

Margaret Miller Robertson—although married is educational supervisor with the New Britain, Connecticut Visiting Nurse's Association. She sent us several pictures of husband and young son James, aged two years.

Hilda Minshall—leads a very pleasant existence we should imagine from the picture she sent of her infirmary at Smith College. Getting fat she tells us.

Karen Munch—we can't keep up with Karen, she is just acquiring degrees and scholarships yearly. Her last position was with the Washington Heights Health Center, the newest unit to build in Presbyterian's back yard.

Margaret Peck Peck—sent us a mighty cute picture of her two children, Constance and Peter. Peter Peck, isn't that nice? Peg speaks of seeing Edwina Pabst Jeter who has a son but Edie didn't write us, we can't imagine why.

Katie Pettengill Dare—wrote us from Florida where her husband is at Camp Blanding with the Vermont National Guards. Katie married a minister and has one son.

Margaret Reese Cochran—Maggie's modest letter told us little about herself but we wager she is chairman of this, that or the other down there in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Catherine Trott Heckler—has given the class its latest offspring. Her baby is just a few months old. Many thanks Trott, it's that sort of thing that keeps us in the running so to speak!

We hope those of you who did not write will be motivated now to send in some word of yourself, and pictures. The family album is getting mighty interesting. Don't say "nobody wants to hear about me—I'm just a housewife"—because we do. As time goes on most of us find ourselves even getting a little bit sentimental over each of those fifty girls who graduated together fifteen years ago.

We are looking forward now to the fiftieth reunion. Plans for this celebration have been going on for over two years and if ever we consider returning to a graduation, 1942 is the year to do it. Although time is carrying us along with increasing rapidity, we all hope the intervening years will not cause us to forget entirely the friends we made and the experiences we shared back in 1926.

Cecile Covell,
Reunion Chairman

Can anyone help us with these "addresses unknown?"

NEWS BY CLASSES

1897

Nancy Elizabeth Cadmus of Poultney, Vermont came to New York this fall and was entertained by some of her former graduates at the Staten Island Hospital. Miss Cadmus was superintendent of nurses of this hospital from 1902-1909. She also had luncheon with Miss Young at the Medical Center and on her way home had a pleasant visit with Miss Annie Goodrich at her attractive cottage near Coventry.

1904

Sister Mary Sylvia writes that she is very happy to be back at Kenosha and is enjoying living at the Convent which is beautifully situated on the shores of Lake Michigan.

1908

Elizabeth M. Phillips writes of an interesting phase of war work that she has initiated in San Francisco. Under the direction of the American Red Cross, boxes of food are sent to English prisoners interned in Germany. 170 men are each receiving a box every month. They are continually receiving more names of prisoners and are now looking for more sponsors.

1915

Sympathy is extended to Retta L. Pinney whose father died on September 18th, after a short illness.

1919

Sympathy is extended to Alice Bliss Smith whose mother died in Jerusalem on June 27th at the age of 78.

1920

The friends of Helen Shurman Magruder were interested to see the picture of her husband Brigadier General John Magruder on the front page of the August 27th New York Herald Tribune. Brigadier General John Magruder, who had twice served as a military attache in China, has been appointed by President Roosevelt to head the Chungking Mission. The group of experts sent to China will not only decide what arms and supplies China needs under the lend-lease act but will also act as advisers to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's armies.

Eleanor Lee has had several visits with women who were familiar with the early days of the Presbyterian Hospital. She has gathered many interesting facts for the History of the School of Nursing which is being prepared by her for the 50th Reunion. This summer when she went to Boston to the dinner celebrating Linda Richards birthday, she was shown Miss Maxwell's original application to the School of Nursing of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Caroline Morris Holmes is in charge of the Infirmary of Pembroke College, Brown University, Providence, R. I.

Augusta Patton taught at the Simmons College Summer Session. She now has a position at the Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester.

Mae Ellen Wilson is teaching Physiology in Roosevelt High School in Los Angeles and is working for her Ph.D. in Zoology at the University of California, specializing in Marine Life. She has had a course at the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole.

1923

Mary Edith D'Oyly writes from Surrey, England that they have in every town and village a "Spitfire Fund." This fund is used for war planes. She feels that contribution to this fund is a very good way to help. Donations to the fund should be sent to Lord Halifax, British Embassy, Washington, D. C.

1924

Annie Katherine Lyman is still in Beirut, Syria. A United Press dispatch from Beirut, dated June 16, reported that the University had invited the public to make use of the campus air-raid shelters, now no longer needed for students. The University campus and buildings are so conspicuous that it would be difficult to hit them with bomb or shell unless intentionally. There are few military targets close by with the exception of some shore batteries and the lighthouse. The campus should be the safest spot in Beirut during a bombardment.

1927

Sympathy is extended to Helen L. Scott whose father died in the early part of October.

Sympathy is extended to Helen Henry Woolsey in the loss of her mother.

1928

Helen Maria Roser has resigned from her position as instructor at Presbyterian Hospital and is now Educational Director at the Neuro-Psychiatric Institute in Hartford.

Louise Jack Collins is not having time hang heavy on her hands. In addition to the care of her home and three lively boys, she has gotten back into uniform and is teaching Red Cross Courses to groups of lay women. She writes that she is enjoying this work though it is necessary for her to spend four or five hours of study in preparation of each class.

Rhoda Reddig writes that she attended the American Hospital Association Convention in Atlantic City. She expected 100 students in her entering class on September 22nd.

Helen L. Arnold has returned to her former position as nurse at the Eaglebrook School in Old Deerfield.

1929

Caroline Keller has been appointed director of nursing and principal of the School of Nursing of the Rochester General Hospital.

Sympathy is extended to Emmeline Steiner Woolley in the loss of her mother.

1930

Alison MacBride, formerly supervisor at East Harlem Health Center, has gone to Hawaii as assistant supervisor of the Public Health Service.

1931

Mary Elizabeth Galligan has an industrial nursing position with the Shenley Distillers Corporation.

1932

Mary Houston is spending this winter studying at the Harvard Graduate School of Education and Boston University Division of Nursing Education.

Marjory Hibbard has received her Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Washington and is now at the Presbyterian Hospital in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

1933

Wilma Stevens has received her Masters Degree in Nursing from the University of Washington. She is now educational director at St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago, Ill.

1934

Barbara Coburn D'Arthenay was executive secretary for two years of the Montpelier Chapter of the American Red Cross. She had prepared for this work in Washington at the National Headquarters. Mrs. D'Arthenay has also been teaching Home Hygiene.

Elizabeth W. Brackett received her Master of Public Health degree from Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene in Baltimore in June. This work was done under a Rockefeller Fellowship. During the summer she has been on a Travel Fellowship in the south and west observing some of the State Public Health activities. She is to spend four months this fall at the University of Toronto studying the nursing curriculum in the Undergraduate and Public Health nursing divisions in preparation for an appointment to the staff of the International Health Division of the Rockefeller Foundation for foreign service about the first of the year.

Helena H. Van Duyhoven will be Staff Nurse at the New York Public Library during the coming year while Beatrice Urban Elliott is away on leave.

For the past two years Mary L. Heller has been doing "Metropolitan Nursing" in Amsterdam, N. Y. Amsterdam has a population of 35,000 largely Polish and Italian who work in the Bigelow and Sanford Carpet Mills. Miss Heller writes that there are two nurses on the staff and that they have an office on the top (seventh) floor of Amsterdam's "skyscraper."

Marion Powell Turchi writes that she is teaching Home Nursing for the Red Cross. Mrs. Turchi and Helena Hughes Talbot, '13, expect to come from Portland, Oregon to the 50th Anniversary.

Nellie Steenland is Health Director of the New Jersey Zinc Co.

1936

Eleanor A. Hall is Instructor in Nursing Arts at the Hospital of the Women's Medical College in Philadelphia.

1937

Sympathy is extended to Dorothy Rose Bolger whose husband died on August 23rd.

Winifred Maud Wadbrook has a position in the medical office of the Pan American Airways at La Guardia Field.

1939

Barbara Cross Cone spent the summer at the Quantics Marine Base where Dr. Cone is stationed.

Helen W. Kemp has a position with the Chrysler Corporation as Industrial Nurse.

Jeanne R. Phillips is studying for her Bachelor of Science degree at the University of Texas. Her courses include Social Science and Psychology as well as two courses in Nursing Education.

1940

Alice Wetmore Potter has a position in Industrial Nursing on Long Island.

Reith Catherine Fitzgerald is instructor of Nursing Arts in the Holyoke Hospital, Holyoke, Massachusetts.

—OTHER NEWS—

Miss Athena Mesolora of Greece, who was a guest at Maxwell Hall in 1929, was paid high tribute in an article in the "Greek National Herald", August 4, 1941. Miss Mesolora was the director of the Red Cross Hospital in Athens, and directed the activities of the nurses under her in a very commendable manner following the Battle of Crete. She was imprisoned for "unco-operativeness" in caring for the wounded German soldiers. But the Greek people were so aroused by this action that the Leaders were forced to free Miss Mesolora and a colleague on the following day.

Miss Evelyn Agnes Robinson, an ex-member of the class of 1942, was married on September 27, 1941 to Mr. Roger E. Martin.

Salisbury, England
September 9, 1941.

Dear Miss Young:

We think of you innumerable times every day in every way. The idea of a uniform being a protection—an identification—well, we find that it most definitely is. It's compulsory to wear it whenever we go up to town and it has procured for us more assistance than we could ever dream of having. People over here have been simply wonderful.

You must wonder what the hospital is like. We were most impatient to get here. It's on the outskirts of the town, high on a hill. The chalky earth is trekked everywhere—it's on our shoes, on our clothes, and even in our hair. There are no patients as yet, some of the buildings are not yet complete. Hopes are high for the 22nd. You can well imagine how much there is to be done. It makes us think of your stories of packing boxes in Maxwell Hall "by Christmas."

Gertrude Shelley has been installed with Ada Timmer as painter, picture hanger, applicator maker. I've landed in the accounting department and I am beginning to appreciate the headache of Mr. Foz, our C.P.A. We have all we can do to keep ourselves in order so you can guess what he suffers trying to keep twenty-five of us up here, some in Bristol, several in St. Albans and a few in London; all because there is a monthly voucher to the Red Cross which we can scarcely keep straight. You would think it was simple, off hand.

Actually we are enjoying life very much. The food is very good, although such things as butter and sugar are rationed, but not painfully so, as yet. There is the most wonderful dietitian here. No one can figure out how she keeps all our ration cards straight, plans such good menus and keeps so cheerful, all at the same time.

The nurses in London are "Shelter crawling" or getting acquainted with the public health problems of a big, crowded city, associated with herding in these shelters.

About London, we had a few hours before getting the train to Salisbury. Miss Philips head of the A.R.C. "field unit" called for permission to go through St. Thomas' hospital. It is just as you've said, on the Thames, opposite Westminster Abbey, but there your description ends. Of course we know that three or four years ago you couldn't tell us we'd see it with the nun's home blown to bits—positively to dust, that several wings would be either completely demolished or at least with walls and ceilings caved in—huge holes where bombs have fallen through. We could hardly believe that this was "The St. Thomas's" our old tradition, our Nightingale's courage, it was partially damaged, but not completely, a bronze bust from their "Florence Nightingale room" has been preserved, so has a perfectly huge statue of her, which was formerly placed in the passage way, serenely looking down on all going on duty. To see how they've improvised in their basement, even to operating theaters, partitioned by curtains, made us realize how adaptable the staff must have been. One room reserved for extremely urgent situations, they call Sector. It takes little imagining to visualize a repetition of the original. The number of patients has actually been cut from seven hundred to seventy. It made us feel badly. At the same time we could hardly believe it, and pinching didn't help, Gertrude, Timmie and I, all three of us, walking up and down the steps of St. Thomas! We could hear you talking to us at every turn. Matron Helzer greeted us. Does that strike a familiar note?

Yesterday we went up to Basingstoke looking for a doctor for whom we had a letter. When we finally landed, the train was forty minutes late, we discovered some ten or fifteen hospitals. We chose the "General". No, our quarry wasn't there, but would we come in and have some tea? A wonderful institution this—tea. We've fallen into that habit with the greatest of pleasure, 3:30 tea time. We had a really good time with a most jolly matron. What do you think we found? "The American Hospital in Britain" Dr. Wilson's Orthopedic unit, beautiful, spacious grounds. Some of the nurses were asking for Miss Dwyer. In fact, it was such a pleasant day hunting that we hope we never track him down. It was a good day and we were glad to get "home" to Salisburg. Fortunately the moon was high. Everything must be done while "the moon is high" otherwise, with the blackout it's really necessary to be in by dark.

We had a letter from Shirley Ralph. She and Miss Weimer and Miss Reiss are at St. Bartholomews (Barts) but are looking forward to getting up here to start working in the unit.

Now I'm going out to master the intricacies of a bicycle. So far we have one among the three of us. They're at a premium.

ELEANOR F. UNGERLAND, '39.

[The following letter was received from one of our former general duty nurses, a graduate of Strong Memorial Hospital, who sailed on the same boat with Martha Reis, Marian Weimer, and Susan Ralph, all of the class of 1940.]

July 4th, 1941.
34 Cavendish Square,
London, England.

Dear "K" Easterners:

This is one Fourth of July that I will never forget—the day we landed on English soil after being on the water since June 11th. I hope this won't be censored too much. I can't give you many details but I think I can safely say that our boat was torpedoed and we had to take to life boats and leave practically everything behind but our passports and money. I was very lucky that the only thing wrong with me was wet feet. Unfortunately some of the others had a ducking in icy water (we were way up north). At practically the same time we were hit a (censored) beside us in the convoy blew up (also hit with a torpedo from the same "sub"). The force of the explosion shattered two of our life boats. One which they thought was all right began to fall apart after being in the water ten minutes or so. The thirty odd people in the boat naturally had a hard time. Most of them were rescued by the same ship (a Norwegian Tanker) as we were. There was a grand scramble as you can imagine for those of us who were dry to look after the others—drying them off, wrapping them in blankets and finding clothes. It was a strange group when fully clothed. The five girls who had a ducking were dressed in sailors clothes—most of them far too big. The men looked as though they were going to a masquerade, too. Although we had to live in our clothes and life belts all the time after being sunk, we really had a wonderful time on the Tanker. It was a beautiful new ship. We girls were given the Captain's quarters which consisted of a suite of four rooms furnished in excellent taste. The bathroom was large with a dream of a bath—so tantalizing because we couldn't take off our clothes to take a bath. Most of the men, the rest of the passengers, including those American Marines, an R.A.F. man, and two other men plus the officers from our first boat spent most of the time up with us listening to music, playing cards and dancing. The Captain of the Tanker was a young man of 32 who had been a Captain since he was 23. He was a very charming person with a grand sense of humor. He used to eat with us when he could come away from the bridge where he stayed most of the time as it was so dangerous. While we were in the submarine area we weren't allowed to use radios because of the electrical waves that would help a submarine locate a ship, so during that time we listened to his records on the victrola part of the radio. His collection was very large—Strauss, Brahms, Grieg, Wagner. On the last night on the water he gave us a special dinner party. The dining room was decorated with English, American, Norwegian and Dutch flags. The furniture which always was polished beautifully, gleamed, and as for the silver, it couldn't have been brighter. After a wonderful meal was served we sang practically every song that has ever been popular. The two captains, the one from our first ship and second, joining in with the rest. In fact, we even inveigled them to sing a duet (I can't think of any trip where we would have had such a chance to get well acquainted with the Captains). After that we had dancing but there was not much room, especially for old fashioned waltzes.

I'm telling you that nine of us girls who were rescued on that ship were completely spoiled by the attention we had. The ship had never had any passengers before and as for women—why they were practically unheard of. When we were being pulled on board, the Chief Steward, a rather excitable man rushed up to the bridge, and said, "Captain, there are women coming on the ship and they're coming in hordes!"

How the other passengers fared who were rescued by another ship we don't know except that they were taken back to Iceland, probably for extra food. It might have been to take a certain boy to a hospital, one of the marines who was badly hurt by flying shrapnel. They have not landed here yet.

Yesterday we landed at Avonmouth which is very close to Bristol. We were pampered and babied there by local Red Cross Authorities who gave us tea and paid our train fare to London. Certainly we never expected the reception we were to receive. Just as we were getting off the train a nice looking American with a slight southern drawl came up to us and said: "I'm Dr. Holly—please try to be as inconspicuous as possible" —here Miss Madley came rushing up—before we knew it dozens of camera men (and I'm not exaggerating, there must have been at least 15 or 20) hounded us to the taxis, taking shots, and asking if we would say something. This morning there were some pictures in the paper and a brief report of the "nine American heroines". Heroines!—Bah! We did nothing heroic. In spite of conflicting stories, everyone's thought was to save her own life. I'm telling you that some people are in their glory, telling the yarn. They were very disappointed that we couldn't get more publicity. As it is some of us have to go to a press conference this afternoon and the rest of us to broadcast. It's just my bad luck that I have to broadcast. I've felt simply swell all during the trip and didn't have anything the matter with me when other people had colds. Now that everything's over and I have a comfortable bed to sleep in I develop a cold in my nose and can't sleep because I miss the motion of the boat.

I borrowed this paper but hope I can get some today. If when you answer this you could send an extra sheet it would help. Paper is scarce.

I wish you could see us in our borrowed clothes.

How long we will stay in London I don't know. It doesn't seem possible that we are actually seeing the damage done in air raids. Everything is so quiet now.

Please write. It's so good to get letters.

NANCY HEBERDEN.

SCHOOL NEWS

THEY are here! All around Maxwell Hall we see new faces, hear new names. September 5 and 6 saw the arrival of 106 members of the Class of 1944. This, one of the largest preliminary class in the history of our school, is rapidly being assimilated in the scholastic, social, extra-curricular and athletic life of Maxwell Hall.

All the clubs and organizations report the greatest probie turnout in years. With such an incentive, is it any wonder there is a noticeable increase in activity here?

The social calendar for the Hall is full and interesting. First, among our varied events will be the annual Halloween Open House. This year it's to be an informal Barn dance with traditional apple ducking, cider, doughnuts, and—happy thought—popcorn and roasted apples prepared at our two fireplaces. The Social Committee, headed by Lois Perinchief is also working on plans for the first formal dance to be held November 28. Whether or not this will come during Thanksgiving Week as originally planned seems to depend entirely on Franklin Roosevelt and his decision regarding the date of Thanksgiving Day!

This year the Social Committee will include an affiliating student (changing at intervals). This is being tried in the attempt to make the affiliates feel more a part of the school while they are living with us.

The Glee Club will hold its first house event November 14 when it gives an all-Stephen Foster concert. It is rather a different type of program than those of the past and promises to be delightful.

One of the newest projects in the Hall has been the appointment of Dorothy Fearn as Athletic Chairman by the Student Council. We all need more of this type of thing but, as usual, do little about it unless someone arranges it for us. The tennis enthusiasts were especially excited over the tournament run for them this summer. The Athletic Chairman promises to run one scheduled event each week for us all. So far, bowling, ice skating, yes, and roller skating have been arranged. Next on the proposed list is a real hiking party. And, frankly, we wouldn't be surprised at anything arranged for us. Mere suggestion seems to bring a promise of whatever we desire.

Only 61 more days to Christmas, and the Dramatic Club has no intention of being caught shorthanded. Already they are hard at work on their holiday production. What the performance will be has not yet been announced.

Ohuivo Club, true to the meaning of its name, embraces all topics of general interest. Their first really important meeting will be the Open House for the entire Medical Center on November 6. At this time Dr. Storm of Arabia will speak on medical problems and practice he has encountered in his work there.

We began and now end with the probationers. Last, but not least, mention should be made of five new members of the Class of 1944. These students were members of the Red Cross Training Class held at Bryn Mawr this summer under the direction of Miss Conrad. We welcome them as members of our school and residents of our Hall.

MARTHA PEARSON, '42.
